BRITONS GO WILD OVER A. E. F., AS ALLIED FORCES IN EASTERN AREAS BLAST JAPANESE

Churchill Tells Commons Of Growing Allied Power

Prime Minister Makes Demand Parliament Vote Confidence in Government

Tells of Help

United States' Aid Is Given Big Play by Premier

London, Jan. 27 (AP)—Prime Minister Churchill presented Britain today with a picture of growing allied might and unity today and demanded that parliament vote confidence in his government.

Against his frank admission that bad news has come from the Pacific Ocean battlefront, he told the House of Commons:

United States troops which have landed in northern Ireland are only the vanguard of more to come;

United States fighter planes will help defend Britain against air assault;

United States bombers will join the R.A.F. in bombing Germany;

Considerable reinforcements have reached the Malayan front in the past week;

"We are taking many measures with the United States to increase the security of Australia and New Zealand, sending reinforcements, arms and equipment by the best routes."

"It is because I see the light gleaming behind the clouds and broadening upon our path," he said at the end of his candid report of the good and evil in Britain's war fortunes, "that I make so bold now as to demand a declaration of confidence of the House of Commons as an additional weapon in the armory of the united nations."

At the close of the war leader's speech, the House of Commons began debate on Britain's war direction which Churchill will wind up with a brief concluding speech this week.

The thunderous cheers that greeted his one hour and 24 minute accounting left no doubt how the House of Comons will vote when it finally puts the question of confidence to a test.

"We shall presently regain naval command of the Pacific and begin to establish effective superiority in the air," the prime minister predicted.

He pledged that the Malay peninsula and Singapore would be defended to the last inch and said he doubted that Japan would attempt an invasion of Australia—"a very ambitious overseas operation in the precarious and certainly limited time before the British and American navies regain, as they must regain, ultimate command of the Pacific."

"There is no question of regarding the Pacific war as a secondary operation," he added.

"The United States navy is linked in the most intimate union with the admiralty both in the Atlantic and the Pacific."

Although Churchill said he "must confess to feeling the weight of war upon me even more than in the tremendous summer days of 1940," he spoke with obvious confidence and appeared to be in high good humor.

He told one of the largest audiences ever to pack a Commons session that "I feel the broadening swell of victory and liberation bearing us and all tortured peoples onward safely, to the final goal."

Seats for the debate were at such a premium that several members had to sit on the floor of a low platform at one end of the chamber.

From her customary seat in the gallery, Mrs. Churchill leaned forward to listen intently to her husband's speech and his son Randolph, in army uniform, sat among his fellow Conservative members.

The prime minister divulged broad new plans for unifying war direction, bringing in Britain's dominions.

Besides a special council for the war in the Pacific to be set up in Washington or London, he announced that Britain had agreed to the requests of Australia for the right to membership in the war cabinet and that the same rights will be accorded New Zealand, Canada and South Africa.

Mentions Arrangements

Churchill also mentioned arrangements with President Roosevelt for a body in Washington to be called "the combined staff

Governor Recommends Huge Cut in Personal Tax Levies

Budget Totals

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 27 (AP).—New York state budget totals since Governor Lehman assumed office January 1, 1933:

1935-36— 298,463,679.
1936-37— 297,704,380.
1937-38— 400,969,842.
1938-39— 393,462,381.
1939-40— 391,730,241.
1940-41— 394,149,734.
1941-42— 385,711,098.
1942-43— 380,732,629 (proposed).

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 27 (AP)—Savings to New York taxpayers greater than a $40,600,000 personal income tax reduction proposed in Governor Lehman's new $380,732,629 State Budget were declared "very probable" today by Republican legislative leaders.

About $5,000,000 under the current budget and the lowest since the $298,000,000 appropriated in 1936-37, the new financial plan calls for cuts of 25 per cent in the personal income tax on 1941 income and 1942 income.

While expressing "much gratification" over "the governor's stand for economy," GOP majority leaders in both Senate and Assembly said they were determined to "lop off every nickel possible" in expectation of slashing the Democratic governor's budget for the fourth consecutive year—the year of the gubernatorial election.

The income tax reductions would cost the state treasury $18,000,000 before June 30 and $22,600,000 by the end of the following fiscal year. But these cuts would be absorbed by an estimated $43,000,000 surplus in 1943.

Bills to carry out the appropriation and tax program immediately were introduced in the legislature. All were referred to Republican-controlled committees as the majority leadership began the task of seeking additional reductions.

Effective in April

The Governor's cut in current income tax, proposed only as an emergency measure to run through the fiscal years of 1942 and 1943, will become effective in time to reduce payments due April 15 on 1941 calendar year incomes, if the Republican majority of the Legislature agress and cnacts it by that date.

Under the Governor's plan, the present tax rate would stand and the 25 per cent reduction would be taken from payments due.

Mr. Lehman advocated the tax reduction in lieu of suggested proposals for a deduction of Federal income taxes, which are certain to rocket, from the state income tax. Federal taxes cannot now be deducted from state returns. The Federal deduction plan, the Governor said, would benefit the rich man to the disadvantage of the man with a small income, while a perpendicular state cut would affect all proportionately.

Asks Quarterly Payments

The Governor also advocated in his message a plan to pay state income taxes in quarterly installments instead of, as at present, half in April and the rest in two installments in June and October.

Ecuador Threatens Trouble at Rio on Border Disputes

Final Session at Which Many Agreements Were to Be Published Is One of Suspense

Rio de Janeiro, Jan. 27 (AP)—The final session of the Pan American conference at which the many agreements of the foreign ministers were to have been signed was postponed today when Ecuador threatened a denunciation of Peru over their border differences and declared herself prepared to leave the conference.

The Ecuadorean minister to Rio de Janeiro, Enrique Arroyo Delgado, who is a member of his country's delegation, said: "Ecuador is ready to make a strong denunciation of Peru at the plenary session and leave the conference without signing the final accords."

As a consequence of the flare-up, Brazil's foreign minister, Oswaldo Aranha, chairman of the conference, hoping that a solution would be found before this evening, postponed the plenary session until tomorrow.

Some progress in this direction was made soon after the postponement, for mediators announced that a virtual agreement in the controversy had been reached.

The plenary session, scheduled for 11 a. m. today was postponed until 6 p. m. and the ceremonial closing was changed from 6 p. m. today to 6 p. m. tomorrow.

Meanwhile mediators pored over a mass of maps and documents in an effort to find a satisfactory solution to the century-old dispute over a section of coastal territory and Amazon jungle which has plagued the conference from the beginning.

Just before this hitch, events

Mozhaisk Captor Tells World Reds Are Real Fighters

Artillery, Bayonet Work Cause Hasty German Retreat; Nazis Do Not Know U. S. Is Foe

With the Red Army on the Central front, Jan. 27 (AP)—All is definitely not quiet on Russia's western front and the blue eyes of Lieut. Gen. Leonid Govorov were cold when he was asked why Adolf Hitler's invasion army was withdrawing.

"It's important that your part of the world finds out," he said, "that the Red army is the first army to make the German army retreat—and in haste."

The 45-year-old conqueror of Mozhaisk went on to list reasons. He declared the Russians have superiority in artillery, both in quality and numbers; the Russians are traditionally good bayonet fighters and the Germans are not; British tanks are being used to good effect; the Red air force is active in offensive operations.

"Not one time," he asserted, "have the Germans withstood a bayonet charge."

The general discounted below zero weather as a major factor, but said overconfidence had caused the Germans to pay insufficient attention to their rear and "there is considerable weakness about German fortifications."

One among nine shoddy-looking German prisoners supplied another idea in an interview, drawing a green Russian propaganda leaflet from a pocket.

"We think the war has gone on long enough," he said.

The prisoners looked amazed when they were told Germany and the United States are at war.

"We were captured January 24,"

Three Anglo-American War Boards Created

White House Announces Groups Will Work to Assure Full Use of Arms, Shipping and Raw Materials

Washington, Jan. 27 (AP).—The creation of three new British-American war boards to assure the most efficient utilization of munitions, shipping, and raw materials was announced today by the White House.

The arrangement contemplates pooling the "entire munition resources of Great Britain and the United States," the pooling in principle of their shipping resources, and a "planned and expeditious utilization" of raw materials.

(The British government announced the following heads of the war boards:

(Combined war materials board: Washington, William L. Batt; United Kingdom, Sir Clive Bailleau; London, Lord Beaverbrook.)

While membership on the boards is reserved for Americans and Britons, the new agencies are to collaborate with others of the united nations.

Formation of the boards was announced simultaneously here and in London. Apparently the boards grew out of the recent conversations in Washington between President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill.

The White House announcment said there was to be an interchange of the "fullest information" on munitions. Committees will be formed here and in London under the combined chiefs of staff in a manner similar to the Southwest Pacific agreement.

"These committees," the statement asserted, "will advise on all assignments both in quantity and priority, whether to Great Britain and the United States or other of the United Nations in accordance with strategic needs."

A civilian chairman will be nam-

Reds Flank Nazis In Howling Storm

German Winter Line Is Threatened at Anchor, Near Latvia

Russia's triumphant armies pressed a series of deadly flanking thrusts today against Adolf Hitler's headquarters at Smolensk, 210 miles west of Moscow, and advanced through a howling blizzard to threaten the German winter-line anchor at Velikie Luki, only 80 miles from the Latvian frontier.

Front-line dispatches said the recapture of German-held Rzhev, 130 miles northwest of Moscow, was "expected any minute" and that heavy Soviet pressure was being exerted against Orel, 200 miles southwest of Moscow, and against Belgorod, at the north end of the Donets river industrial basin.

On the North African front, British headquarters indicated that Imperial desert fighters had stiffened against the counter-offensive of Gen. Erwin Rommel's Axis armies after falling back 80 miles northeast of Agedabia.

Barham Is Lost

The London admiralty acknowledged the loss of the 31,000-ton British battleship Barham, which the Axis long had claimed as sunk in the Mediterranean. The loss cut Britain's capital ships to 12 and was the fifth sunk.

British airmen struck into Germany again during the night, German officials admitting that they bombed several northern towns and reporting they reached the outer districts of Berlin. A British source said, however, that Berlin was not among the RAF's night objectives.

A Berlin announcement said three raiders were shot down.

Soviet Russia reported continued progress in the Red army's drive to the west, with recapture of a number of additional villages and towns and slaying of 1,340 Germans in action on the southern front alone.

Two Axis transports and an escort ship were declared by Soviet information bureau to have been sunk in the Barents Sea by a Red navy submarine, following up the sinking of three other transports in those arctic waters in the preceding 48 hours.

Second A. E. F. Is Busy at Bases in Northern Ireland

Soldiers Work Out Sea Legs and Are Quartered in Pre-Fabricated Huts Taken From U. S.

With the A.E.F. in northern Ireland, Jan. 27 (AP)—Weary United States soldiers—vanguard of a second A.E.F.—worked the kinks out of cramped muscles today in camps constructed by American technicians who have been working here for eight months.

In good spirits after an uneventful Atlantic crossing under the protecting guns of the U. S. and British navies, the troops—several thousand strong—found everything in readiness to receive them when they landed yesterday amid cheers and martial music.

The billets to which they were whisked away by train and motor transport were no makeshift affairs. On the contrary their quarters proved to be sturdy insulated huts, erected of prefabricated parts brought from the United States and designed especially to withstand the cold and frequent rains of northern Ireland.

The construction work was carried out under the lease-lend act.

While the setting was new, the wartime crossing of the Atlantic and the debarkation were an old story to many of the officers and non-commissioned officers, who landed on these shores nearly 25 years ago as members of A.E.F. number one.

Mingled with the World War veterans and seasoned regular army men were numerous draftees. All were fresh from southern maneuvers which had hardened and welded them into a single fighting unit.

Censorship forbids mentioning the size of the unit or its identity, but the official announcement issued in London said it included "several thousand men of an infantry division."

"They are combat troops with the usual components of field artillery," the statement added.

U.S. Planes, Subs Slash At Armada

Heavy Japanese Warship Is Sunk in Straits of Macassar; Foe Is Hit in Philippines

Japanese Score

Advance of 12 Miles Is Credited to Japs in Malaya

By ROGER D. GREENE
(Associated Press War Editor)

American battle forces dominated the news on far-flung war fronts today as Britons wildly cheered the arrival of a second A.E.F. vanguard in northern Ireland, and, halfway around the world, U. S. planes and submarines slashed at the remnants of a once-powerful Japanese invasion armada off Dutch Borneo.

In the Philippines two American pursuit planes shot down two Rising Sun dive-bombers and disabled a third in the last 24 hours, and American torpedo-boats engaged a formation of dive-bombers, hitting three.

In the great American-Dutch naval victory off Borneo, N. E. I. accounts claimed only 28 Japanese ships sunk or heavily damaged and 13 Japanese warplanes downed. American accounts listed six other ships less heavily damaged.

Pressing home Japan's first major defeat in the seven-weeks-old conflict, American and Dutch forces already had sunk or damaged 34 Japanese warships and troop transports in the shark-infested Strait of Macassar. The running battle continued into its fifth day today.

In addition, dispatches from Batavia said another heavy Japanese warship, believed to be a battleship, was sunk in Macassar Strait.

Imperial Tokyo headquarters acknowledged that four Japanese transports were lost in a battle last Friday during landing operations at Balik Papan, rich oil center on the east coast of Dutch Borneo, facing Macassar Strait.

A Tokyo bulletin said Japanese warships escorting the transports clashed with Allied destroyers, submarines and aircraft, and sank one of the attacking submarines.

The Dutch already had destroyed the Balik Papan oil fields in pursuance of a "scorched earth" policy.

On the Malayan front, the critical battle for Singapore raged with heightening fury as Japanese troops scored a 12-mile advance on the west coast and bitter fighting developed at Senggarang, only 48 miles north of Singapore.

Front-line dispatches said the key rail and highway town of Kluang, 50 miles above Singapore, had apparently fallen. The British acknowledged fighting south of there.

Balancing reverses in Malaya, the arrival of American troops in the United Kingdom and official disclosure that United States bombers would join the R.A.F. in blasting Germany brightened the outlook for the United Nations.

In England, the cry spread like wildfire:

"The Yanks are here!"

Immediately, the British radio laid down the heaviest propaganda barrage of the war, broadcasting in a multitude of languages that American troops had landed and emphasized that the United States sent approximately 2,000,000 men across the Atlantic during the World War I

This time, the broadcast said, the flow of American fighting men is starting much faster.

Spectators jammed the streets as the troops marched out on the dockyard after a brief official greeting, swinging along with full battle kit to the strains of "Marching Through Georgia."

The contingent, commanded by Maj. Gen. Russell P. Hartle, was described officially as "combat troops . . . several thousand strong."

On the American home front a German comunique asserted that Nazi U-boats preying on ships off the United States and Canadian coasts had sunk 12 more merchant vessels totalling 103,000 tons—obviously a propaganda exaggeration.

"Since their first appearance off the shores of the western Atlantic, our U-boats have sunk 30 enemy merchant ships aggregating 228,000 tons," a special bulletin from Adolf Hitler's headquarters boasted.

Seven ships officially have been

Churchill Faces Commons in Trying Moment Over His Conduct of War

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Wide World War Analyst)

The measure of British Premier Churchill's leadership was put to the test today when he faced a critical House of Commons, with a considerable public clamor for sweeping cabinet changes ringing in his ears, and demanded a vote of confidence to determine whether his government was to continue in office or receive a death sentence.

Under normal circumstances Churchill had more than enough backing to ensure a favorable vote. Still it was a trying moment, and one which depended in no small degree on his adroitness in meeting the heavy criticism and in guiding the debate. Certainly it represented his greatest political crisis since he took office.

While there is no parallel, there must have passed through his mind the fall of the great Asquith from the premiership in May of 1915, to make way for Lloyd George, because of dissatisfaction with the manner in which the World War was being prosecuted. Few wars start off well for the defenders, and political and military heads have to face the music. Still, Churchill's position has been far stronger than Asquith's and likely he wasn't unduly worried.

The Premier met the attack more than half-way, as is his custom. His tactics were disclosed in an early, grim explanation of his stand.

"It is because things have gone badly, and worse is yet to come, that I demand a vote of confidence," he declared.

That is to say, he refused to bribe parliament with promises,

FRENCH SCUTTLE FLEET AT TOULON AS NAZIS SEIZE BIG NAVAL BASE

Red Attack Is Praised By Stimson

Secretary of War Has Opinion Germans Sustain Serious Setback

Smash Is Due

Allies Are Preparing Final Smash at Axis in Africa

Washington, Nov. 27 (AP)—Reviewing Allied offensives on fronts around the world, Secretary of War Stimson today said the Russian counterattack against German siege forces was "particularly remarkable" with every indication that the Germans had suffered a major reverse.

In North Africa, the secretary told his press conference, British-American and French forces in Tunisia were gathering their strength for a final smash at strongly held Axis positions, while Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's fleeing Africa Corps was expected to make a determined stand at El Agheila in Libya.

The Australian and American troops under General Douglas MacArthur have "cornered" a considerable number of Japanese in a pocket on the northern coast of New Guinea, Stimson said, and the feat of MacArthur's troops in fighting their way through the dense jungles was "one of the outstanding operations of the war."

Stimson said the Germans were believed to have between 12,000 and 15,000 troops occupying a strip 30 to 35 miles along the Gulf of Tunis, including the cities of Bizerte, Tunis, Sfax and Gabes, all of which have excellent airports.

The Axis appeared to have brought in about one division by air from France, Italy and Sicily, and some Italian troops also arrived from Tripoli, while a relatively small number of Italians was brought in by destroyer, he said.

The mountainous terrain of Tunisia, the secretary commented, is favorable for defense, but the Allied command is now building up an assault force.

The Germans are occupying strong positions, Stimson said, and a stiff fight may be expected before the troops under British Lieutenant General K. A. N. Anderson succeed in driving the Axis out of Tunisia.

This final assault, the secretary said, involves the organization of large scale movements of men and supplies for several hundred miles from Algeria, and these efforts are subject to frequent aerial attack by the Axis from Sicily and Sardinia. In addition to usual bombing, he said, Axis planes have been dropping thousands of pyramidal spikes designed to puncture the tires of airplanes and motor vehicles, and also have been scattering so-called booby bombs—such as wallets, watches, notebooks and clocks, which explode when they are picked up.

The Allied forces, he said, have received excellent cooperation from all elements of the French in North Africa.

The secretary said that the British 8th Army's pursuit of Rommel in Libya had been retarded somewhat by adverse weather, with heavy rains interfering with motor supply movements and air operations. He said it was probable that the Germans had a considerable quantity of supplies of all kinds in the vicinity of El Agheila where a narrow strip between the sea and the salt marshes provides an excellent defensive spot.

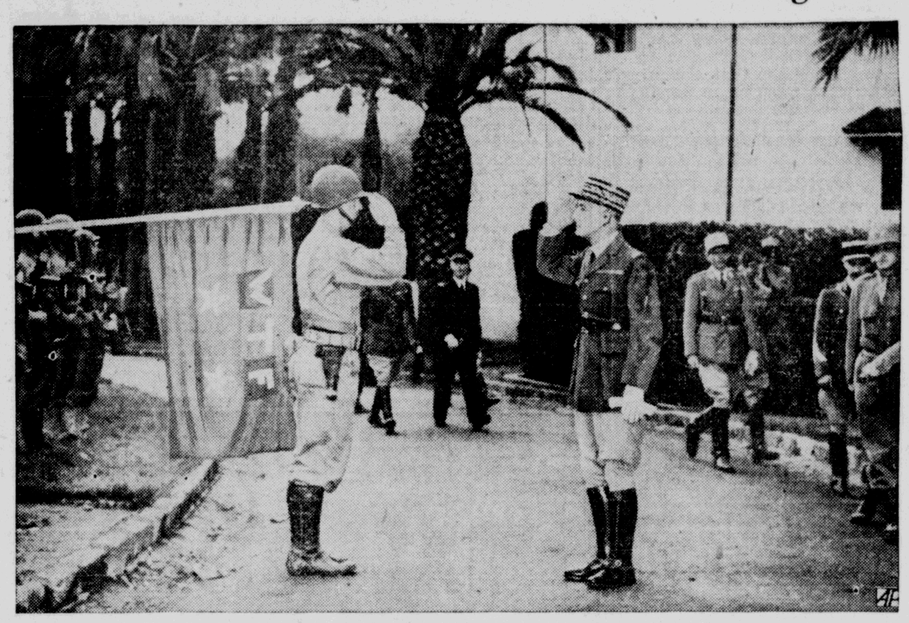

The situation in the Solomon islands, Stimson said, had been altered considerably by Admiral Halsey's "remarkable victory," but a considerable struggle was ahead before the Japs were driven off Guadalcanal. And in all probability the Japs would strike again in the Solomon area.

Winter weather has interfered to a large degree with operations in the Aleutions, he said, but American fliers "are taking advantage of every good day to make the Japs at Kiska as uncomfortable as possible."

Farmers, War Workers Will Get Gasoline

Dr. Schairer Will Speak Tuesday

Former German Educator Now Lectures on Menace of Nazi Domination

Dr. Reinhold Schairer, director of research of the U. S. committee on Educational Reconstruction, will be in Kingston next Tuesday. Dr. Schairer has visited Kingston once before, as the guest of Robert Service, a personal friend and his colleague in the field of education. Mr. Service at that time persuaded the doctor to speak to the Kiwanis Club here, and the members were so impressed by his startling revelations on Nazi plans, that they persuaded him to return on December 1, for a lecture to the public at the high school auditorium.

Dr. Schairer is best known as the man who first recognized the menace of Naziism. In 1933, six years before Europe felt it necessary to "appease" Hitler, Dr. Schairer left his native Germany to try to make the world recognize Hitler as the dangerous man he later proved to be. Dr. Schairer at that time was heading the educational system in Republican Germany, and his defiance cost him not only his high position in his own country, but also placed his life in immediate danger. His labors in the interest of universal democracy have placed him high on the list of men most dangerous to the success of the Axis plan for world domination.

In addition to being a distinct contribution to the culture of the community, this lecture will benefit local charities, as all proceeds are to be divided among the Citizen's Committee, which purchases going-away gifts for each group

Jeffers Informs Senate Investigators Nation's Gas Rationing Is Imperative

Washington, Nov. 27 (AP)—Farmers and war workers will be allowed necessary gasoline to meet their needs, Rubber Administrator William M. Jeffers told Senate investigators today in reiterating that immediate nationwide rationing was "an absolute necessity."

Jeffers went to Capitol Hill backed by President Roosevelt's order of yesterday that nationwide gasoline rationing should go into effect December 1 to conserve rubber, despite protests from Congress members.

Jeffers said the production of synthetic rubber was clouded by "ifs" including a big "if" in regard to "the success of the processes and the size and continuity of output."

He added:

"While all the experiments are good, and the outlook is reasonably bright, I deem it plain common sense at a time like this to err on the side of conservatism."

President Roosevelt's order left congressional opponents of rationing with the alternative of giving up the fight or carrying it to the floor of Congress.

They hurriedly called a meeting to decide whether to proceed with legislation that would stay rationing by statute for from 90 days to six months but privately they expressed belief that there was little they could do.

A special Senate war investigating committee, seeking to develop "the facts on both sides of the rationing issue," called Petroleum Coordinator Harold L. Ickes, Rubber Administrator William M. Jeffers, Price Administrator Leon Henderson and Transportation Director Joseph Eastman before it today.

The committee planned to go to Kansas City next week to hear

Resort Publicity For Ulster County Helps Business

Committee Gives Its First Annual Report; Requests Larger Appropriation for Ensuing Year

Publicity given Ulster county as a resort locality, through the $1,000 appropriation made last year by the Board of Supervisors, was so successful that the members of the Ulster County Publicity Committee in its first annual report to the board, made Wednesday evening, recommended that the appropriation be increased to $2,500 for the ensuing year in order that a year round program of publicity may be provided for.

The committee, with Jacob H. Rogers chairman, reported that many inquiries had been made, following publicity in metropolitan newspapers and that boarding housekeepers had reported increased business and had asked for a continuation of the effort to publicize the county as a resort area. Twenty-six letters were filed with the board from various associations and individuals in the county, asking that the service be extended and commenting upon the favorable work of the past season.

The committee held its meeting on May 14, last, and discussed means of publicizing the county as a resort section. Following that, advertisements were carried in five metropolitan papers advertising the advantages of Ulster county and calling attention in particular to the closeness of the area to metropolitan New York and the transportation facilities available. Gasoline rationing made motor car travel difficult and this made more summer guests patronize near-by places. The report of the committee stated that the movement had come at an opportune time and had been successful in calling that attention of New Yorkers to this area.

In addition to the advertising program, 20,000 folders were printed and distributed through transportation, and travel facilities. Among the concerns were bus lines, railroads and the Hudson River Day Line, all of which have a travel bureau center for the convenience of the public. It was reported that local newspapers had cooperated by publishing 110 articles and editorials. Through the cooperation of Senator Arthur H. Wicks, three pages of text on Ulster county were contained in the official New York State Vacation booklet, together with a dozen local pictures of vacationland scenes. Trailways published an article in the bus line's publication and the Central Hudson Gas and Electric Corporation, in addition to cooperating as an information center, also published articles. The company's large display window on central Broadway was devoted to a showing in behalf of the movement.

The report stated that in addition, supervisors in the various towns had procured from local boarding housekeepers and hotelmen, folders which could be sent to those who made specific in-

Former West Point Football Coach Is Hero of Burning Bomber, Saves Eight

By TOM YARBROUGH

Advance Base in the Solomons Area, Nov. 21 —(Delayed)—(AP)—Three days ago, Col. Laverne G. (Blondy) Saunders, of Aberdeen, S. D., former West Point football line coach, took the controls of a burning bomber.

The pilot was dead. The copilot was dying. The bomber was in the midst of a swarm of Zeros over a Japanese base on Bougainville Island in the Solomons.

Today, Colonel Saunders is back on the job as usual in command of all heavy bombers on this base.

His forehead is bandaged; his left hand is slightly cut; and he still is feeling bruises from head to foot—"worse than after the first day of scrimmage."

His head was cut when he banged into the windshield putting the plane down on the water at 95 miles an hour.

By an outstanding piece of flying, he saved himself and the remaining seven members of the crew, crash landing the bomber beside a tiny island deep in enemy territory.

A navy rescue plane picked them up the next day.

They had started out last Wednesday morning. The raid was a coordinated attack on ships in Shortland harbor of the southern tip of Bougainville. Direct hits were scored on two large cargo ships and a total of 17 Zeros was shot down. The colonel's plane was the only one lost.

Colonel Saunders makes a practice of going out with his bombers every now and then. Once before,

Germans May Put Up Death Battle At Gulf of Sirte

By DeWITT MACKENZIE

Somewhere in Libya, Nov. 26 (Delayed) (AP)—Marshal Rommel is likely to try to recoup the fallen fortunes of himself and master by making a stand at El Agheila, on the great Gulf of Sirte.

No one here doubts the determination of the Germans to pay any price in blood in an effort to maintain a foothold in North Africa—for this is essential to control of the Mediterranean. Without that domination Hitler can no longer even hope for victory in the European war.

How much of a stand Rommel can make at strategic El Agheila must depend as I see on two things:

Whether Axis forces in Tunisia can hold Bizerte and Tunis against the allied offensive from the west.

What striking power remains in Rommel's army. He has suffered huge losses in men and materiel and the troops have been run ragged by the speed of a retreat of more than 500 miles that, in the early stages, was a debacle.

The greatest danger to the Axis undoubtedly lies in the threat to Bizerte and Tunis.

If these two strong positions should fall, the defenders would have to retire in the hope of making a junction with Rommel, presumably at Tripoli, thus consolidating all the Axis strength of North Africa. Such a contingency likely would force the marshal to abandon the idea of holding El Agheila and make a dash for Tripoli forthwith.

What strength Rommel can muster for the defense of El Agheila is a matter of speculation. It seems to me it must depend in a large degree on how much help Hitler can manage to deliver to his captain through the tough allied sea and air blockade.

If the Nazi marshal must depend on the resources which he brought through with him on the mad race from El Alamein, then he undoubtedly will be in a difficult position. The fine fighting machine which he commanded a few short weeks ago before his debacle has suffered serious damage.

Apart from the 75,000 men Rommel lost in casualties and prisoners, his sacrifice in tanks, warplanes and other equipment has been colossal.

Trip Reveals Losses

I have just had a remarkable demonstration of the materiel losses in an unforgettable air trip over the line of his retreat.

There, scrawled across the sands and over the escarpments of the desert, was the story of one of the great routs of military history. It was pictured in the shattered hulks of warplanes, tanks and motor transport and in the mountains of supplies abandoned in the frenzied rush to escape. Here and there it was emphasized by enclosures within which stood rows of new white crosses—markers for sacrificial offerings to Hitler's ambition.

We got away from Cairo in a British bomber just as the first rays of the fast climbing sun laid a dash of crimson along the eastern horizon of the great Nile delta. There were ten passengers and a crew of three, making a much debated total of 13.

It appeared that one passenger was missing, as was brought out in an animated exchange between the sergeant in charge of loading the plane and the driver of the motor bus which brought us to the airport.

"I was told to collect 10 bodies," declared the cockney driver defensively, "and 'ere they are as per specifications."

"Ten, eh?" responded the sergeant. "My list calls for 11 cadavers. I'm going to call the roll."

He ticked off our names as we answered. A major was missing.

"One cadaver short," commented the sergeant without rancor. "We will fly the kite without him."

Our big bomber took to the air and roared off toward the blue Mediterranean.

I was the only civilian aboard. The handsome young New Zealand flying officer beside me noted the American insignia on my war correspondent's uniform.

"I came across your country on my way here," he offered with engaging friendliness. "It's a great country. My fiancee works in Washington and I'm going there

Town Expense Budgets Are Given to Supervisors

Previous Plan of Approving Township Expenditures in Separate Manner Is Now Superseded by Law

Budgets for town expenses in all of the 20 towns of the county were presented Wednesday evening to the Board of Supervisors for approval by the board as provided by the new law which becomes effective January 1, and which places all towns under a budget system.

In the past, various town expenditures have been approved by the board in piecemeal fashion, separate resolutions being necessary for each type of expenditure. Under the new law the town board makes up its budget, presents it to the town clerk and holds a public hearing. After the public hearing a budget is approved by the town board and then at the annual session of the Board of Supervisors that budget is presented by the town supervisor of the official county approval.

Under the new system of town budget, all salaries are fixed by the town board and various town officials who formerly were under a fee system come under a straight salary.

The 20 budgets were presented Wednesday evening for approval, with the accompanying resolution, and the matter went over under the rule until the session this evening when a vote for adoption will be called for. The budgets, with the resolutions for adoption, follows:

Resolution of Board of Supervisors levying taxes and assessments required for purposes of annual budgets of the towns of Ulster county.

Whereas, there has been presented to this Board of Supervisors a duly certified copy of the annual budget of each of the several towns in the county of Ulster for the fiscal year beginning January 1, 1943; now, therefore, be it

Resolved, that there shall be and hereby is assessed and levied upon and collected from the taxable real property situated in the following named towns outside of any incorporated village wholly or partially located therein, the amounts indicated below for the Highway Fund (Item 1) and for health purposes, as specified in the budgets of the respective towns as follows:

Town	Highway Fund Item 1, (for the building, rebuilding of roads, sluices under three feet, etc.)	Health Purposes, (Expenses town health doctor, etc.)	Total
Denning	$ 7,000.00	$ 105.00	$ 7,105.00

Substantial Reduction Is Foreshadowed in Budget

Present indications point to a substantial reduction in the annual budget which will be adopted by the Ulster County Board of Supervisors, now in annual session. From present indications the budget may be nearly 25 per cent under the $880,000 budget which was adopted last year.

This reduction in the budget will be principally due to decreased highway expenditures caused by the war emergency which has halted new highway construction.

In all probability the highway budget which will be offered this year will be about $285,000 less than the budget adopted last year but this will probably not represent a saving of that amount to the taxpayers since certain welfare expenditures have taken an upward turn. Present indications point to a total county budget of approximately $175,000 to $200,000 less than last year. This will give a total county budget of between $600,000 and $700,000.

Because of the impossibility of getting materials for new highway construction due to the war, there will be no appropriation for bridges, no new highway construction and no money will be raised for purchase of rights of way. From the unexpended balance in the highway fund appropriated last year transfers will be made for snow removal and a sufficient balance is now on hand for any rights of way purchases required on 1943. At the last meeting $50,000 was transferred from the unexpended highway funds for snow removal.

The highway budget has not been presented as yet to the board but indications point to a reduction in that budget of about $285,000 over the 1942 budget.

If the highway budget is reduced by approximately $285,000 as anticipated, and other expenditures such as Old Age Pensions go up approximately $100,000, there will still be a total reduction in the county budget of something like $175,000 to $200,000 bringing

Oil Consumers Who Would Convert Are Asked to Place Coal Orders at Once

Washington, Nov. 27 (AP)—Industrial, commercial and domestic fuel oil consumers who plan to convert their facilities to coal were advised to place their coal orders now to assure getting supplies.

Emphasizing that oil pipelines under construction or in prospect would do "comparatively little to solve oil shortage problems this winter," Petroleum Coordinator Harold L. Ickes noted that railroad tank car shipment to the east were far below the hoped-for 900,000-barrel daily mark.

"We cannot guarantee any specific number of tank cars being moved to this area daily," he added.

He said only 27,000,000 barrels of industrial fuel oils and 4,203,750 barrels of home heating oils were being saved annually in the east by conversions to date to other fuels, while surveys showed conversions could save 57,969,000 barrels of industrial fuel oils and 35,625,000 barrels of home heating oils.

Meanwhile, the Office of Price Administration reported a revision of price regulations covering parts for converting oil-fired heating burners to hand-fired coal which it said would mean an average increase of $1.50 to $2 per householder for needed parts.

OPA said the revision was made to take care of increased costs, 'reflecting freight charges at the manufacturer's level and relieving the sqeeze on the wholesale and retail levels," of the growing conversion industry.

Nazis Use 'Plot' Idea For Excuse

France Comes Under Same Category as Five Other European Nations

HitlerGivesOrders

Fuehrer Gives Order to Seize Base, D. N. B. Reports

By ROGER D. GREENE
(Associated Press War Editor

Defiant French seamen were reported to have scuttled the entire Franch naval squadron of 62 warships at Toulon today as Adolf Hitler, ruthlessly crushing the last of France's free homeland under the Nazi boot, seized the big Franch naval base after overcoming resistance.

A Vichy broadcast said German troops marched into Toulon at 4 o'clock this morning.

"By orders of Admiral La Borde, vessels of the French squadron at Toulon scuttled themselves," the broadcast said.

"At 10 a. m., there was not one vessel afloat."

The German high command said merely that "Part" of the squadron had been sent to the bottom by their French crews as Axis troops moved in to thwart an alleged plot for the fleet to escape to the allies.

Thus Hitler trampled another solemn pledge into the dust, putting all France in the same category of conquered nations as Norway, Belgium, Holland, Greece and Yugoslavia.

The last thin veil of "Collaboration" between Vichy and Berlin was ripped aside to the crackle of gunfire by stout-hearted French troops warships in Toulon harbor.

Sixty-two French warships, including three battleships, are based at Toulon.

The German high command said Hitler and Premier Mussolini ordered the occupation "to prevent the French Mediterranean fleet from putting to sea as planned" and that in addition "unsure contingents of the French army" would be demobilized.

A Vichy broadcast said Hitler had ordered the immediate demobilization of all French naval and army forces and had placed Field Marshal Gerd Von Rundstedt in supreme command in France.

The broadcast quoted Hitler's letter to old Marshal Philippe Petain as saying:

"On Nov. 12, 1942, orders were given by French authorities to the defenses at Toulon not to open fire in the event of an Anglo-American landing in this town. Existence of this order has been proved."

The communique said German and Italian troops "nipped in the bud the resistance of elements instigated by Anglo-Saxon influence which flared up at isolated points and in a few hours carried out their allotted tasks.

"Part of the French fleet has scuttled itself in spite of the counter-order of the French (Vichy) government."

DNB, the official German news agency, said Hitler himself gave the order which sent German troops marching into the base last night.

A German communique said the coup was effected "to protect this region against further violation by the British and American aggressors" following the Anglo-American offensive in North Africa.

Toulon lies across the Mediterranean from Tunisia, where U. S. Army and British troops were now driving a wedge between Axis-held Tunis and Bizerte.

The French were previously reported to have declared they would defend the base against "all aggression" and Hitler himself had set Toulon aside as a special unoccupied zone when the German army swept into the former free part of France on November 11.

The new move, violating still another of Hitler's pledges, apparently meant that Germany was either preparing to seize powerful remnants of the French fleet at Toulon or mistrusted the French.

D.N.B., resorting to the familiar Nazi explanation for many of Hitler's sudden betrayals, declared:

"This step has been taken to forestall the treacherous action of certain circles connected with the De Gaullist (Fighting French)

FRENCH SCUTTLE FLEET AT TOULON AS NAZIS SEIZE BIG NAVAL BASE

Red Attack Is Praised By Stimson

Secretary of War Has Opinion Germans Sustain Serious Setback

Allies Are Preparing Final Smash at Axis in Africa

Washington, Nov. 27 (AP)—Reviewing Allied offensives on fronts around the world, Secretary of War Stimson today said the Russian counterattack against German siege forces was "particularly remarkable" with every indication that the Germans had suffered a major reverse.

In North Africa, the secretary told his press conference, British-American and French forces in Tunisia were gathering their strength for a final smash at strongly held Axis positions, while Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's fleeing Africa Corps was expected to make a determined stand at El Agheila in Libya.

The Australian and American troops under General Douglas MacArthur have "cornered" a considerable number of Japanese in a pocket on the northern coast of New Guinea, Stimson said, and the feat of MacArthur's troops in fighting their way through the dense jungles was "one of the outstanding operations of the war."

Stimson said the Germans were believed to have between 12,000 and 15,000 troops occupying a strip 30 to 35 miles along the Gulf of Tunis, including the cities of Bizerte, Tunis, Sfax and Gabes, all of which have excellent airports.

The Axis appeared to have brought in about one division by air from France, Italy and Sicily, and some Italian troops also arrived from Tripoli, while a relatively small number of Italians was brought in by destroyer, he said.

The mountainous terrain of Tunisia, the secretary commented, is favorable for defense, but the Allied command is now building up an assault force.

The Germans are occupying strong positions, Stimson said, and a stiff fight may be expected before the troops under British Lieutenant General K. A. N. Anderson succeed in driving the Axis out of Tunisia.

This final assault, the secretary said, involves the organization of large scale movements of men and supplies for several hundred miles from Algeria, and these efforts are subject to frequent aerial attack by the Axis from Sicily and Sardinia. In addition to usual bombing, he said, Axis planes have been dropping thousands of pyramidal spikes designed to puncture the tires of airplanes and motor vehicles, and also have been scattering so-called booby bombs—such as wallets, watches, notebooks and clocks, which explode when they are picked up.

The Allied forces, he said, have received excellent cooperation from all elements of the French in North Africa.

The secretary said that the British 8th Army's pursuit of Rommel in Libya had been retarded somewhat by adverse weather, with heavy rains interfering with motor supply movements and air operations. He said it was probable that the Germans had a considerable quantity of supplies of all kinds in the vicinity of El Agheila where a narrow strip between the sea and the salt marshes provides an excellent defensive spot.

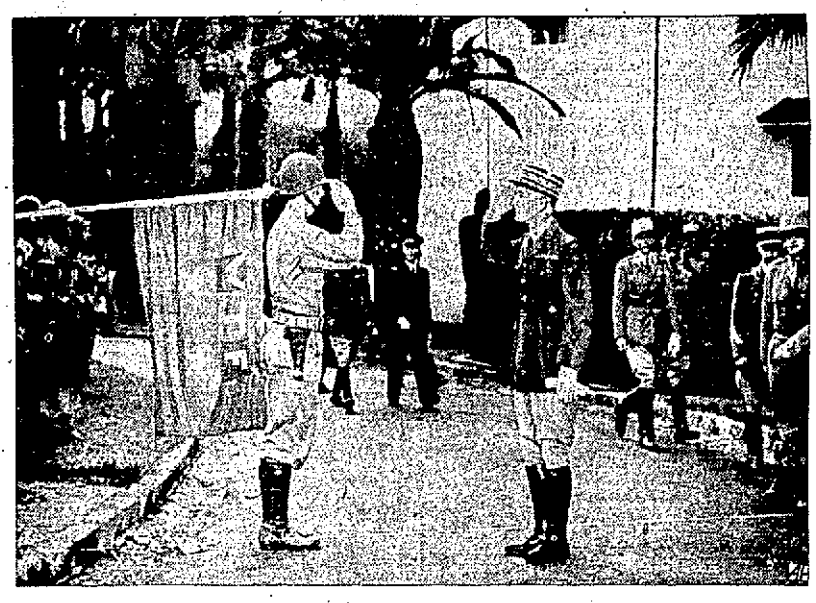

The situations in the Solomon Islands, Stimson said, had been altered considerably by Admiral Halsey's "remarkable victory," but a considerable struggle was ahead before the Japs were driven off Guadalcanal. And in all probability the Japs would strike again in the Solomon area.

Winter weather has interfered to a large degree with operations in the Aleutians, he said, but American fliers "are taking advantage of every good day to make the Japs at Kiska as uncomfortable as possible."

Farmers, War Workers Will Get Gasoline

Jeffers Informs Senate Investigators Nation's Gas Rationing Is Imperative

Washington, Nov. 27 (AP)—Farmers and war workers will be allowed necessary gasoline to meet their needs, Rubber Administrator William M. Jeffers told Senate investigators today in reiterating that immediate nationwide rationing was "an absolute necessity."

Jeffers went to Capitol Hill backed by President Roosevelt's order of yesterday that nationwide gasoline rationing should go into effect December 1 to conserve rubber, despite protests from Congress members.

Jeffers said the production of synthetic rubber was clouded by "ifs" including a big "if" in regard to "the success of the processes and the size and continuity of output."

He added:

"While all the experiments are good, and the outlook is reasonably bright, I deem it plain common sense at a time like this to err on the side of conservatism."

President Roosevelt's order left congressional opponents of rationing with the alternative of giving up the fight or carrying it to the floor of Congress.

They hurriedly called a meeting to decide whether to proceed with legislation that would stay rationing by statute for from 90 days to six months but privately they expressed belief that there was little they could do.

A special Senate war investigating committee, seeking to develop "the facts on both sides of the rationing issue," called Petroleum Coordinator Harold L. Ickes, Rubber Administrator William M. Jeffers, Price Administrator Leon Henderson and Transportation Director Joseph Eastman before it today.

The committee planned to go to Kansas City next week to hear

Dr. Schairer Will Speak Tuesday

Former German Educator Now Lectures on Menace of Nazi Domination

Dr. Reinhold Schairer, director of research of the U. S. committee on Educational Reconstruction, will be in Kingston next Tuesday. Dr. Schairer has visited Kingston once before, as the guest of Robert Service, a personal friend and his colleague in the field of education. Mr. Service at that time persuaded the doctor to speak to the Kiwanis Club here, and the members were so impressed by his startling revelations on Nazi plans, that they persuaded him to return on December 1, for a lecture to the public at the high school auditorium.

Dr. Schairer is best known as the man who first recognized the menace of Nazism. In 1933, six years before Europe felt it necessary to "appease" Hitler, Dr. Schairer left his native Germany to try to make the world recognize Hitler as the dangerous man he later proved to be. Dr. Schairer at that time was heading the educational system in Republican Germany, and his defiance cost him not only his high position in his own country, but also placed his life in immediate danger. His labors in the interest of universal democracy have placed him high on the list of men most dangerous to the success of the Axis plan for world domination.

In addition to being a distinct contribution to the culture of the community, this lecture will benefit local charities, as all proceeds are to be divided among the Citizen's Committee, which purchases going-away gifts for each group

Resort Publicity For Ulster County Helps Business

Committee Gives Its First Annual Report; Requests Larger Appropriation for Ensuing Year

Publicity given Ulster county as a resort locality, through the $1,000 appropriation made last year by the Board of Supervisors, was so successful that the members of the Ulster County Publicity Committee in its first annual report to the board, made Wednesday evening, recommended that the appropriation be increased to $2,500 for the ensuing year in order that a year round program of publicity may be provided for.

The committee, with Jacob H. Rogers chairman, reported that many inquiries had been made, following publicity in metropolitan newspapers and that boarding housekeepers had reported increased business and had asked for a continuation of the effort to publicize the county as a resort area. Twenty-six letters were filed with the board from various associations and individuals in the county, asking that the service be extended and commenting upon the favorable work of the past season.

The committee held its meeting on May 14, last, and discussed means of publicizing the county as a resort section. Following that, advertisements were carried in five metropolitan papers advertising the advantages of Ulster county and calling attention in particular to the closeness of the area to metropolitan New York and the transportation facilities available. Gasoline rationing made motor car travel difficult and this made more summer guests patronize near-by places. The report of the committee stated that the movement had come at an opportune time and had been successful in calling that attention of New Yorkers to this area.

In addition to the advertising program, 20,000 folders were printed and distributed through transportation, and travel facilities. Among the concerns were bus lines, railroads and the Hudson River Day Line, all of which have a travel bureau center for the convenience of the public. It was reported that local newspapers had cooperated by publishing 310 articles and editorials. Through the cooperation of Senator Arthur H. Wicks, three pages of text on Ulster county were contained in the official New York State Vacation booklet, together with a dozen local pictures of vacationland scenes. Trailways published an article in the bus line's publication and the Central Hudson Gas and Electric Corporation, in addition to cooperating as an information center, also published articles. The company's large display window on central Broadway was devoted to a showing in behalf of the movement.

The report stated that in addition, supervisors in the various towns had procured from local boarding housekeepers and hotelmen, folders which could be sent to those who made specific in-

By TOM FARBROUGH

Advance Base in the Solomons Area, Nov. 21 —(Delayed)—(AP)—Three days ago, Col. Laverne G. (Blondy) Saunders, of Aberdeen, S. D., former West Point football line coach, took the controls of a burning bomber.

The pilot was dead. The copilot was dying. The bomber was in the midst of a swarm of Zeros over a Japanese base on Bougainville Island in the Solomons.

Today, Colonel Saunders is back on the job as usual in command of all heavy bombers on this base.

His forehead is bandaged; his left hand is slightly cut; and he still is feeling troubles from head to foot—"worse than after the first day of scrimmage."

His head was cut when he banged into the windshield putting the plane down on the water at 95 miles an hour.

By an outstanding piece of flying, he saved himself and the remaining seven members of the crew, crash landing the bomber beside a tiny island deep in enemy territory.

A navy rescue plane picked them up the next day.

They had started out last Wednesday morning. The raid was a coordinated attack on ships in Shortland harbor of the southern tip of Bougainville. Direct hits were scored on two large cargo ships and a total of 37 Zeros was shot down. The colonel's plane was the only one lost.

Colonel Saunders makes a practice of going out with his bombers every now and then. Once before,

Germans May Put Up Death Battle At Gulf of Sirte

By DeWITT MACKENZIE

Somewhere in Libya, Nov. 26 (Delayed) (AP)—Marshal Rommel is likely to try to recoup the fallen fortunes of himself and master by making a stand at El Agheila, on the great Gulf of Sirte.

No one here doubts the determination of the Germans to pay any price in blood in an effort to maintain a foothold in North Africa—for this is essential to control of the Mediterranean. Without that domination Hitler can no longer even hope for victory in the European war.

How much of a stand Rommel can make at strategic El Agheila must depend as I see on two things:

Whether Axis forces in Tunisia can hold Bizerte and Tunis against the allied offensive from the west.

What striking power remains in Rommel's army. He has suffered huge losses in men and materiel and the troops have been run ragged by the speed of a retreat of more than 500 miles that, in the early stages, was a debacle.

The greatest danger to the Axis undoubtedly lies in the threat to Bizerte and Tunis.

If these two strong positions should fall, the defenders would have to retire in the hope of making a junction with Rommel, presumably at Tripoli, thus consolidating all the Axis strength of North Africa. Such a contingency likely would force the marshal to abandon the idea of holding El Agheila and make a dash for Tripoli forthwith.

What strength Rommel can muster for the defense of El Agheila is a matter of speculation. It seems to me it must depend in a large degree on how much help Hitler can manage to deliver to his captain through the tough allied sea and air blockade.

If the Nazi marshal must depend on the resources which he brought through with him on the mad race from El Alamein, then he undoubtedly will be in a difficult position. The fine fighting machine which he commanded a few short weeks ago before his debacle has suffered serious damage.

Apart from the 75,000 men Rommel lost in casualties and prisoners, his sacrifice in tanks, warplanes and other equipment has been colossal.

Trip Reveals Losses

I have just had a remarkable demonstration of the materiel losses in an unforgettable air trip over the line of his retreat.

The German high command said merely that "Part" of the squadron had been sent to the bottom by their French crews as Axis troops moved in to thwart an alleged plot for the fleet to escape to the allies.

Thus Hitler trampled another solemn pledge into the dust, putting all France in the same category of conquered nations as Norway, Belgium, Holland, Greece and Yugoslavia.

The last thin veil of "Collaboration" between Vichy and Berlin was ripped aside to the crackle of gunfire by stout-hearted French troops warships in Toulon harbor.

Sixty-two French warships, including three battleships, are based at Toulon.

The German high command said Hitler and Premier Mussolini ordered the occupation "to prevent the French Mediterranean fleet from putting to sea as planned" and that in addition "unsure contingents of the French army" would be demobilized.

A Vichy broadcast said Hitler had ordered the immediate demobilization of all French naval and army forces and had placed Field Marshal Gerd Von Rundstedt in supreme command in France.

The broadcast quoted Hitler's letter to old Marshal Philippe Petain as saying:

"On Nov. 12, 1942, orders were given by French authorities to the defenses at Toulon not to open fire in the event of an Anglo-American landing in this town. Existence of this order has been proved."

The communique said German and Italian troops "nipped in the bud the resistance of elements instigated by Anglo-Saxon influence which flared up at isolated points and in a few hours carried out their allotted tasks.

"Part of the French fleet has scuttled itself in spite of the counter-order of the French (Vichy) government."

DNB, the official German news agency, said Hitler himself gave the order which sent German troops marching into the base last night.

A German communique said the coup was effected "to protect this region against further violation by the British and American aggressors" following the Anglo-American offensive in North Africa.

Toulon lies across the Mediterranean from Tunisia, where U. S. Army and British troops were now driving a wedge between Axis-held Tunis and Bizerte.

The French were previously reported to have declared they would defend the base against "all aggression" and Hitler himself had set Toulon aside as a special unoccupied zone when the German army swept into the former free part of France on November 11.

The new move, violating still another of Hitler's pledges, apparently meant that Germany was either preparing to seize powerful remnants of the French fleet at Toulon or mistrusted the French.

D.N.B., resenting to the familiar Nazi explanation for many of Hitler's sudden betrayals, declared:

"This step has been taken to forestall the treacherous action of certain circles connected with the De Gaullist (Fighting French)

But the Governor suggested that the quarterly installment plan begin with payments due on taxable calendar year income after December 31, 1942, which would mean that quarterly payments would not become effective until April, 1944, based on income for and prior to the year 1943.

The Governor's quarterly payment plan is in line with the original similar plan of the Republican legislative majority, which was sponsored by Assemblyman Abbot Low Moffat, of New York County, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee. It is at variance with the latest Republican plan which, as a result of a compromise, will be sponsored by Assemblyman Maurice Whitney, of Rensselaer County, chairman of the Committee on Taxation, making quarterly payments effective immediately.

The Governor has given no indication of whether he would be willing to modify his recommendations on this point.

While the Legislature had anticipated that Mr. Lehman would recommend reductions in income tax, his proposal of a cut as deep as 25 per cent came as a surprise, particularly in view of the fact that in his message he admitted prospective losses of as much as $60,000,000 in motor fuel and automobile license tax receipts up to July 1, 1943, because of rationing and other restrictions, and to some extent on the liquor excise tax because of probable Federal priority diversions of the use of alcohol from beverage to war purposes.

Mr. Lehman anticipated increases in other sources of revenue because of probable increased business and employment in defense production which would in some degree compensate for losses in other directions. By the time the fiscal budget of 1943 comes around the governor anticipates an increase of more than $1,000,000 annually each in corporation and utility taxes over current receipts; an increase of $20,000,000 in franchise tax receipts; $2,000,000 in stock transfer tax revenue, and an increase of approximately $1,000,000 from race track pari-mutuels, while revenues from other sources would virtually stand still or drop.

While on the basis of past and current personal income-tax receipts it is possible to estimate the approximate saving to the taxpayer in the governor's proposed reduction, it is not possible to estimate the loss to the state. Because of the prospect of more employment and possibly higher pay, it may be that the loss of revenue to the state would not be entirely commensurate with the size of the tax rate cut.

Proposes Job Fund Slash

The governor's major economies fall into two categories. One is a postponement until after the war emergency of the use of approximately $341,000,000 of authorized bonds for highway, parkway, grade crossing elimination, housing and other non-defense projects. This would result in a saving of around $3,850,000 in debt service for capital outlays. The second and larger item would be a cut of $6,700,000 for unemployment relief, based on the prospect of increased employment in defense production. Other deducted items include $2,130,000 in state aid to public schools, which the governor believes justified by falling off of local enrollments; $1,900,000 for old-age assistance and aid to dependent children, this again being based upon the probable increase of employment.

The governor's total recommendation for reduction of state aid to localities, including education, runs to about $4,000,000. Of that amount New York city would lose roughly $2,000,000 and upstate would lose the other $2,000,000.

Mr. Lehman made a few and slight reductions in his recommendations for his departments, and in some cases he asked for increases. None was sufficient to affect seriously the proposed budget total. The largest increases, outside a $5,000,000 appropriation for defense, were $3,300,000 for debt service, $3,100,000 for increased cost of food and fuel for state institutions and $1,500,000 for statutory salary increases.

Says Credit Excellent

As for the present financial status of the state's treasury, Mr. Lehman said the state's credit was never better. He reported that at the end of the last fiscal year, June 30, 1941, the state's income exceeded its expenditures by $37,100,000 and that after paying off accumulated obligations, the state had started off the current fiscal year with a cash surplus of $7,000,000. Despite tax reductions and prospective falling off in certain revenues, if all goes well, the governor hopes to wind up the next fiscal year with an accumulated surplus of $2,468,000.

But the governor carefully emphasized in his message the possible dislocation of the estimates upon which his budget was based because of the unpredictable requirements of the war and its impact upon sources of revenue. He explained to the Legislature:

"We are at war. This is the budget of a state dedicating itself completely to the successful prosecution of that war. For many months, of course, the defense effort has been a major factor in the economy of the nation and the state, stimulating certain lines of business activity, disturbing prices, introducing fresh federal tax burdens, absorbing loanable funds, causing shortages of strategic materials and imposing drains on manpower in the public service and outside. Even while this budget was in the course of preparation the war trumpet sounded for us. From this point forward all of the strains, dislocations and complications will be multiplied. Our affairs, public as well as private, must be henceforth accommodated to the primary task of winning the war. The financial plans of the State of New York must be so arranged that they certainly will not impede, but will, instead, positively further the task of pushing our war effort to the highest possible limit."

Says War May Upset Figures

And later in his message he said:

"I am keenly aware of the almost numberless possible developments that may affect the tax revenues unfavorably during a period when a radical diversion of economic effort to the support of the war is under way. I have based my estimate on the best available data. These estimates allow for such unfavorable repercussions as may now be reasonably anticipated, but not for all that may possibly revelop."

Two other points which the governor stressed in his message were, first, his reasons for preferring a state income tax cut as against deduction of federal income tax from state income payments, and, second, his reason for deferring quarterly payments of income tax.

On the subject of a state cut in preference to a federal deduction, Mr. Lehman said:

"I base my conclusions not only on practical considerations, but upon conclusions of principle and equity as well. In my judgment, the fairness with which the burden of our income tax is apportioned among our taxpayers will be seriously impaired through the adoption of this proposal (deduction of federal tax in calculating the base of state tax) to abandon our traditional procedure. Viewed as a method of extending tax relief, the proposal is obviously a 'rich man's' plan. Only 5.6 per cent of our taxpayers report incomes in excess of $10,000, and yet 90 per cent of the tax deduction would accrue to the benefit of this group. A proposal which would reduce the taxes of a man with a $1,000,000 income 72 per cent while it reduces the taxes of the man with a $5,000 income only 5 per cent does not appeal to one's sense of equity.

"The practical effect upon the state's revenue would be very serious. The loss in yield of the state income tax, popularly estimated at $9,000,000, would really amount in the fiscal year 1943 to approximately $30,000,000, on the basis of my estimates of 1943 yield at rates currently in force. In the fiscal year 1944 the unfavorable effect upon the yield on the state tax would almost certainly be even greater. Moreover, I see nothing in the argument in favor of allowing the deduction of federal taxes in the case of personal income tax which does not apply with at least equal force in the case of our corporation franchise tax based on net income. Indeed, the same argument may be urged with at least equal plausibility for the deduction of the state's own personal income taxes from its own tax base. The practical effect upon the state's revenues from such extensions of the proposal would be disastrous."

Present Tax Set-Up

The present tax base is 2 per cent on the first $1,000 annual income; 3 per cent on the next $2,000; 4 per cent on the next $2,000; 5 per cent on the next $2,000; 6 per cent on the next $2,000, and 7 per cent on the remainder of higher incomes. Single persons are taxable on net incomes of $1,000. Married persons are exempt on incomes up to $2,500, with an additional $400 allowance for each dependent.

In recommending deferment of quarterly payments on income tax until 1944, the governor followed the same reasoning as the original Republican legislative plan, which was that to make such divisions of payments effective immediately would be to split in two the coming April payment of one-half the entire year's payment, thus taking away from state one-quarter of the revenue it would receive from this source before the end of the current fiscal year.

This would deprive the general fund of approximately $30,000,000 for this fiscal year.

Both the Republican legislative majority, originally, and the governor, now, proposed to obviate this by postponing the quarterly payment plan until 1944 and in the interim interpose a nine-month fiscal year beginning April 1, instead of July 1, thereafter remaining permanently so. This would absorb the shock of the missing one-quarter payment in a fiscal year.

This is the plan which the governor, in his message, still favors. The new Republican legislative plan would empower the comptroller to assume the hypothetical receipts of the quarterly payment not yet received, enter it upon his books, thus giving the taxpayer the immediate benefit of the smaller installment payment without upsetting the state's finances in any practical manner. Thus, beginning this coming April 15, the first quarterly installment would be paid, while other quarterly installments would be due July 15, October 15 and next January 15.

The governor commented:

"This plan has not been submitted to me."

Over 390,000 people are employed in the cosmetic industry of the United States.

Snowfall Causes Series of Crashes In County Sections

A light snow Monday made travel dangerous and several minor accidents were reported during the day. One of the most serious was a three-car crash on route 9-W near Golden Rule Inn at Ulster Park.

John W. Scott, driving south toward his home in Highland, stopped to fix a chain. A car of Robert Post also of the town of Lloyd was following closely and being unable to stop struck the Scott machine and a Krug bakery truck operated by John J. Bowe of Poughkeepsie struck the rear of the Scott machine. All of the cars were en route south.

In the car with Post was Richard Donovan, 19, and William Sleight, 19, of Highland. Donovan complained of an injury about the hip and Post had a slight injury to his wrist.

While the three cars were still on the roadway a William Young's Transportation, Inc., truck from Niagara Falls coming north in charge of James Stricker, Youngstown, N. Y., was driven to the ditch when the driver was unable to stop and sought to avoid striking the cars. The truck was not damaged and the driver later was able to proceed.

The accident was reported to State Trooper Reilly and Deputies Vredenburg, Segelken and Bellmore were sent to the scene to make an investigation.

Later last evening a Liberty Fast Freight truck traveling south suffered a broken axle on route 9-W near the city line and jackknifed on the pavement blocking traffic. The driver, William Hinkle of Rochelle Park, N. J., later was able to get the truck off the pavement after one way traffic had been maintained for some time. Deputies Bellmore and Tinnie made an investigation of the accident and directed traffic until the truck was moved off the pavement to allow traffic to pass. State Trooper Reilly was notified of the accident, which happened near his home and he summoned the deputy sheriffs.

ed by Mr. Roosevelt to preside over the committee in Washington and a similar chairman for Britain will be chosen by Mr. Churchill, each receiving the assistance of a capable secretariat and having authority to invite state department, foreign office or production agency representatives to attend meetings.

A combined shipping adjustment board, consisting of a representative of this country and one from Britain, is to be set up in Washington and a similar board will be established in London.

A "combined raw materials board" will be composed of a representative each from the British and United States governments, with no provision for branches in the two countries. The statement did not disclose where its headquarters would be.

Called to Service

WILLIAM C. GEMMELL

William C. Gemmell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter S. Gemmell of 40 Liberty street has been called to active service in the United States Army. He will leave Kingston for Camp Upton, January 29. Formerly he was stationed at Fort Dix, N. J. Private First Class Gemmell, has been employed at the Ulster Hotel since his return in September.

auditorium, to begin work of alloting spaces for the numerous exhibits. Mr. McPherson has held his present position for 22 years. This is his 10th year at Kingston, the first of the eastern meetings to be held here having been in 1933.

He found time, during a lull this morning, to speak with a Freeman reporter about the prospects for the present meeting. He said that so far this year agricultural meetings have been showing a drop in attendance, due to war conditions, weather and other causes. As to the three days meeting which opens here Wednesday, he said that, given favorable weather conditions, he expected to see about the usual attendance. "These meetings here always have been well supported and we always have been given a hearty welcome," he observed, adding, "if the weather is nice I look for the usual crowds."

Mr. McPherson said that there would be about the usual number of exhibitors, but exhibits would be given smaller spaces and it will be possible to accommodate all of them in the auditorium. Last year the city garage was used for an overflow exhibit, but this will not be necessary this year, as there will not be so much heavy machinery shown.

Cyril G. Small, assistant agent for the Ulster County Farm Bureau, who has charge of the junior agriculturists program, was busy this morning helping get things in shape. The apple judging contests for 4-H club members will be held Thursday in the room at the right of the stage in the auditorium. Apple judging and other contests by the Future Farmers of America will take place the same day at the Y. M. C. A. Their exhibits of fruit will be shown at the auditorium.

One of the early arrivals was J. D. Luckett of the Geneva Experiment Station, who came to Kingston Monday and has been busy arranging the extensive Geneva-Cornell display. He was accompanied by L. M. Van Alstyne of Geneva, who again comes to Kingston to do the apple judging.

Other officials of the society and many of the men prominent in horticultural and agricultural affairs who are to appear on the program — Secretary McPherson says that is an exceptionally good program—are expected to arrive in Kingston today.

Tonight, at the Governor Clinton Hotel, which is headquarters for the society, officers and directors meet at a dinner and a meeting of the executive committee will be held.

An innovation at the eastern meeting this year—it also was put into effect at the annual meeting of the parent society, held in Rochester January 13-16—is the throwing open of the speaking sessions to the general public. Heretofore these speaking sessions, which this year will be held in the Common Council chamber at the city hall, have been open only to members of the society. Now farmers generally, and others who may be interested in the matters brought up for discussion, are invited to attend.

The Rochester meeting this year was handicapped by bad weather and icy roads, but Mr. McPherson said that there were the usual fine exhibits.

The Rochester meeting is the annual meeting for election of officers of the society. Bruce P. Jones of Hall, N. Y., was elected president of the society, succeeding Percy R. Morgan, who was president last year.

Ulster county was given a place on the official board, Gross B. Schoonmaker of Accord being named fourth vice-president. Other vice-presidents elected were Theodore E. Cross of Lagrangeville; Mark E. Buckman, Sodus; John A. Hall, Lockport. Roy P. McPherson was re-elected secretary-treasurer.

Mr. McPherson said this morning that, so far as he had been informed, the program for the three days' meeting would be carried out as published, with a couple of exceptions. Harry J. Eustace of San Francisco, who was to have talked at the Governor Clinton Wednesday night on the fruit regions of the west and how fruit growers there have been solving their problems, will be unable to be present, due to war conditions. A substitute speaker may be secured and in any event the colored movie, "Combat," with narration by Lowell Thomas, will be shown.

E. V. Vedder of Schoharie, who was to have spoken at 11:15 Friday morning on the question of a state tax for advertising apples in New York state, will not be present.

Otherwise, Don't Knit

Washington, Jan. 27 (AP)—The war production board adopted an "official position" today on the question of women knitting sweaters for soldiers and sailors. Don't knit, the board suggested, unless the sweaters are absolutely needed by the armed forces and commanding officers have requested them. "On the whole, we don't want a broad wave of knitting that will consume millions of pounds of wool that is needed for more essential purposes," R. R. Guthrie, chief of the W.P.B. textiles branch, explained. "This is the system we have set up with the Red Cross. When a commanding officer desires such additional clothing as sweaters, he will apply to the Red Cross. The Red Cross will then arrange for the sweaters to be knitted."

Office Is Open

Rumors current on the street that the army recruiting station in the Central Post Office building was closed are without foundation. The office is open daily and men desiring to enlist should apply at the recruiting office.

Churchill Says Allies Are Stronger

committees" and declared that "we must also concert together in close collaboration with Stalin and Chiang Kai-Shek."

"I am the man that Parliament and the nation have got to blame for the general way in which they were served," the prime minister told the House of Commons in a voice made husky by a heavy cold as he summed up Britain's war fortunes in his first review since visiting the United States.

"And," he added, "I cannot serve them efficiently unless, in spite of all that has gone wrong and is going to go wrong, I have their trust and their faithful aid."

However, not all that Churchill reported was of British reverses or of dark prospects for the future.

In Libya, he said, an Imperial army of never more than 45,000 outnumbered two-to-one by General Erwin Rommel's German-Italian forces has rewon Cirenaica.

It has lost 18,000 men killed, wounded or captured, he disclosed, but he declared that more than three times that number—"a highly profitable transaction"—have been lost by the Axis. He totalled their casualties at 61,000.

Now, he added, Britain's job is to hold reconquered Cirenacia.

He called Britain's munitions output "gigantic" with tank production doubled in the last six months and small arms output more than doubled.

Britain's volume of planes is steadily rising, he said, and they are larger and better.

Many Discussions

The Prime Minister said he had many discussions in Washington with President Roosevelt on British-American war direction and that "in order to wage war effectively against Japan" they had agreed that Roosevelt "propose the establishment of a Pacific council in Washington or London to include representatives of Australia and New Zealand as well as Britain and the Netherlands."

Australia wants and New Zealand prefers Washington as the meeting place, Churchill said, but no decision has been reached yet wether it will be there or London.

Referring to press criticisms of recent weeks about "our affairs at home and abroad," Churchill told the House the present occasion was one of those arising in the life of any government which "must be clarified."

"We have had a great deal of bad news from the Far East and I think it highly probable we shall have a great deal more," Churchill said gravely.

"Wrapped up in this bad news will be many tales of blunders and shortcomings in foresight and action."

Bidding for unanimity, the Prime Minister told the House that when Rudolf Hess, No. 2 deputy of Adolf Hitler, "flew over here some months ago he firmly believed he had only to gain access to certain circles in this country for what he described as the Churchill clique to be thrown out of power and for a government to be set up with which Hitler could negotiate a magnanimous peace."

"That may seem silly to us but it is mischevious abroad and I am sure the house would wish to make its position clear," the prime minister went on.

"Since I have been back in this country I have had inquiries from a dozen governments based on enemy propaganda turning upon the point as to whether the government is to be dismissed from power or not."

Cites Battle of Libya

The battle of Libya would have been lost November 24, he said, had not General Sir Claude J. E. Auchinleck, commander of the British Middle Eastern forces, "intervened himself, changed comamnd and ordered the ruthless pressure of attack to be maintained without regard to risks or consequences."

"But for this robust decision we should now be back on the line from which we started," Churchill continued, "or perhaps further back. Tobruk would possibly have fallen and Rommel would be marching toward the Nile.

"Cirenaica has ben regained—it still has to be held.

"We have in our possession 35,500 prisoners including many wounded, of which 10,500 are Germans.

"We have killed and wounded at least 11,500 Germans and 13,000 Italians.

"In all we have accounted for 61,000 men. There is also a mass of enemy wounded, some of which have been evacuated to the rear, to sea or to the westward.

Furthermore, Churchill declared, the Axis has lost 852 aircraft and 386 tanks.

He declined to predict the outcome of the Libyan battle but he declared that "after two and a half years of war have only just managed to keep our heads above water. . . . We are beginning to see our way through and it looks more than ever before that we are going to win."

Churchill dwelt at length on the achievements of Soviet Russia and told the house that "we have sent Stalin exactly what he asked for."

Nevertheless, he acknowledged ruefully that bad weather had caused "a small lag" and promised it would be made up "by the early days of February."

Britain's aid to Russia in munitions, the prime minister declared, contributed not only to the Russian victories but also to better relations between Britain and the Soviet Union.

Never since "we were deserted by the Bordeaux-Vichy government and were set upon by Italy," said Churchill, has the situation in the Nile Valley, both west and east, been so favorable.

But, he said, only by the smallest margin have the British so far succeeded in beating Rommel in Cirenaica and only by the victories of the Russians on the Black Sea "have we been spared the overrunning of those vast lands from the Levant to the Caspian."

Telling the House that every tank and every aircraft squadron was needed in Libya, Churchill declared it would "see by what a small margin and by what strokes of fortune we so far have survived."

Referring to the demands on him last summer and fall for a continental invasion by the British, Churchill commented that "all the troubles in the Far East and Middle East might have been sunk into insignificance compared with another and far worse Dunkerque" had he yielded.

Because of preoccupations elsewhere, he asserted, Britain had it in her power "only to make moderate and partial provision in the Far East against the hypothetical danger of Japanese attack."

"Why then should I be called upon to pick out scapegoats and throw blame on generals and soldiers?" He demanded bluntly of those who have been urging cabinet changes.

"Why should I be called on to drive away loyal and trusted colleagues and friends to appease the clamor of a certain section of the British and Australian press.

"If I were capable of doing that I would be incapable of rendering to this country and this House any further service."

Churchill warned that Japanese naval supremacy would last "long enough for Japan to inflict many heavy and painful losses on all the united nations with establishments and possessions in the Far East. But if we persevere, the boot will be on the other leg."

The prime minister pledged that "the battle of the Malay peninsula and the approaches to Singapore will be fought to the last inch by British, Australian and Indian forces which have been reinforced in the last week."

Pays Tribute to MacArthur

Amid the House's cheers, Churchill paid tribute to "the splendid courage" of Gen. Douglas MacArthur and his forces holding out in the Philippines and to the Dutch "for playing one of the main parts in the Malayan battle."

Turning to forces of the United States, the prime minister said:

"United States fighter and bomber squadrons will take part in the defense of these isles and their bombers will attack Germany.

Dealing with the arrival of United States troops in northern Ireland yesterday, he told Commons that "very considerable forces are following as opportunity serves."

Churchill also said:

"American production has increased in the proportions of 100 and 160 and in 1943 we should be able to move across the oceans armies two, three or four times as large as the considerable forces we are able to handle at sea at the present time."

He said he believed "we shall presently regain naval command on the Pacific and begin to establish effective superiority in the air."

"Later on—in 1943—we should be able to set about our task in the Pacific in good style," he added.

Senate Passes Bill To Permit Waiver For Working Hours

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 27 (AP)—The Senate today passed an Assembly-approved bill to permit waiving of working-hour restrictions that hamper output of war materials.

Unanimous Senate indorsement without debate sent the measure to Governor Lehman for anticipated early signature. It would authorize State Industrial Commissioner Frieda S. Miller to suspend restrictions for periods up to six months. The state board of standards and appeals would hear any appeals.

Despite opposition from some local labor organizations to concentrating authority in the commissioner, neither House attempted thus to amend the measure.

A Senate-approved bill to permit corporations to contribute to the Red Cross, which legislators estimated would bring the agency "millions of dollars," passed the Assembly and went to Governor Lehman for expected approval. The law now bans such donations by corporations.

Democratic Assemblyman Arthur Wachtel, New York city, introduced a resolution urging investigation of milk-handling costs by the state commissioner of agriculture and attorney-general.

Other bills would:

Give New York residents in military service, except state employes receiving the difference between military and civil pay, $10 monthly. (Assemblyman J. Eugene Zimmer, Troy, American Labor Party).

Appropriate $500,000 and extend to all state and municipal employes in armed services, including draft men, the pay differential now confined to enlisted members of the National Guard or Naval Reserve (Assemblyman Leo F. Rayfiel (Brooklyn Democrat).

were moving smoothly to an almost general severance of relations between Latin American republics and the Axis.

President Getulio Vargas called his cabinet into session, and informed persons said Brazil's severance of relations with Japan, Germany and Italy was the main business.

Action by Brazil would leave Argentina, Chile, Ecuador and Bolivia the only nations still maintaining ties with the Axis powers but the Bolivian cabinet announced after a meeting last night at La Paz that its foreign minister had been directed to sign the rupture resolution and that a decree formalizing the break would be issued shortly.

Leaders of the conference did not expect Argentina to sever her ties with the Axis immediately, though she has approved the conference measure recommending a break.

Church to Resume Its Supper-Study Hours

Thursday evening, February 5, the first of the annual series of church family suppers and study hours will be held in the chapel of the Rondout Presbyterian Church. This annual custom was commenced in the days of before the first World War in 1918 during the pastorate of the late Rev. Dr. Charles G. Ellis.

The custom of devoting the month of February to holding these weekly church gatherings proved popular from the inception of the idea.

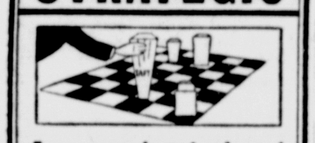

Supper as usual will be served at 6 o'clock by a committee of the ladies of the church, and following supper the diners will be assembled into groups for the study period. This February the general topic will be Latin America.

The closing night of the series on February 19, will feature the showing of a three reel movie, "Wings Under the Southern Cross." This is one of the late movies from the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions.

elements, which, in spite of given assurances, had been prepared and was about to be carried out."

A Berlin broadcast acknowledged that massive Russian tank forces had achieved "a fairly deep penetration" of German defense lines northeast of Moscow, with the Russians striking simultaneously in the Velikie Luki region, 265 miles west of Moscow, and near the big Nazi base at Rzhev.

Rzhev is 135 miles northwest of Moscow.

In Libya the victorious British 8th army prepared to assault Nazi Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's defenses at El Agheila. British headquarters said tersely there was "nothing to report from our land forces" in the westward drive; an Italian communique asserted that "thrusts of strong enemy exploring elements" in Libya were repulsed.

On the Tunisian front, spearheads of Lieut. Gen. Kenneth A. N. Anderson's Anglo-American expeditionary force were reported to have advanced within 15 miles of Tunis, the Axis-held capital, and battled Axis troops at Mateur, 25 miles south of Bizerte.

Still another allied column was officially credited with routing the Germans from Mejez El Bab, 30 miles southwest of Tunis.

If successful, the effect of these synchronized thrusts would be to split the Axis forces in Bizerte and Tunis and also cut off the route of Axis escape southeastward to Libya.

United Nations headquarters in North Africa said allied troops were now "advancing successfully" northeastward—in the direction of Tunis and the Gulf of Gabes coast—after capturing Mejez El Bab over stiff resistance.

A German radio reporting that the allies had surged forward within 15 miles of Tunis indicated that they had advanced 15 miles through the 30-mile-deep perimeter of Axis defenses guarding the Bizerte-Tunis sector along the northeast coast.

On the flaming Stalingrad front, chaotic fighting raged across the lifelines of Hitler's imperilled siege armies and latest reports indicated that the fast-wheeling Red armies were now driving back from the west to strike at the invader's rear.

Citing the capture of seven towns in the Don river bend, Soviet headquarters announced:

"In this sector, they (Red army troops) threw remaining enemy units onto the eastern banks of the river Don."

Driving Germans Back

This apparently meant that the Russians now were actually driving the Germans back toward Stalingrad, tightening the noose after cutting off all but a 20-mile-wide avenue of escape.

Official Soviet dispatches said Marshal Semeon Timoshenko's eight-day-old offensive had rolled up a tally of 115,600 Axis troops killed or captured and possibly 150,000 others were wounded—a grand total of 265,600 knocked out of action.

Russian reports said the Red armies had already severed many, if not a large majority, of all roads of supply and escape and were pinning the estimated 300,000 survivors of the Axis siege armies into a 45-mile-wide strip between the Don and the Volga.

Front-line dispatches said that battle swirling across the frozen steppes was so confused it was impossible to define the lines clearly, but reported that in some places the Russian offensive had gained such momentum the fleeing Germans were overwhelmed before they could burn planes on airfields.

Overnight, the Stalingrad garrison struck out at German troops still holding positions in the ruined city, recapturing four large blocks in the northern factory section and killing 950 Nazis.

The extent of the German rout was high-lighted by a Soviet communique reporting the capture of 1,863 guns, 3,851 machine guns, 50,000 rifles, 1,320 tanks, 9,000 horses and 108 supply dumps.

Battle Is Developing

The battle for Tunisia, key North African buffer zone between allied-occupied Algeria and Italian Tripolitania, was developing speedily after a week of only minor clashes while the allies moved 300 miles eastward across the rugged Atlas mountains.

London quarters estimated the Axis now had 20,000 German and Italian troops in the French colony, and the Berlin radio reported that "naval and land forces have been able to pour men and materials into the country."

A Nazi broadcast also asserted that the German air force had won air superiority over Tunisia "with lightning speed," but offered no supporting evidence.

The German vaunted "superiority," however, did not prevent U. S. army planes from inflicting new havoc on the Nazi-held airdrome at Tunis, where 10 enemy planes were caught on the field and heavily bombed.

"No fighter opposition was encountered," allied headquarters said.

An Italian communique reported vaguely that "an engagement of armored cars ended in favor of Axis forces, which destroyed numerous enemy armored cars," but failed to note the locale of the action except that it was in Tunisia.

In the far Pacific, allied warplanes violently strafed Japanese troops crammed into the narrow Buna-Gona beachhead in New Guinea as the enemy, newly reinforced, still head off American and Australian forces.

A check on Japanese dead, disclosing new uniforms and equipment, showed that the enemy had succeeded in landing fresh reinforcements along the 12-mile shoreline despite heavy blows by Gen. Douglas MacArthur's aerial squadrons.

United Nations headquarters said there was little change in the battle picture in the last 24 hours, with allied troops maintaining a steady pressure from three sides.

On Guadalcanal Island, in the Solomons, no change was reported.

Hitler Shows He Considers French Hostile to Axis

By JOHN EVANS

New York, Nov. 27 (AP)—Hitler certified by word and deed today to French patriotism and showed he considered the French army and navy hostile to the invading Germans.

Old Marshal Petain was said by the Nazi chief to have "taken no part in these activities" against Germany but Admiral Jean Darlan, Petain's former right-hand man and political heir was on record as asserting the Marshal really favored the Allies. Darlan has said Petain acted under duress in appealing vainly to the French in North Africa to resist American forces there.

The sixty-two warships at Toulon were reported scuttled while Germans and Italians were accupying by force the greatest of French naval bases. French troops, the Germans said, fired upon them.

Hitler in a letter to Petain asserted he had proof that French forces at Toulon was ordered November 12 not to fire if the American and British forces tried to land there.

This might refer to Admiral Darlan's November 12 broadcast from Allied headquarters in Africa in which the admiral "asked" the fleet to join the Allies. But there are two reasons why it might mean that Petain or high French military authorities in France gave the order; Darlan specifically avoided an "order" and throughout has limited his authority to North Africa.

Darlan at American headquarters knew very well that the Americans and British were not trying to land at Toulon and so far as known there was nothing in Darlan's broadcast that filled Hitler's specifications of an "order." If he referred to the broadcast, he was revealing nothing and probably would have mentioned Darlan.

Regardless of Hitler's stamp of approval on Marshal Petain, it is possible that Darlan was right in saying the marshal favored the Allies. It may be that Hitler sensed wide general civil military revolt in France and sought to avoid it by paying lip service to the aged marshal, honored as a soldier and as an upright man even by many of those who condemn him politically as having sacrificed French honor and French interests.

Darlan gains something from Hitler's sudden seizure of Toulon which he promised to leave in French hands. Darlan appears more clearly as being honestly in favor of American entrance into North Africa because as commander-in-chief of the navy he appears to represent the navy's hatred of Germany as shown by the scuttling of the fleet as the German approached. His loss of his nationality at the hands of Vichy today also adds something to that picture.

In sinking the fleet the French navy obeyed Darlan in keeping it out of German hands.

Soldier Had Appendicitis

A letter from Private Ray Stephano of Kingston, dated Wednesday stated that he was in the station hospital at Camp Lee, Va., recuperating from an appendicitis operation. Ray, who had had previous attacks, wrote that he was on his way to the rifle range Saturday which he was seized with an attack and fell to the ground.

to marry her after this show is over."

He chatted on for a bit and then with a smile dropped his curly head into his hands and fell asleep—just like a kid playing at war. I looked around me. All the rest of the passengers had, soldier-like promptly gone to sleep. It's a trick you acquire at the front.

The door of the pilot's cabin opened and the co-pilot called to me.

"The captain would like you to come up and ride beside him," he reported. "You can see better up there."

And so began a memorable trip. The skipper brought the plane down to a height of 250 feet so that the ground beneath lay like an open picture book. We swung over the line of the retreat.

Everywhere is the record of a great victory and a great collapse—torn earth and the wreckage of latest designs in machines and equipment of war. But most impressive was the clear indication of speed.

Fleeing in Panic

At times the Boche were fleeing in such panic that their transports spread out for several hundred yards across the desert on either side of the military highway which skirts the Mediterranean for hundreds of miles. You can see tracks of wheels running like those of a vast chariot race westward across the sands.

Where the battleline ran between El Alamein and the Qattara depression the whole terrain was pitted with shell and bomb holes. It was here the British began the offensive that broke through Rommel's defense after a fierce engagement which at times involved hand-to-hand fighting.

After the first bloody stand, panic seized the Axis forces. Signs of combat lessen and the marks of speed increase. Here you can see mountainous evidence of the devastation wrought on Axis tanks, warplanes and transport by the British and American air forces.

The fleeing Boche and Italians didn't even pause at Halfaya (Hellfire) Pass—a strong position south of Bardia where they would have made a stand if capable of holding it all.

Here the escarpment shoots up from the desert and forms a plateau which continues westward. The so-called pass isn't a pass at all, but a zig-zag highway from the desert floor to the top of the escarpment. Actually there are two highways, four miles apart, and either of them could be defended indefinitely by a well-equipped army.

Rommel had on time for defense here, however. His whole anxiety was to escape the merciless punishment being dealt out by pursuing air fleets. So his troops, transport and tanks fled up the serpentine roads and raced on towards Tobruk and points west.

The marks of outright panic continue to the neighborhood of Tobruk, where Rommel took a deep breath and pulled up his socks. From there on the speed was maintained, but evidence of a debacle was lacking.

By the way, the fine little harbor of Tobruk was filled with sunken ships, both transport and war vessels. Many Axis craft have made Tobruk their last port of call in recent months.

From Tobruk onward, Rommel proceeded fast and methodically.

Allied air fleets continued to plaster him, but he did better in salvaging his equipment. Thus he finally came to a spot where he could make a stand against the pursuers.

Having followed this trail of devastation, one finds it hard to believe the marshal has been able to preserve any great striking power in the army which made the retreat.

He likely will be able to call on some reserves at Tripoli and Hitler undoubtedly will be doing his utmost to bolster his servant's forces.

At the moment we have a lull while both sides prepare for battle. That can't be long delayed, however.

Arkville Man Spots Abandoned Automobile

Thursday afternoon about 5 o'clock as Harrison D. Todd of Arkville was driving his car along the Modena road he turned the car radio to the short wave and picked up a state police call of a stolen automobile, giving the color of the car and the make as well as the license number.

A few minutes later Mr. Todd saw an auto parked off the road, and apparently abandoned. He investigated and saw that the license plate corresponded with the number of the car reported over the air as stolen and notified the sheriff's office of his discovery.

The automobile had been reported stolen from in front of 74 Fair street at 10 o'clock Wednesday night by Miss Edith Davis. She was notified by the police department of the finding of her car.

A Dodge coupe belonging to John Davis of 26 Abeel street, reported stolen from Fair street Wednesday night, was recovered Thursday evening by Deputy Sheriff Leonard Belmore and Mr. Davis. The car was located earlier Thursday evening by Harrison D. Todd of Arkville, who reported to the sheriff's office that he had seen the car parked in an apple orchard one mile below New Paltz on the Modena road.

his plane was thrown off its course by a storm and reached its base with only a few gallons of gasoline left.

When he walked into his headquarters yesterday afternoon, his tent mate, Maj. John T. Malloy, who was end coach at West Point when Saunders was coaching the line, touched his broad shoulders lightly and said, "an old Irish prayer didn't hurt did it?"

The Colonel grinned back, "I am a Christian now."

Everybody crowded around to hear the story as the Colonel sat on his cot with a healthy slug of medicinal Scotch.

The crew included Second Lieut. Nelson Levi, of Mullan, Idaho, bombardier, who was wounded severely in the thigh; and the following who escaped injury: First Lieut. Donald G. O'Brien; of Audubon, N. J., navigator; Tech. Sgt. Lester H. Williams, of Colbalt, Conn., aerial engineer; Staff Sgt. Joseph Delucia, of Reading Pa., assistant aerial engineer; Staff Sgt. Samuel Moses of Donora, Pa., radio operator; Sgt. Russell L. Hultgren, of Lavergne, Calif., assistant radio operator; Sgt. George J. Junget, of Alva, Fla., aerial gunner.

Colonel Saunders' Story

The Colonel told this story:

"We'd made our second run across the target about 8:30 a. m. when about 20 Zeros got on us. There was moderate anti-aircraft fire—not as bad as some I've seen—coming from shore batteries and some destroyers. The Zeros made headon attacks and they were plenty good—better than any I'd seen before. They came at us in a string.

"The co-pilot was wounded in the right leg and I went back to get the first aid kit. I'd just got back with it and was standing behind the cockpit when a machinegun bullet went through the pilot's heart. It killed him instantly. At the same time, the co-pilot was wounded in the stomach. The cockpit was all shot up.

"The pilot fell back. I got the co-pilot out and took over the controls from his seat on the right side. Both engines on the left side were out and a wing was on fire. The only thing right on the instrument panel was the clock. I couldn't stay in formation, so I told another plane to take the lead."

(Other pilots said Saunders plane at that time was "flopping around" so crazily they couldn't see how he continued to fly it.)

"From the co-pilot's seat, I couldn't trim the tabs and handle the plane with those two dead engines on the left, so I got the pilot's body out and moved into the pilot's seat. I decided to make for some overcast and so we dived down. The left wing was red hot. The bank and turn indicator showed we were in a spin. I could tell from the air speed indicator we weren't but it was pretty tough business flying on 'instruments' under the circumstances.

"We came out of the overcast at about 500 feet and I saw I'd have to put her down. This was about 20 minutes after the pilot and co-pilot had been hit. Other planes stayed around to protect us but the Zeros didn't follow us that far. I told the other planes to take our position and then headed for a little island in order to come down as close to land as possible.

"We were about a mile and a half out. The navigator was up with me and the rest of the crew was in the navigator compartment, all set for the water landing. I brought her down dragging the tail on the water at 95 miles an hour. The wings hit and there was really a sudden stop.

Out Through Window

"The navigator and I went out, sliding through the window in the cockpit—the smallest hole I ever went through in my life. The tail broke off and the rest of the crew went out through the break.

"We thought the co-pilot was dead but he said, 'hey get me out' and we did. We had on life vests but had been too busy to inflate them. The nose went down and the fuselage flipped over and crowned me. We got two rubber boats inflated and put the co-pilot into one of them and started paddling for shore. He died on the way in.

"When we reached the island, not knowing whether Japs were around, we pulled everything back into the jungle and made a bed for Levi, the bombardier, on one of the boats and made him as comfortable as we could. That was about the middle of the morning.

"Two boats full of black natives came over to us. One of them spoke a little English and they helped us build shelters. In the afternoon, some others came over in a hundred-foot canoe that would make any crew at Poughkeepsie look sick. They had a beautiful even swing.

"The natives were clean and civil. They liked Americans. They took us to their village and put us to bed in a well built wooden hut. That saved Levi's life. It rained hard all night but we had a good sleep. The next afternoon, a Navy plane piloted by Lieut. (JG) Charles F. Willies, of Bile, Ala., picked us up.

"It's good to be back."

Colonel Saunders is called "blondy" because what hair he has left is coal black. He coached at West Point from 1932 through 1939. As an Army tackle, he was reputed to have "the best pair of hands in football."

At Hickam Field (Honolulu) on December 7, he flew one of the few planes that go into the air.

His wife is at Aberdeen. He said: "Send her my love. Tell her the old Irish luck's holding up and will until we drive the Japs out of Tokyo."

Students May Finish School in Fast Time

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 27 (AP)—Approval of additional or accelerated courses permitting certain students to complete high school in less than four years featured today a new policy of war-time education adopted by the State Board of Regents.

Dr. J. Hillis Miller, Associate Commissioner of Education, said the new policy is designed in part "to speed college and high school education without lowering the high standards established over many years." It's adoption follows numerous conferences with college officials and long consideration by the State Education Department.

In contrast, declared assistant Education Commissioner Edwin R. Van Kleek, these and other New York educators almost unanimously branded as "bargain basement education". The regent proposal of the National Educational policies Commission that selected students be allowed to take their last year of high school work in college.

"Mail order diplomas" was another epithet teachers bestowed on the plan, Dr. Van Kleek said. He himself declared the scheme "smacks of 'Alice in Wonderland.'"

Deweys Are Guests

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 27 (AP)—Republican Governor-Elect Thomas E. Dewey and Mrs. Dewey will be luncheon guests of Governor and Mrs. Lehman at the executive mansion tomorrow. While the Democratic chief executive discusses State Affairs with the former Manhattan prosecutor who takes over the governorship Jan. 1, Mrs. Dewey presumary will be getting from the state's first lady some housekeeping pointers on the historic old Mansion the Deweys will occupy the next four years.

WAAC EXPANDED BY EXECUTIVE ORDER!

New facilities and enlarged opportunities for training as WAAC to be increased six times original size

"The Army last year announced it needed the knowledge, skill, and special training of the women of the nation for the war effort, and the women of the nation are responding in thousands by joining the WAAC. There are scores of jobs, from typing to driving, which the Army feels women can do to release men for combat duty—and all the women ask, when they sign up, is, 'Give us a chance to help any way we can!'"

—OVETA CULP HOBBY, Director, WAAC

By executive order of The President, the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps is authorized to recruit to the full strength of 150,000 authorized by Congress. And December 1st, another training center opens in Daytona Beach, Florida.

The WAAC is giving valuable service to the Army. The list of essential duties it is performing grows constantly. Never before in U. S. history have there been such opportunities for alert, patriotic women — opportunities to serve our country in its hour of need — opportunities for advancement, training and experience which will be valuable in the post-war world.

If you long to do your share in America's drive to victory, join this new, expanding corps now. See the partial list of jobs below. See the pay scale and ranks which now are equivalent to the Army's. Enrollment is open to women 21 to 44, inclusive, regardless of race, creed or color—all officers are commissioned from the ranks.

Every WAAC knows her contribution is helping the nation directly, personally — her work behind the lines, here and overseas, releases a soldier for the battlefront.

Here is your chance to do the work of a soldier so that he may fight. For full information see your local U. S. Army Recruiting and Induction Station today.

Pay Scale in the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps

Officers	Equiv. Rank	Base Monthly Pay

Extra Benefits In Unemployment Insurance Law

Albany, Jan. 26—An adjustment in the form of three additional weekly benefit payments for a large group of New York state workers is provided in an amendment to the Unemployment Insurance Law, which was signed by Governor Lehman today.

The extra checks are designated to compensate for a shift in the "benefit year"—the period during which unemployed persons may receive benefit payments based on wages in a previous calendar year—from the period April 1-March 31 to the period June 1-May 31.

Here's the way the change will affect workers whose 1940 earnings made them eligible for benefits during the 1941-1942 benefit year ending March 31, 1942, according to an explanation by Milton O. Laysen, executive director of the Division of Placement and Unemployment Insurance: (1) If they have not exhausted their benefits by March 31 and are unemployed after that date, they may collect additional payments during April and May. (2) If they have collected the maximum of thirteen benefit checks by April 1, they may claim three additional benefit payments if unemployed for three additional weeks during April or May. However, their additional claims will not be accepted before April 1. (3) All persons who are receiving benefits at the end of the old benefit year—March 31—will be eligible to receive a total of sixteen checks up to June 1, 1942, if they are unemployed.

In no case, however, may the total number of payments exceed 16 for the period April 1, 1941 to May 31, 1942.

On and after June 1, 1942, Mr. Loysen said, all unemployed workers will start from "scratch"—with rights to benefits for a maximum of 13 weeks based on earnings during the calendar year 1941.

Employers subject to the law also will benefit as an indirect result of the change in benefit year. An amended regulation of the industrial commissioner, made possible by the amendment, has been filed with the secretary of state extending the due date for quarterly tax and payroll reports from the 15th to the last day of the month following the close of each calendar quarter. This will now coincide with the filing date for federal returns.

Mr. Loysen said that even though the regulation was not effective on the 15th of this month, his division will consider all returns for the fourth quarter of 1941 on time if they are received on or before January 31.

Don Nelson—The Kid From Across the Tracks

DONALD M. NELSON
Before and after he took up smoking

By HENRY B. JAMESON
(AP) Feature Service

HANNIBAL, MO.—Donald M. Nelson lived on the "wrong side" of Bear Creek here as a boy but that made no difference. He was, in spite of it, one of the best known and best liked kids in town.

He was a handsome, raw-boned youth; a brilliant student but not a bookworm; a good athlete; a promising young actor who always played the villain in school plays, and leader of the South Side gang which lined up and threw rocks at the North Siders who tried to come over their way.

Some of his old schoolmates still recall how they envied Don because he was the only kid on the South Side who owned a goat cart.

Little Lord Fauntleroy

He wasn't a toughie—in fact he wore his Lord Fauntleroy suit longer than most of the boys—but he got into plenty of fights and usually won.

That Lord Fauntleroy was one of the dark moments in Donald's life. At the grown-up age of eight or nine his grandmother, with whom he lived, still insisted on his wearing it to Sunday School.

The other boys snickered plenty but didn't dare to laugh out loud. They knew it meant a poke in the nose after church.

Normal, American Boy

And so it was the life of a normal, red-blooded American boy in the closing years of the "horse and buggy" era that Donald Nelson, the nation's new war production boss, spent in Hannibal, the boyhood home of Mark Twain, in the 1890's and the early part of the new century.

Born in 1888, he was the son of Quincy Nelson, a "katy" railroad engineer, and Mary Ann Mac Donald Nelson, both well known and popular residents. The old frame house that was his birthplace still stands in the 1200 block on Lyon Street.

Donald was barely three years old when his mother died and he was reared by Grandmother MacDonald. The South Side may have been called the "wrong side" but old timers recall a lot of fine folk came from over there.

Rollicking Boyhood

Those rollicking boyhood days are still near to Nelson's heart. He still likes to live over those times when he played corner-lot baseball, carried newspapers, explored the caves and roamed the hills and trails made famous by Tow Sawyer and Huck Finn.

His long and gruelling days in Washington are not too busy to hark back to them. This was demonstrated recently when John W. Mahoney, one of Donald's boyhood chums, went to Washington on a national defense mission. Nelson was elated over Mahoney's presence and after the business was settled, they slipped off to the quiet of his private office to talk over "kid days" while important callers cooled their heels outside.

Nelson was an honor student at the Hannibal High School from which he was graduated in 1906, and the University of Missouri where he won membership in both Tau Beta Pi and Alpha Chi Sigma, honorary engineering and chemistry fraternities, respectively.

Lessons Came First

Even as a youngster, his lessons came first. When the other boys came home from school, they flung their books on the table and dashed out doors to play. When Don came home from school, he got his lessons done first and then went out to play.

His powers of concentration were such that he didn't have to study hard," recalls Sinclair Mainland, former mayor of Hannibal and Nelson's roommate at Missouri. "He always said in those days that his exercise consisted of running up and down a column of figures."

This is gross exaggeration because Nelson was fond of all sports and played baseball and football in high school. Mainland insists his temper was all that kept him off the college teams.

"Temper?" says Mainland, "they talk about his being so calm and easy going now, but he really had a temper in those days."

Nelson played in one baseball game at Missouri—he was supposed to be the best first baseman the coach had ever seen—but he got in a hot argument with the umpire and walked off the field determined to stick to chemistry.

Contrary to some reports that he worked his way through college tending furnaces and doing odd jobs, friends say Nelson had a good allowance for those days—$50 or $60 a month—and any waiting on tables or firing furnaces that he did was for extra pocket change.

Expert Pool Player

He was one of the best pool players in his class, and always had the smelliest pipe on the campus.

Nelson wanted to be a school teacher; he has hinted that he still would like to return to "Old Mizzou" as a professor of chemistry. He took what he intended to be a temporary job in 1912 in the laboratories of Sears, Roebuck & Company, with the expectation that as soon as he had saved enough money he would go to Princeton for his doctor's degree.

Instead he rose to a $70,000-a-year job as vicepresident, a position he relinquished to devote all his energies to winning the war in the second most important job in the nation.

The home folks were not surprised to hear that he forgot to ask about the salary—many times smaller—until he was already on the payroll.

The Complacent Arab and the Creeping Camel!

You know the story. The complacent Arab first allowed the camel to put his HEAD in the tent. Then his SHOULDERS. Finally the camel pushed ALL the way in . . . crowded the Arab out into the cold.

In that way, too, a free people can allow one little restriction to follow another . . . until FREEDOM is crowded out. How can WE avoid it? The answer is simple: The people must know WHAT is happening. They must have a FREE PRESS to tell them the facts.

In Germany, Hitler muzzled the press . . . signed up Goebbels. Then when a restrictive law was passed, no newspaper could criticize. The press HAD to say: "You will like this fine new law! It is good for the state!" And the people believed it. For that was all the news they had. So they passed into POLITICAL slavery . . .

But that wasn't all! Hitler, for example, brought out a motor car. He told the press to say it was "The Best That Could Be Made." Competition was chained and muzzled. The public read only Hitler's claims. This way, and in a thousand others, they lost their right to choose. So they lost their ECONOMIC freedom, too!

Remember, a dictatorship cannot LIVE with a free press, a democracy cannot live WITHOUT it. FACTS are the bedrock under your democratic right of deciding what to do, where to go, what to buy, how to vote.

Don't imagine the wide Atlantic safeguards freedom of the press in America! For the REAL danger is right here . . . in COMPLACENCY . . . in taking this freedom too much for granted.

The publisher can't do the job alone. It is YOUR responsibility, too! For it is your freedom, as well as ours, which MUST [be protected!

"But," you ask, "just what can I do?"

To begin with, read your newspaper more carefully than ever. It brings you the FACTS. Think about what you read. Watch for restrictions (beyond those really necessary in time of emergency), restrictions not only on the press, but on ANY of your freedoms. Should you spot one, talk to your friends about it! Wake THEM up, too! Write to your editor! Be an ACTIVE citizen!

For, if you are complacent, democracy may be crowded out. Remember the Arab and the Camel!

In Germany, Italy, Russia, Japan, a government agency decides what the people shall read and hear. Not so in America. Do your part to preserve the American way of life.

Read, each Tuesday in this space, the messages about your liberty and how America's newspapers help you defend it. Your letters of comment will be appreciated by the editor and by this committee—Newspaper Publishers Committee, 420 Lexington Avenue, New York City.

Employers Must Post Compliance Certificate

Albany, Jan. 27—A regulation of the industrial commissioner requires that all employers subject to the New York State Unemployment Insurance Law, except employers of workers in personal or domestic service, must post a certificate, stating that they are complying with the law, in a conspicuous and easily accessible place in their establishment, it was pointed out today by Milton O. Loysen, executive director of the Division of Placement and Unemployment Insurance. Employers of domestic help must show the certificate to their employes.

These certificates of compliance, which will be issued yearly, certify that the employer has filed payroll reports for each calendar quarter of the preceding year and has made all payments due based on such reports. They cannot be displayed on or after July 1 of the year following the year in which they were issued.

"The certificate, measuring 8½ inch by 11 inches is printed in black ink on white paper," said Mr. Loysen. "It supplements the usual poster that all subpect employers have been required to display in the past. Employers will continue to show the poster as well as the certificate, but the poster, of course, will not certify that they have complied with the law."

Ellenville Man Charged With Assault

Charged with having held up an Ellenville colored man for an hour or so, with a shotgun, Orville Justice, 30, of 187 Center street, Ellenville, was brought to the Ulster county jail Thursday afternoon to await a hearing on December 3 before Police Justice Herman Cohen on a charge of assault in the first degree.

According to the story told Justice Cohen following Justice's arrest Wednesday, the defendant had gone to a house on Clinton avenue, Ellenville, which is occupied by some colored people, and asked for drink. They told him they had none, but finally sent out and bought some liquor. Justice stayed for some time, then left for his home, taking with him Alphonso Parsons, it being alleged that he promised Parsons a jacket if he would go with him.

Arriving at the house, Justice is said to have taken a shotgun from a closet and threatened Parsons with it, stating that he had been "rolled" for $60. After some time had elapsed a girl who lives in the house called Officer Abe Rand of the Ellenville Police Department. Rand took the gun, which is said to have been loaded, away from Justice and placed him under arrest.

Justice was arrested in July, 1941, charged with first degree assault, following an affair in which a knife was used, but the grand jury failed to indict and the charge was dismissed in September of that year. According to information received by Justice Cohen he also had been in trouble previously in West Virginia.

Henry D. Fagher Thanked For Efficient Services

At the reorganization meeting of the members of the Kerhonkson Draft Board, at which Charles C. Walden, Jr., of Stone Ridge was named chairman, resolutions were adopted thanking Henry D. Fagher of Kingston, R. D., retiring chairman, for the untiring and efficient work he had done. Mr. Fagher, who is cashier of the Rondout National Bank, and who has been a member of the board since its inception in October, 1940, gave pressure of personal business as his reason for giving up the work, adding that he felt that a man who lived nearby would be able to devote more time to the affairs of the board.

Clark Gets Medal

Washington, Nov. 27 (AP)—Lieutenant General Mark W. Clark, who traveled by submarine to Algiers to conduct negotiations with French officials prior to the American occupation, has been awarded the distinguished service medal, Secretary of War Stimson announced today. The citation accompanying the medal praised Clark, who at the time was a major general, for distinguished service in the planning and organization for the African operations.

Machinery Is Released

Washington, Nov. 27 (AP)—Secretary of Agriculture Wickard issued an order today releasing farm machinery and equipment held by dealers to permit such supplies to be rationed among farmers by county farm rationing committees. The order becomes effective tomorrow.

Substantial Reduction Is Foreshadowed in Budget

down the amount to be raised by taxation to around $675,000.

Last year the total gross budget was $887,544.47 from which refunds and charge backs amounting to $64,169.17 were made leaving a total net budget of $823,375.30. Of that $106,030.51 was for administrative, $120,866.20 for judicial, $41,489.93 for protection of persons and property, $15,300 for educational, $302,859.54 for highways and $216,511.49 for charities.

Earlier this month County Treasurer Chester A. Lyons reported a balance of $382,339.50 in the highway fund, but against this fund there remained certain charges which must be deducted before the close of the present year.

Fourth Ward Seeks Flag

Proud of the fact that their ward has over 275 men in the service of Uncle Sam, some of whom are on the fighting fronts, the air raid wardens of the Fourth Ward are sponsoring a campaign to purchase a service flag and at the request of Zone Warden John McGrane, all sector and post wardens of the Fourth Ward are urged to attend the final meeting which is to be held on Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock at their headquarters, 239 Hasbrouck avenue. The cooperation of all the wardens is needed in this campaign. James Howard, chairman of the service flag committee, will make his final reports at this meeting.

Controls Estate

Philadelphia, Nov. 27 (AP)—Donald L. Brubaker, of Altoona, Pa., has been given control of the $53,880 estate of his half-brother, the late August J. Brubaker of Philadelphia, in a ruling by Judge Charles L. Klien of Orphans court. August Brubaker, in a will dated November, 1940, willed the estate to his brother Donald with the request "it be used to relieve the distress of the poor and needy, and giving attention to certain specified individuals.

Cabinet Changes Ahead

Washington, Nov. 27 (AP)—A plan to solve the manpower situation is being advanced, a competent source said today, in a way which would involve changes in the President's cabinet. Should it go through, he reported, functions of the War Manpower Commission would be transferred to the Labor Department and Harold L. Ickes would become secretary of labor instead of Interior secretary.

French Scuttle Fleet at Toulon

elements, which, in spite of given assurances, had been prepared and was about to be carried out."

A Berlin broadcast acknowledged that massive Russian tank forces had achieved "a fairly deep penetration" of German defense lines northeast of Moscow, with the Russians striking simultaneously in the Velikie Luki region, 265 miles west of Moscow, and near the big Nazi base at Rzhev.

Rzhev is 135 miles northwest of Moscow.

In Libya the victorious British 8th army prepared to assault Nazi Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's defenses at El Agheila. British headquarters said tersely there was "nothing to report from our land forces" in the westward drive; an Italian communique asserted that "thrusts of strong enemy exploring elements" in Libya were repulsed.

On the Tunisian front, spearheads of Lieut. Gen. Kenneth A. N. Anderson's Anglo-American expeditionary force were reported to have advanced within 15 miles of Tunis, the Axis-held capital, and battled Axis troops at Mateur, 25 miles south of Bizerte.

Still another allied column was officially credited with routing the Germans from Mejez El Bab, 30 miles southwest of Tunis.

If successful, the effect of these synchronized thrusts would be to split the Axis forces in Bizerte and Tunis and also cut off the route of Axis escape southeastward to Libya.

United Nations headquarters in North Africa said allied troops were now "advancing successfully" northeastward—in the direction of Tunis and the Gulf of Gabes coast—after capturing Mejez El Bab over stiff resistance.

A German radio reporting that the allies had surged forward within 15 miles of Tunis indicated that they had advanced 15 miles through the 30-mile-deep perimeter of Axis defenses guarding the Bizerte-Tunis sector along the northeast coast.

On the flaming Stalingrad front, chaotic fighting raged across the lifelines of Hitler's imperilled siege armies and latest reports indicated that the fast-wheeling Red armies were now delving back from the west to strike at the invader's rear.

Citing the capture of seven towns in the Don river bend, Soviet headquarters announced:

"In this sector, they (Red army troops) threw remaining enemy units onto the eastern banks of the river Don."

Driving Germans Back

This apparently meant that the Russians now were actually driving the Germans back toward Stalingrad, tightening the noose after cutting off all but a 20-mile-wide avenue of escape.

Official Soviet dispatches said Marshal Semeon Timoshenko's eight-day-old offensive had rolled up a tally of 115,600 Axis troops killed or captured and possibly 150,000 others were wounded—a grand total of 265,600 knocked out of action.

Russian reports said the Red armies had already severed many, if not a large majority, of all roads of supply and escape and were pinning the estimated 300,000 survivors of the Axis siege armies into a 45-mile-wide strip between the Don and the Volga.

Front-line dispatches said that battle swirling across the frozen steppes was so confused it was impossible to define the lines clearly, but reported that in some places the Russian offensive had gained such momentum the fleeing Germans were overwhelmed before they could burn planes on airfields.

Overnight, the Stalingrad garrison struck out at German troops still holding positions in the ruined city, recapturing four large blocks in the northern factory section and killing 950 Nazis.

The extent of the German rout was high-lighted by a Soviet communique reporting the capture of 1,363 guns, 3,851 machine guns, 50,000 rifles, 1,320 tanks, 9,000 horses and 108 supply dumps.

Battle Is Developing

The battle for Tunisia, key North African buffer zone between allied-occupied Algeria and Italian Tripolitania, was developing speedily after a week of only minor clashes while the allies moved 300 miles eastward across the rugged Atlas mountains.

London quarters estimated the Axis now had 20,000 German and Italian troops in the French colony, and the Berlin radio reported that "naval and land forces have been able to pour men and materials into the country."

A Nazi broadcast also asserted that the German air force had won air superiority over Tunisia "with lightning speed," but offered no supporting evidence.

The German vaunted "superiority," however, did not prevent U. S. army planes from inflicting new havoc on the Nazi-held airdrome at Tunis, where 10 enemy planes were caught on the field and heavily bombed.

"No fighter opposition was encountered," allied headquarters said.

An Italian communique reported vaguely that "an engagement of armored cars ended in favor of Axis forces, which destroyed numerous enemy armored cars," but failed to note the locale of the action except that it was in Tunisia.

In the far Pacific, allied warplanes violently strafed Japanese troops crammed into the narrow Buna-Gona beachhead in New Guinea as the enemy, newly reinforced, still head off American and Australian forces.

A check on Japanese dead, disclosing new uniforms and equipment, showed that the enemy had succeeded in landing fresh reinforcements along the 12-mile shoreline despite heavy blows by Gen. Douglas MacArthur's aerial squadrons.

United Nations headquarters said there was little change in the battle picture in the last 24 hours, with allied troops maintaining a steady pressure from three sides.

On Guadalcanal Island, in the Solomons, no change was reported.

Students May Finish School in Fast Time

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 27 (AP)—Approval of additional or accelerated courses permitting certain students to complete high school in less than four years featured today a new policy of war-time education adopted by the State Board of Regents.

Dr. J. Hillis Miller, Associate Commissioner of Education, said the new policy is designed in part "to speed college and high school education without lowering the high standards established over many years." It's adoption follows numerous conferences with college officials and long consideration by the State Education Department.

In contrast, declared assistant Education Commissioner Edwin R. Van Kleek, these and other New York educators almost unanimously branded as "bargain basement education". The recent proposal of the National Educational policies Commission that selected students be allowed to take their last year of high school work in college.

"Mail order diplomas" was another epithet teachers bestowed on the plan, Dr. Van Kleek said. He himself declared the scheme "smacks of 'Alice in Wonderland.'"

Deweys Are Guests

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 27 (AP)—Republican Governor-Elect Thomas E. Dewey and Mrs. Dewey will be luncheon guests of Governor and Mrs. Lehman at the executive mansion tomorrow. While the Democratic chief executive discusses State Affairs with the former Manhattan prosecutor who takes over the governorship Jan. 1, Mrs. Dewey presumably will be getting from the state's first lady some housekeeping pointers on the historic old Mansion the Deweys will occupy the next four years.

Hitler Shows He Considers French Hostile to Axis

By JOHN EVANS

New York, Nov. 27 (AP)—Hitler certified by word and deed today to French patriotism and showed he considered the French army and navy hostile to the invading Germans.

Old Marshal Petain was said by the Nazi chief to have "taken no part in these activities" against Germany but Admiral Jean Darlan, Petain's former right-hand man and political heir was on record as asserting the Marshal really favored the Allies. Darlan has said Petain acted under duress in appealing vainly to the French in North Africa to resist American forces there.

The sixty-two warships at Toulon were reported scuttled while Germans and Italians were occupying by force the greatest of French naval bases. French troops, the Germans said, fired upon them.

Hitler in a letter to Petain asserted he had proof that French forces at Toulon was ordered November 12 not to fire if the American and British forces tried to land there.

This might refer to Admiral Darlan's November 12 broadcast from Allied headquarters in Africa in which the admiral "asked" the fleet to join the Allies. But there are two reasons why it might mean that Petain or high French military authorities in France gave the order; Darlan specifically avoided an "order" and throughout has limited his authority to North Africa.

Darlan at American headquarters knew very well that the Americans and British were not trying to land at Toulon and so far as known there was nothing in Darlan's broadcast that filled Hitler's specifications of an "order." If he referred to the broadcast, he was revealing nothing and probably would have mentioned Darlan.

Regardless of Hitler's stamp of approval on Marshal Petain, it is possible that Darlan was right in saying the marshal favored the Allies. It may be that Hitler sensed wide general civil military revolt in France and sought to avoid it by paying lip service to the aged marshal, honored as a soldier and as an upright man even by many of those who condemn him politically as having sacrificed French honor and French interests.

Darlan gains something from Hitler's sudden seizure of Toulon which he promised to leave in French hands. Darlan appears more clearly as being honestly in favor of American entrance into North Africa because as commander-in-chief of the navy he appears to represent the navy's hatred of Germany as shown by the scuttling of the fleet as the German approached. His loss of his nationality at the hands of Vichy today also adds something to that picture.

In sinking the fleet the French navy obeyed Darlan in keeping it out of German hands.

Soldier Had Appendicitis

A letter from Private Ray Stephano of Kingston, dated Wednesday stated that he was in the station hospital at Camp Lee, Va., recuperating from an appendicitis operation. Ray, who had had previous attacks, wrote that he was on his way to the rifle range Saturday which he was seized with an attack and fell to the ground.

his plane was thrown off its course by a storm and reached its base with only a few gallons of gasoline left.

When he walked into his headquarters yesterday afternoon, his tent mate, Maj. John T. Malloy, who was end coach at West Point when Saunders was coaching the line, touched his broad shoulders lightly and said, "an old Irish prayer didn't hurt did it?"

The Colonel grinned back, "I am a Christian now."

Everybody crowded around to hear the story as the Colonel sat on his cot with a healthy slug of medicinal Scotch.

The crew included Second Lieut. Nelson Levi, of Mullan, Idaho, bombardier, who was wounded severely in the thigh; and the following who escaped injury: First Lieut. Donald G. O'Brien; of Audubon, N. J., navigator; Tech. Sgt. Lester H. Williams, of Colbalt, Conn., aerial engineer; Staff Sgt. Joseph Delucia, of Reading Pa., assistant aerial engineer; Staff Sgt. Samuel Moses of Donora, Pa., radio operator; Sgt. Russell L. Hultgren, of Lavergne, Calif., assistant radio operator; Sgt. George J. Junget, of Alva, Fla., aerial gunner.

Colonel Saunders' Story

The Colonel told this story:

"We'd made our second run across the target about 8:30 a. m. when about 20 Zeros got on us. There was moderate anti-aircraft fire—not as bad as some I've seen—coming from shore batteries and some destroyers. The Zeros made headon attacks and they were plenty good—better than any I'd seen before. They came at us in a string.

"The co-pilot was wounded in the right leg and I went back to get the first aid kit. I'd just got back with it and was standing behind the cockpit when a machinegun bullet went through the pilot's heart. It killed him instantly. At the same time, the co-pilot was wounded in the stomach. The cockpit was all shot up.

"The pilot fell back. I got the co-pilot out and took over the controls from his seat on the right side. Both engines on the left side were out and a wing was on fire. The only thing right on the instrument panel was the clock. I couldn't stay in formation, so I told another plane to take the lead."

(Other pilots said Saunders plane at that time was "flopping around" so crazily they couldn't see how he continued to fly it.)

"From the co-pilot's seat, I couldn't trim the tabs and handle the plane with those two dead engines on the left, so I got the pilot's body out and moved into the pilot's seat. I decided to make for some overcast and so we dived down. The left wing was red hot. The bank and turn indicator showed we were in a spin. I could tell from the air speed indicator we weren't but it was pretty tough business flying on 'instruments' under the circumstances.

"We came out of the overcast at about 500 feet and I saw I'd have to put her down. This was about 20 minutes after the pilot and co-pilot had been hit. Other planes stayed around to protect us but the Zeros didn't follow us that far. I told the other planes to take our position and then headed for a little island in order to come down as close to land as possible.

"We were about a mile and a half out. The navigator was up with me and the rest of the crew was in the navigator compartment, all set for the water landing. I brought her down dragging the tail on the water at 95 miles an hour. The wings hit and there was really a sudden stop.

Out Through Window

"The navigator and I went out, sliding through the window in the cockpit—the smallest hole I ever went through in my life. The tail broke off and the rest of the crew went out through the break.

"We thought the co-pilot was dead but he said, 'hey get me out' and we did. We had on life vests but had been too busy to inflate them. The nose went down and the fuselage flipped over and crowned me. We got two rubber boats inflated and put the co-pilot into one of them and started paddling for shore. He died on the way in.

"When we reached the island, not knowing whether Japs were around, we pulled everything back into the jungle and made a bed for Levi, the bombardier, on one of the boats and made him as comfortable as we could. That was about the middle of the morning.

"Two boats full of black natives came over to us. One of them spoke a little English and they helped us build shelters. In the afternoon, some others came over in a hundred-foot canoe that would make any crew at Poughkeepsie look sick. They had a beautiful even swing.

"The natives were clean and civil. They liked Americans. They took us to their village and put us to bed in a well built wooden hut. That saved Levi's life. It rained hard all night but we had a good sleep. The next afternoon, a Navy plane piloted by Lieut. (JG) Charles F. Willies, of Bile, Ala., picked us up.

"It's good to be back."

Colonel Saunders is called "blondy" because what hair he has left is coal black. He coached at West Point from 1932 through 1939. As an Army tackle, he was reputed to have "the best pair of hands in football."

At Hickam Field (Honolulu) on December 7, he flew one of the few planes that got into the air.

His wife is at Aberdeen. He said: "Send her my love. Tell her the old Irish luck's holding up and will until we drive the Japs out of Tokyo."

How Fleet Is Disposed

(By The Associated Press)

From Vichy announcements and information obtained from well-informed quarters in London it appeared today that this is the disposition of the French fleet.

At Toulon, reported all scuttled:

Three battleships—the 28,000-ton Dunkerque and Strasbourg and the 22,000-ton Provence.

Four heavy and three light cruisers of 10,000 and 7,600 tons, unnamed.

France's only seaplane tender, the Commandant Teste.

A total of 62 warships not counting sloops and auxiliaries.

Sunk or put out of action at Casablanca and Oran during allied landings:

One battleship, Jean Bart, 35,000 tons, beached.

Light 7,249-ton cruiser Primauguet, beached.

Four destroyers disabled.

Three submarines sunk.

One submarine damaged.

At Dakar, where military authorities are now cooperating with Admiral Darlan—

One battleship, Richelieu, 35,000 tons, damaged in 1940.

Three cruisers of 7,600 tons each, Gloire, Montcalm and Georges Leygues.

Three destroyers.

Eight to 12 submarines.

Submarine tender, Jules Verne.

Demobilized at Alexandria—

One battleship, 22,189-ton Lorraine.

Four cruisers.

In Fighting French hands—

Two battleships, 22,189-ton Paris and Courbet.

Five destroyers.

Four submarines.

Demobilized at Martinique—

Aircraft carrier Bearn.

Two cruisers.

to marry her after this show is over."

He chatted on for a bit and then with a smile dropped his curly head into his hands and fell asleep—just like a kid playing at war. I looked around me. All the rest of the passengers had, soldier-like promptly gone to sleep. It's a trick you acquire at the front.

The door of the pilot's cabin opened and the co-pilot called to me.

"The captain would like you to come up and ride beside him," he reported. "You can see better up there."

And so began a memorable trip. The skipper brought the plane down to a height of 250 feet so that the ground beneath lay like an open picture book. We swung over the line of the retreat.

Everywhere is the record of a great victory and a great collapse—torn earth and the wreckage of latest designs in machines and equipment of war. But most impressive was the clear indication of speed.

Fleeing in Panic

At times the Boche were fleeing in such panic that their transports spread out for several hundred yards across the desert on either side of the military highway which skirts the Mediterranean for hundreds of miles. You can see tracks of wheels running like those of a vast chariot race westward across the sands.

Where the battleline ran between El Alamein and the Qattara depression the whole terrain was pitted with shell and bomb holes. It was here the British began the offensive that broke through Rommel's defense after a fierce engagement which at times involved hand-to-hand fighting.

After the first bloody stand, panic seized the Axis forces. Signs of combat lessen and the marks of speed increase. Here you can see mountainous evidence of the devastation wrought on Axis tanks, warplanes and transport by the British and American air forces.

The fleeing Boche and Italians didn't even pause at Halfaya (Hellfire) Pass—a strong position south of Bardia where they would have made a stand if capable of holding it all.

Here the escarpment shoots up from the desert and forms a plateau which continues westward. The so-called pass isn't a pass at all, but a zig-zag highway from the desert floor to the top of the escarpment. Actually there are two highways, four miles apart, and either of them could be defended indefinitely by a well-equipped army.

Rommel had on time for defense here, however. His whole anxiety was to escape the merciless punishment being dealt out by pursuing air fleets. So his troops, transport and tanks fled up the serpentine roads and raced on towards Tobruk and points west.

The marks of outright panic continue to the neighborhood of Tobruk, where Rommel took a deep breath and pulled up his socks. From there on the speed was maintained, but evidence of a debacle was lacking.

By the way, the fine little harbor of Tobruk was filled with sunken ships, both transport and war vessels. Many Axis craft have made Tobruk their last port of call in recent months.

From Tobruk onward, Rommel proceeded fast and methodically.

Allied air fleets continued to plaster him, but he did better in salvaging his equipment. Thus he finally came to a spot where he could make a stand against the pursuers.

Having followed this trail of devastation, one finds it hard to believe the marshal has been able to preserve any great striking power in the army which made the retreat.

He likely will be able to call on some reserves at Tripoli and Hitler undoubtedly will be doing his utmost to bolster his servant's forces.

Arkville Man Spots Abandoned Automobile

Thursday afternoon about 5 o'clock as Harrison D. Todd of Arkville was driving his car along the Modena road he turned the car radio to the short wave and picked up a state police call of a stolen automobile, giving the color of the car and the make as well as the license number.

A few minutes later Mr. Todd saw an auto parked off the road, and apparently abandoned. He investigated and saw that the license plate corresponded with the number of the car reported over the air as stolen and notified the sheriff's office of his discovery.

The automobile had been reported stolen from in front of 74 Fair street at 10 o'clock Wednesday night by Miss Edith Davis. She was notified by the police department of the finding of her car.

A Dodge coupe belonging to John Davis of 26 Abeel street, reported stolen from Fair street Wednesday night, was recovered Thursday evening by Deputy Sheriff Leonard Belmore and Mr. Davis. The car was located earlier Thursday evening by Harrison D. Todd of Arkville, who reported to the sheriff's office that he had seen the car parked in an apple orchard one mile below New Paltz on the Modena road.

WAAC EXPANDED BY EXECUTIVE ORDER!

New facilities and enlarged opportunities for training as WAAC to be increased six times original size

"The Army last year announced it needed the knowledge, skill, and special training of the women of the nation for the war effort, and the women of the nation are responding in thousands by joining the WAAC. There are scores of jobs, from typing to driving, which the Army feels women can do to release men for combat duty—and all the women ask, when they sign up, is, 'Give us a chance to help any way we can!'"

—OVETA CULP HOBBY, Director, WAAC

By executive order of The President, the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps is authorized to recruit to the full strength of 150,000 authorized by Congress. And December 1st, another training center opens in Daytona Beach, Florida.

The WAAC is giving valuable service to the Army. The list of essential duties it is performing grows constantly. Never before in U. S. history have there been such opportunities for alert, patriotic women — opportunities to serve our country in its hour of need — opportunities for advancement, training and experience which will be valuable in the post-war world.

If you long to do your share in America's drive to victory, join this new, expanding corps now. See the partial list of jobs below. See the pay scale and ranks which now are equivalent to the Army's. Enrollment is open to women 21 to 44, inclusive, regardless of race, creed or color—all officers are commissioned from the ranks.

Every WAAC knows her contribution is helping the nation directly, personally — her work behind the lines, here and overseas, releases a soldier for the battlefront.

Here is your chance to do the work of a soldier so that he may fight. For full information see your local U. S. Army Recruiting and Induction Station today.

Pay Scale in the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps

Officers	Equiv. Rank	Base Monthly Pay

ALIEN IDENTIFICATION

All German, Italian and Japanese aliens in this vicinity must apply at the nearest first or second class, or county seat, post office for a certificate of identification between February 9 and February 28, 1942. The requirement applies to all enemy nationals 14 years of age or over who have not taken the oath of allegiance before a federal judge, the final step in acquiring American citizenship.

The regulations require enemy aliens in applying for identification certificates to provide a photograph of themselves, to be attached to the identity card, and to answer a number of questions concerning their current activities. Printed directions for the filing of applications will be available at post offices.

The object of the new enemy alien law is the dual one of strengthening our internal safety and protecting the loyal alien, even if he has become technically an alien enemy.

COLLEGE CREDIT IN ARMY

Colleges, like most other institutions, get a new idea once in a while. A good example is the reported plan in Columbia College, of New York City, to accept army service as credit toward a college degree.

"This plan has not yet been officially approved by the faculty," Dean Hawkes says, "but it may be that services with the country's armed forces for a year, even though it be kitchen police, will count for something in the college when the boy later applies for his degree."

When you think it over, and consider all that an army recruit learns nowadays in training camp, not to mention what he may learn in actual war service, that may seem a masterly understatement. The educational value of military training is more appreciated in Canada, where fewer men go to college, than it is in the States. Recruits who have had ambition but few opportunities usually brag, when they come home, about the education they're getting.

In either country the physical education alone is usually worth more than all the athletics a fellow is likely to get in college. Incidentally there is quite a bit of real education acquired by young men and young women in war industry jobs that's worth as much to them and to their country as a lot of high school and college learning.

WORLD'S CENTER

In the last war, and afterwards, we went to Europe when we wanted to talk things over with other nations. The best place to do it was in Geneva, while the League established there was a going concern. That is all changed now. Only the empty shell of the League remains. But there is a new world center.

"Washington is, in fact, a kind of wartime Geneva," writes Anne O'Hare McCormick in the New York Times. Observers and reporters come there now from everywhere. Washington is now the best place for "a second-hand but fairly round view of the world." People from the other important capitals come there as to the heart of things, to get the world news and the spirit of events. And our government and citizens welcome it. We no longer regard visitors as alien.

"One of the strangest things that have happened in this country in six weeks," concludes Miss McCormick, "is the matter-of-fact acceptance of the thought of international leadership. Hardly less strange is the assumption among Washington's foreign observers that the peace, when it comes at last, will be 'a New World Peace'."

WASHINGTON AWAKES

As government gets big, there seems to develop a sort of paralysis in public service. Somehow this happens far more in public administration than in the private administration that we call "business."

Government tends to choke itself. Look at Washington, for instance. People step on each other's feet and get jammed up going in and out of doors. And the worst of it is the documental jam. Everybody writes letters to everybody else and calls up everybody on the telephone and sends messengers when the telephone fails, and then sends messengers to find those who have got lost, and so on. Filing systems fill all the available office space and then burrow into catacombs underground, where people enter and are never heard of again.

Apparently the only remedy for such a state of enchantment is a great shock. The shock of war, for example. Then the spell may be broken, government may revive, the power of intelligent and creative action may be regained. Office-holders and administrators may rub their eyes and start functioning again as a team, all the more effective, perhaps, from their enchanted sleep.

Something like this seems to have happened when Donald Nelson appeared, as from the wand of a wizard, and took over war production in Washington.

THIRD REGISTRATION

A million men are expected to register in New York State at the third registration of Selective Service on February 14, 15 and 16 and it's the job of these men to know they are required to register. Brigadier General Ames T. Brown, director, states that printed invitations to register will not be sent out. This third registration is for all men between the ages of 20 and 44.

Registration is mandatory, so plan on registering on one of the above dates. Possible and even probable deferment is no excuse for not registering. Every man, whether citizen or alien, within the age bracket must register.

If the Russians want to insist that "V" stands for "Vodka," who are we to object? The main thing is the kick.

CLOTHING AND AIR CONDITIONING

One of the difficulties air conditioning engineers are finding is to provide a temperature which will suit both men and women. It is found that the temperature that suits men is 2 to 5 degrees lower than the temperature that suits women. As a result buildings are usually overheated in the winter to suit women and overcooled in the summer to suit men.

In an article in the Journal of the American Medical Association, C. P. Yaglou M.S., and Anne Messer, A.B., Boston, point out the importance of clothing in air conditioning.

"The experiments were carried out in an air conditioned room by exposing healthy men and women, mostly employes of the Harvard Schoool of Public Health, to ordinary conditions that prevailed in the laboratories and offices of the school on the day of the experiment. The subjects dressed and ate normally before coming to the tests in the morning or afternoon and during the tests they sat in school arm chairs and read, wrote or conversed. In a special series of tests women were dressed in men's clothes and men in women's. Two hours was allowed to permit the subjects to get used to the conditions before making a record of skin, clothing, and body temperatures, sensations of comfort, and metabolic rate (rate at which body processes were working).

When men and women wearing their customary winter clothing were exposed to a temperature of 72°F., a humidity of about 30 per cent, and the air in the room moving 20 feet per minute, the skin temperature of the women was about 2 degrees lower than men's, while the clothing temperature was 2 degrees higher.

On an average, the hands and feet of women were almost 5 degrees cooler than the men's, the arms 4 degrees cooler, and the body only one-half degree cooler than men's. Under these conditions most of the men were comfortable but the women generally were cold.

When men and women wore similar clothes, they were comfortable at about the same temperature.

Other tests were made and the conclusion of the article was that differences of comfort standards between men and women are largely due to differences in dress and these differences can be overcome by adjustments of clothing.

These research workers suggest that if women dress more warmly in winter and men more coolly in summer, keeping the temperature suitable to both would not be a hard problem.

Foods Rich in Vitamin B 1

We have all read of the wonderful results obtained in many cases of neuritis, lack of appetite, and general run down condittion by the use of vitamin B. Dr. Barton has prepared for readers a special leaflet outlining foods rich in vitamin B. All you have to do to obtain it is send a three-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope to Dr. Barton, Post Office Box 150, Times Square Station, New York, N. Income Tax

YOUR FEDERAL INCOME TAX
No. 20
WHAT IS A "FAMILY"?

"In one household" is a phrase which confronts many taxpayers when they make out their income tax returns. What do the regulations mean when they classify as the head of a family one who actually supports and maintains "in one household" a certain number of dependents for which he is allowed a personal exemption of $1,500 as the head of a family?

Income tax regulations are not narrow in interrupting this phrase. It may mean the taxpayer's personal residence, an apartment, rooms in a boarding house, living quarters in a hotel, or such other place as she or he may occupy as a temporary or permanent residence.

It is not always necessary that a taxpayer and his dependents live under the one roof the entire year in order that he be allowed the exemption given the head of a family. If the common home is maintained, and the parent is away much of the time on business, or a child is away at school or on a visit, that is still "one household," and the exemption is allowed. If it is unavoidable for a parent to keep his dependent children with relatives, or in a boarding house, while he lives elsewhere—that constitutes "one household." But a person who gives the dependent of another a home is not, under the income tax regulations, the head of a family.

Another term that may be, in some cases, confusing or perplexing to many taxpayers is "living together," in the case of a husband and wife. Again the income tax regulations are liberal in interpreting a phrase which, precisely defined, might do an injustice to a taxpayer. When a common home is maintained, and it becomes necessary for the husband to be away on business occasionally and temporarily, or the wife is absent on a visit, the $1,500 exemption still applies. The relation is not changed, neither is the exemption forfeited, if either husband or wife is unavoidably confined in a sanatorium.

Washington Daybook

By Jack Stinnett

WASHINGTON—The capital in wartime:

The lowly private seems to be coming into his own. In the House of Representatives, they are pointwith pride to Pvt. Frank C. Osmers of Haworth, N. J. Private Osmers was serving his third year in the House when he voted for war on Dec. 8 and immediately went out and enlisted. The 34-year-old representative is now at Camp Lee, Va., and according to proud cronies here, he wouldn't turn a political finger to get a commission.

Down at Fort Knox, Ky., the other day they named the main parade grounds Brooks Field. The honor was for Pvt. Robert H. Brooks, a Negro and the first member of the armored forces killed in the present war. Private Brooks was killed in the Philppines the day after Pearl Harbor.

And now along comes Sen. Harry S. Truman of Missouri to write another epic of a private into the Congressional Record. In this instance, the private was in the southern army in the Civil War.

The memento to Pvt. Johnny Allen, of Mississippi, gave the Senator an opportunity to quote a newspaper from his bailiwick which said: "Let'snot forget the private. He is the gentleman who bears the brunt of the battle; he is the hero of every American war the best soldier in the world."

Pvt. Johhny Allen made considerable use of his lack of commission, too, when he was running for Congress aginst the Confederate General Tucker. The doughly general closed one of his speeches by saying: "Seventeen years ago last night, my fellow citizens, after a hard-fought battle on yonder hill, I bivouacked under yonder clumb of trees. Those of you who remember, as I do, the times that tried men's souls, will not forget their humble servant when the primaries shall be held."

In those days, that was potent political medicine, but Private Allen had some that was stronger. After praising the brave general and saying that what he said was very true about his having slept in yon clump of trees, Private Allen added:

"It is also true, my fellow citizens, that I was vidette picket, and stood guard over him while he slept. Now then, fellow citizens, all of you who were generals, and had privates to stand guard over you while you slept, vote for General Tucker; and all of you who were privates and stood guard over the generals while they slept, vote for Pvt. John Allen."

That election marked the beginning of Private Allen's 16 years in Congress.

For the sake of the record, Washington ought to make a volume out of its civilian defense trials and tribulations. The latest: For weeks, the District of Columbia OCD has been drumming into the populace the formula for its air raids alarms—five short blasts at half-second intervals, repeated three times.

The fact that we had no sirens didn't keep the OCD from publicizing its formula. Now we've got sirens, 24 bright new electric ones, the first of the batch that will blanket the city. But we haven't got the formula.

The new sirens were not designed to blast at half-second intervals. The best they will do is toot every three seconds. And, according to the manufacturer, that's about the best any big sirens will do. So D. C. has got to learn itself a new alarm.

"AT CENTURY'S TURN"

By H. L. VAN DEUSEN

Several important events in the religious life of Kingston marked the first week of November, 1923, including the farewell address of the Rev. Adam Schmidtkonz as pastor of the Spring Street Lutheran Church; the laying of the corner stone of the Charles Ramsey Memorial Building at the First Presbyterian Church, and the death of the Rev. Dr. Platt N. Chase, long active in the religious and political life of the city.

The Rev. Dr. Chase, who was a retired Methodist minister, died on November 1, 1923, in his home on Green street, at the age of 75 years. His last charge as an active pastor was the church at Esopus where he served during 1907-09.

Following his retirement from the active ministry he made his home on Green street, and for years was active in the Citizens' League and the Ulster county Prohibition party, serving as secretary of the latter for a number of years.

The Rev. Mr. Schmidtkonz, who had served the Spring Street Lutheran Church as pastor for 35 years, on Sunday, November 4, 1923, preached his farewell sermon in that church. He was succeeded as pastor by the Rev. William H. Pretzsch of Maspeth, L. I., who assumed his pastoral duties in December of that year.

The retiring pastor was one of the best known Lutheran clergymen in the Hudson river valley, and was long active in the religious life of the community.

It was also on Sunday, November 4, of that year, that the corner stone of the Ramsey Memorial Building was laid by Charles Ramsey who had given the building to the First Presbyterian Church, where he had been an active member for many years.

The corner stone was laid by Mr. Ramsey at the impressive ceremonies that were held in the new building.

The Rev. Dr. Putnam Cady was pastor of the church that year, and he presided at the ceremonies in which the Rev. Dr. Charles G. Ellis, pastor of the Rondout Presbyterian Church, and the Rev. Arthur S. Cole, pastor of the Albany Avenue Baptist Church, participated.

A brief history of the church was given by Russel R. Dana one of the trustees of the church.

The ceremonies were held in the church, and at the close the congregation proceeded to the new building, an annex to the church proper, where the corner stone was laid.

Naval Experts Are Asking Why U.S. Fleet Was Not Mobilized on or Soon After November 26

By DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington, Jan. 27 — Why wasn't the fleet of the United States navy mobilized on November 26 or in the eleven days thereafter if the navy department considered the situation between America and Japan to be on the edge of war?

This penetrating question is being asked by naval experts after reading the Roberts report. Admiral Kimmel and other officers in his command at Hawaii, it is related, were accustomed for many months to getting messages from Washington telling of the delicate relations with Japan but there was always the caution expressed to them that the navy must take no steps to offend Japan or to produce an overt act.

This it is argued was one reason why all the naval officers at Hawaii almost without exception did not expect any form of attack. If Washington didn't see fit to proclaim a mobilization, the officers naturally believed the situation could not be as serious as represented.

The fleet was scattered on December 8. Some ships were on the west coast in what might be termed recreational journeys and some were engaged in normal exercises.

It is not the business of the commander in chief of the Pacific fleet to mobilize. These are orders which Washington is expected to send out. It may be that the court martial proceedings for Admiral Kimmel will be welcomed by the latter because it will furnish an opportunity for all these points to be thoroughly explored. That there are two sides to the story is generally conceded among naval men many of whom are pointing out that it was the business of the army to protect against air attack and that the concentration of the fleet in Pearl Harbor was a policy determined upon in high quarters in Washington and not by Admiral Kimmel.

There are, incidentally, many comments heard to the effect that Admiral Richardson should not have been removed from his command and Admiral Kimmel substituted and that when the vacancy was created the right man to have succeeded him was Admiral Snyder.

Navy men on active duty cannot discuss these questions and yet in naval circles there are all sorts of reports to the effect that President Roosevelt himself had a hand in selecting these high officers at Hawaii and in resolving the conflicts of view as to whether the battleships of the fleet should be concentrated in Pearl Harbor.

If a court martial is held or congressional inquiry to follow through on the Roberts report, it must logically take up the errors of omission and commission by everybody who had anything to do with naval policy. It would appear that such a court martial or inquiry during the war period would be difficult without taking active officers away from their duties. Postponement of the whole inquiry to some more favorable opportunity may be the best way provided steps are taken promptly to correct the errors that are known to have been made.

One of the things Congress can do at once is to provide the navy with a general staff. Under the present organization the eight bureau chiefs report to the Secretary of the Navy. Also the so-called "general board" is only advisory and not an operating body.

But while an operating staff for the navy to help Admiral Stark is essential so is an operating chief for General Marshall in the army. If a record of what both General Marshall and Admiral Stark have had to do in the last few months were compiled it would be found that they do not have time to administer their respective departments, perform the many functions of contact with Congress and domestic phases of their work such as the mobilization and equipping of a draft army or expanding navy and still give thought to overseas operations day by day and hour by hour.

The lessons of the Roberts report are numerous. If they are taken to heart, the country will benefit but with army, navy and air forces still operating independently under a vague formula of "mutual cooperation," there must be further risks in store for our troops and sailors.

Lodge Meets

Highland, Jan. 26 — State officers were received at the meeting of Ida McKinley Council 65 Daughters of America Wednesday evening. Councilor, Mrs. Charlotte Salomon, presided. All officers were present except associate junior past councilor, which was filled by P. C. Mrs. Grace Graham. State officers received were: Mrs. Anna Minkler, Saugerties, deputy of the local council and installing officer; Mrs. Cecile Petersen, deputy of Vanderlyn Council, Kingston and Miss Anne Barrett, Poughkeepsie, deputy of Sunshine Council. Conductor, Mrs. Elsa Swift and warden, Mrs. Carrie Atkins assisted by the flagbearers and team escorted the guests of honor. Daniel H. Kurtz acted as captain.

Final plans were made for the purchase of $500 worth of Defense Bonds. An invitation was received from Vanderlyn Council to attend the installation ceremonies Tuesday evening in Kingston when deputy, Mrs. Cecile Petersen will preside. Mrs. Petersen had charge of a farewell degree in honor of the retiring councilor, Mrs. Salomon. A red, white and blue leis was placed about her shoulders as a symbol of farewell and Mrs. Florence E. Cotant sang "Aloha" with the group joining in the chorus. Mrs. Petersen and the group in behalf of the officers and friends presented Mrs. Salomon with flowers and gifts, with appropriate remarks. Those taking part were Mrs. Daisy Mackey, Mrs. Daisy Kurtz, Mrs. Bessie Vandervoort, Mrs. Martha C. Schantz, Mrs. Gwendolyn Callahan, Miss Henrietta Woolsey, Mrs. Grace Graham, Mrs. Louise Sheeley, Mrs. Carrie Atkins with Mrs. Irene Kurtz at the piano. The theme of the drill was "Auld Lang Syne."

Mrs. Minkler was assisted during the installation by Mrs. Viola Constable in charge of regalia; Mrs. Philip Schantz, pianist; Mrs. Sheeley, Mrs. Cotant, flagbearers; Officers inducted were Mrs. Hazel Palmer, councilor; Mrs. Minna Gunsalus, associate councilor; Mrs. Grace Relyea, vice councilor; Mrs. Carrie Atkins, associate vice councilor; Mrs. Salomon, junior past councilor; Mrs. Mamie Wood, associate junior past councilor; Mrs. Bertha Freer, assistant recording secretary; Miss Henrietta Woolsey, conductor; Miss Clara Cunningham, warden; Mrs. Louise Sheeley, trustee; Mrs. Elsa Swift, inside sentinel; Mrs. Katie Tompkins, outside sentinel. Other officers are Mrs. Callahan, recording secretary; Mrs. Mackey, financial secretary; Mrs. Kurtz, treasurer; Mrs. Cora Parks and Daniel H. Kurtz, trustees.

Councilor Mrs. Palmer made the following appointments: Mrs. Irene Kurtz, pianist; flagbearers, Mrs. Sheeley, Mrs. Cotant; captain, Mrs. Petersen; publicity, Mrs. Cotant; initiatory officers to remain the same. Those on the team will be Mrs. Constable, Miss Dorothy Churchill, Mrs. Mary Mackey, Mrs. Florence Perkins, Mrs. Garham, Mrs. Vandervoort, Mrs. Wildrick, Mrs. Parks, Mrs. Ruth Scholefield, Mrs. Fannie Heaton, Mrs. Anna Maynard and Mrs. Carrie Jordan. Speakers were Mrs. Minkler, Miss Barrett and Mrs. Petersen, deputies.

In behalf of friends, Mrs. Cotant presented gifts to the new councilor. The refreshment committee for the meeting February 4 will be Mrs. Edna Tompkins, Mrs. Katie Tompkins, Mrs. Ella Tubbs, Mrs. Naomi Vandermark, Mrs. Bessie Vandervoort, Mrs. Sarah Wildrick, Mrs. Mamie Wood, and Miss Henrietta Woolsey. Mrs. Salomon presented gifts for perfect attendance to Mrs. Mackey, Mrs. Callahan, Mrs. Schantz, Mrs. Gunsalus, Daniel Kurtz and Mrs. Wood and Mrs. Swift received a gift for only missing one meeting. Mrs. Mackey and Mrs. Callahan received remembrances for wearing white every meeting during the year. Special gifts for assistants were given George Gunsalus and Mrs. Cotant. Also the retiring councilor presented gifts to all of her officers. In behalf of the council, Mrs. Salomon presented a gift to Deputy Mrs. Minkler, also gifts from friends.

District Deputy Marie Odell of Ellenville will meet with representatives from the council in Kingston, Tuesday evening to plan for the district meeting to be held in Ellenville. Sixty persons were present including guests from Poughkeepsie, Saugerties and Kingston. A buffet lunch was served following the meeting. Mrs. Philip Schantz, who has served for five consecutive years as pianist of the council was installed as a past councilor by Deputy Anna Minkler. Mrs. Salomon received a past councilor's pin from the council in appreciation of her year's work.

A meeting of the officers will be held at the home of Mrs. Louis Palmer, councilor, Washington avenue, Monday evening to make plans for the year's work.

BOY SCOUT NEWS

Deputy Regional Scout Executive James Killough visited the Ulster-Greene Council on Monday, January 26, and spent the day going over the plans of the council for the coming year. He was asked by the executive board to come in and assist the executives in bringing up to date a survey of the council which was made two years ago so that this information might be made available to better predict the objectives for the coming year. The council is in hopes that now it is free of debt it may add to its executive staff a field executive so that better service may be maintained with the troops and districts.

Troop No. 52 of Prattsville is holding its charter night program at its meeting in Prattsville on Monday evening and has invited the executive to be present for the affair. A new scoutmaster and new troop committee have been appointed and they wish to go over with the executive their duties and plan their program for the troop so that the scouts may be better prepared for the work which is ahead for all scouts in helping to do their part in our war effort.

Tuesday evening, the committee on organization extension will meet at the council office under its chairman, Charles Davis, to plan the program of organizing new troops during 1942. Their year's objective is seven new troops and where a troop is dropped to replace that troop. This group is responsible for the growth of the council and has just completed its first year of service several new men have been added and they feel they can do a better job in 1942.

WAR COMMENTS

"The man behind the man behind the gun,"—as they are singing of him—has now settled down to the job—and what a job he's doing! Those fellows in the factories are as important as the men at the front, but have it easier.

Most people are decent and cooperative about the rationing. Indignation is rising against those who selfishly insist on as much comfort and ease as they had in normal times.

There is still too much squandering of fat pay by people not used to it, who will regret their thriftlessness.

The cost of this war is already, in one year, several times as great as it was for the whole war period last time. But the limitless outpouring of wealth shortens the war, and we shall produce new wealth faster in a peaceful world.

Our conquest of Africa should be finished within a few weeks. Then comes the conquest of Europe. And after that, the conquest of Asia. Some job! But feel Uncle Sam's muscle.

The Duce is sick with disaster, and Italy suffers the fate forecast for her by Churchill and Roosevelt when she entered the war.

Hitler the Great is on the skidway to destruction, and moving fast.

RUBBER PROGRESS

With the grim ministrations of Czar Jeffers and national rationing of motor fuel, the rubber situation seems to be developing fairly well. It is not quite a year now since the Pearl Harbor attack and the drying up of the rubber supply in the East Indies. The restoration of that oriental supply is still in the vague distance, but the usual American procedure of self-help in emergency is said to be solving the problem.

The end of the first rubberless year will find most of the private motor cars and trucks in this country still operating, though with a slower pulse, and rubber still available for military and other essential purposes. The old rubber collections have helped greatly. The government and public have handled the situation sensibly, and nearly all of the motorists are now cooperating.

What of the future? Synthetic production of rubber is proceeding so satisfactorily that the second anniversary of Pearl Harber, one year from this coming December 7, will find the American people meeting 90 per cent of their rubber needs with synthetics. And if the war continues going as well as it has been going lately, it may not be long after that until rubber is coming again from the East Indies. Meanwhile good progress is reported for rubber production in Central and South America.

TINY STATES SAFE

Some creatures, it is said, are so small that they are never stepped on. If this applies to countries also, it explains why Hitler, who generally respects only the rights of the stronger, has left Andorra alone.

This little republic of 191 square miles and 5,000 population, lying high up in the Eastern Pyrenees between France and Spain, was in the line of march of the German soldiers occupying the whole of France. Yet Hitler ordered his troops to keep out of Andorra. So this tiny state, 1,000 years old, which kept its independence during the stormy times of Napoleon and the first world war, may hope to weather the present tempest also.

Andorra is not the only small state surviving in Europe today, nor is it even the smallest. Between Austria and Switzerland lies the principality of Liechtenstein, which has enjoyed a separate existence since 1719. With an area of but 65 square miles and a population of 10,000, it belongs to the Swiss Customs union and uses Swiss currency, yet is independent.

The smallest of all is San Marino, in northern Italy, with an area of only 32 square miles and a population of 14,000. It boasts of being the oldest state in Europe, going back to the fourth century. Like Liechtenstein and Andorra, it has managed to stay out of the conflicts that have engulfed practically all Europe.

ETERNAL FEMININE

Trust a woman in an unexpected emergency! There is Mrs. B. A. Freed, for instance, a housewife in Moline, Mo., who unexpectedly found herself up in the air alone, without the slightest notion what to do about it. She had been sitting in her husband's plane while he cranked it, and just happened to push something or other, and up went the plane.

Well, Mrs. Freed naturally grabbed the steering wheel and turned it this way and that. But it just made figure eights, and thrashed around and up and down and in and out, and cut the tops off a lot of cornstocks, and finally busted the wheels down under and came to a stop, and the ambulance that had been summoned for her arrived and toted her off to the hospital.

And what did the hospital people do? Well, they fixed up her lip where she had cut it somehow, and that was all. She confessed to nervousness, but it was her husband who suffered from shock.

There has been heavy fighting lately in the Buna Gona area of New Guinea. What a wonderful college yell could be made out of that!

Take a stout swig of something and brace yourself in a chair. An economist proposes a war tax of 40 billion dollars a year.

Even a quart of milk a day and a dish of spinach for every child won't make a perfect world.

OPERATION IN PEPTIC ULCER

During the war of 1914-1918 the number of cases of ulcer of the stomach and of the small intestine among the soldiers and civilian population greatly increased. After the war there was a gradual decrease in ulcer until the years of the depression when again there was an increase. After the first few years of the depression the ulcer cases gradually decreased. Since the beginning of the present war there is again an increase of ulcer in both army and civilian life.

The above facts definitely show that aside from other factors—slender body, rough foods, infection—nervousness and emotional disturbances is the match that lights the fire.

For many years the treatment of stomach and intestinal ulcer was by medicine and diet in mild cases and operation in severe cases. In other words the physician handed the case over to the surgeon when he felt the patient required operation to save his life.

Today the physician and surgeon work as a team on cases of peptic ulcer. What is called a "combined" clinic was started at Bellevue Hospital, New York, in 1928, and Dr. J. William Hinton, Associate Professor of Clinical Surgery, Columbia University, in Medical Clinics of North America, states:

"When the clinic started, January 1928, we believed, as a result of what we had seen in our follow up of surgical operations, that operation generally gave poor results. For that reason we would not advise operation unless the pain was so severe the patient insisted. I felt from the beginning that medical care for the 'uncomplicated' ulcer gave excellent results."

"If a patient with ulcer is seen early in the course of the disease, meaning the first few months or year and is put under medical management and if he cooperates in the treatment, the chances of avoiding surgery over a ten year period are excellent. If the patient with ulcer is first seen late in the disease, five years or longer after the onset, then the chances of improvement under medical management are greatly reduced."

The lesson here is like the lessons we have learned about other diseases, namely that the sooner the patient reports to his physician with symptoms that persist more than a few weeks despite "home" treatment, the sooner will the disease be recognized and surgery avoided.

BABSON ON BUSINESS

INSURANCE STOCKS

Babson Recommends a Check-up; But All Policies Are O. K.

New York City, Nov. 27—Investors will soon be seeing newspaper reports about the government getting after fire insurance companies. The trouble started with a grand jury investigation at Atlanta, Ga.; it will probably be pushed by the department of justice until it reaches the Supreme Court. The government has already investigated life insurance companies and they came through with a good bill of health. Now the government is after the fire insurance companies. It seems as if with Germans, Japanese and Italians on our backs, the department of justice could wait until after the war.

Insurance Stocks Fundamentally Sound

Insurance stocks may roughly be divided into four groups:—(1) Life (2) Health and Accident (3) Fire and Marine (4) Casualty. The life insurance companies already have government competition in the form of "Social Security" and will probably have more. On the other hand, it should be many years before there will not be a field for life insurance companies. There will always be a demand for policies which the government will not wish to issue.

Fire insurance companies will probably be forced to reorganize their sales methods. It is costing too much to sell all kinds of insurance. In fact, some New Dealers are said to believe that "selling" fire insurances should be eliminated by the adoption of automatic compulsory fire insurance equal to the assessed value of one's buildings. This, however, should not harm the good and independent companies which would still be needed to carry the insurance, make inspections and adjust losses. I further think highly of the stocks of well-established, independent fire insurance companies as inflation hedges. Such companies have an advantage in being able to raise their rates to meet any emergency—a privilege not enjoyed by life companies.

The future of health and accident companies is not so clear. Most of their policies are now for small amounts with working people. If social security is enlarged to include health and accident, these companies may suffer. The wise ones are already hedging by taking on other lines. The casualty group are the newest in the field. Thus far they have been very successful; but how they will survive the war, only the future can tell. The government already owns one of the largest in the field.

An Honorable Business

The insurance business has always appealed to me as a most honorable business. It comes the nearest to Christian teaching of any big business. Through insurance, when a family loses its father by death, or its home by fire, or its employment by illness, or gets involved in an unfortunate lawsuit, all the "neighbors" chip in and help pay the loss. The loss, which would otherwise fall on one family, is spread over thousands of families. Money invested in an insurance company can do a lot of good, be fairly safe and return a good income. In fact, due to their experience and set up, insurance companies have an opportunity of becoming leaders in the new co-operative commonwealth ahead.

But why this government investigation? The answer is that too many insurance companies have gotten into the hands of Wall street and other financiers or are being operated as helpless members of "fleets". Of course, the difficulty is that the reputations of good, independent companies, which are not mixed up with "fleets" or Wall Street, may suffer with the weak ones.

What to Buy

The fire companies which should come through this investigation best are the medium-sized ones located outside of New York city free from certain "fleet" entanglements and not dependent upon any other company for business. Among the better ones are the following: Boston Insurance, Providence-Washington, Security of New Haven, Springfield Fire and Marine, Agricultural Insurance, New Hampshire Fire, Glens Falls, St. Paul Fire & Marine, Northwestern National Insurance and the Hartford Fire.

Of course, a successful company must have a good group of loyal and active agents. Most necessary of all, however, is an honest management which is working solely for the stockholders and has no conflicting outside interests. Such men should be good business-getters, conservative investors and experienced underwriters. Insurance companies should insist upon thorough investigation both as to risks and investments. Policyholders, however, have nothing to fear—wherever a company is located, whether independent of a fleet member. Nothing is safer than fire insurance policies.

Consult Your Broker

I advise readers to show their lists of insurance stocks to an honest broker, asking him to mark the ones which are being operated independently and are not depending upon some New York "daddy". These should be O. K. The value of "fleet members" depends largely, however, upon whether they are being operated solely for the benefit of the fleet stockholders, or are being operated, under a management contract, partly for the benefit of some other company. Especially ascertain whether the directors of the company in which you hold stock are checking their investments, underwriting, agents, etc., or are blindly leaving these important matters to others.

Every company, whether or not a member of a "fleet," should keep in touch with its own agents and policyholders. Then, if at any time the management contract is cancelled by the big company, the little company would not be left high and dry as a mere shell. This can be avoided if the directors of the little companies will insist on proper up-to-date information and personal supervision. I go further and say that small companies which are members of "fleets" will ultimately survive or perish according to the character, independence and aggressiveness of their own local board of directors.

"AT CENTURY'S TURN"

By H. L. VAN DEUSEN

It is interesting to recall that the first "talking movies" as they were then called was shown in the Broadway Theatre on May 7, 1928, when Al Jolson was featured in "The Jazz Singer."

It was in April of that year that a vitaphone and movietone apparatus was being installed in the theatre at a cost of $25,000.

Harry Lazarus was manager of the Broadway Theatre that year.

In the 14 years that have elapsed the movies have developed wonderfully, and as for the silent pictures they replaced, only the old timers recall them. In the days of the silent movies such stars as Charlie Chaplin, Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks were three of the leaders in the field.

And speaking of the movies it was on April 22, 1908, that the Sahler building on Wall street was leased to be opened shortly as the Novelty Theatre where the old silent movies were shown for a number of years. The Novelty furnished competition for the Bijou located in a former store on the same side of Wall street.

Physical Director L. C. Godfrey resigned as physical director at the local Y. M. C. A. on April 25, 1918, to accept a position as executive secretary of the Maplewood Branch of the Y. M. C. A. in Rochester. I also recall that among the Kingston men who left the local "Y" to accept positions with the Bedford Branch were Gus Bonesteel, who is still there, and Clarence Schoonmaker, who some years ago returned to Kingston and served the local "Y" as its general secretary for several years.

One of the big fires in Kingston in 1908 was that of April 30 of that year, that destroyed the hardware store of J. T. Johnston and damaged the First National Bank on the Strand. The fire damage was placed at $100,000.

Mr. Johnson, who died some years ago was one of the best known hardware merchants in Kingston, and was engaged in business on the Strand for many years. He was also active in civic affairs and had served as a member of the city's board of water commissioners.

I also recall that in April, 1908, butter was selling at 25 cents a pound, and eggs at 17 cents a dozen. It should be recalled, that in those early days the average wage paid in Kingston totaled from $10 to $12 a week.

For that money the men worked from 7 o'clock in the morning until 6 o'clock at night.

Living conditions were much cheaper in those days in order to compensate for the low rate of wages, and families were brought up with the wage earner making from $10 to $15 a week, but they set as good a table in those days as they do today with wages considerably higher.

Who Makes Laws in United States—Congress or Whimsical Writers in Executive Agencies?

By DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington, Nov. 27 — Who makes the laws in America—the Congress or a whimsical group of reguation writers in the executive agencies?

Thus the constitution says that tax laws must originate in the House of Representatives and that they must be passed by a majority of both houses of Congress. But the new bureau of economic stabilization has just issued a few degress that conflict with the laws of Congress and unless some more decrees are issued to clarify the muddle, the citizen will not know how to make out his income tax return and the employer will not know what to withhold from an employe where the salary earned is in excess of $25,000.

For several weeks it has been insisted that only the persons with salaries in excess of $67,200 were affected by the Byrnes "law." Now it turns out that anybody with a salary slightly in excess of about $46,800 can under certain circumstances be affected by the anti-management decree.

The existing regulation reads as follows:

"No amount of salary . . . shall be paid or authorized to be paid to or accrued to the account of any employe or received by him during the taxable year which, after reduction by the federal income taxes on the amount of such salary, would exceed $25,000. The amount of such federal income taxes shall be determined by applying to the total amount of salary . . . paid or accrued during the taxable year, undiminished by any deductions, the rates of taxes imposed by Chapter 1 of the code . . . as if such amount of salary were the net income (after the allowance of credits applicable thereto), the surtax net income and the victory tax net income, respectively, and without allowance of any credits against any such taxes."

The foregoing simply nullifies the tax laws of Congress by removing at one fell swope all the deductions that a taxpayer is entitled to under the revenue laws. Congress, in other words, says the taxpayer may deduct certain items but the Byrnes edict says the taxpayer may do no such thing if he is in certain brackets.

Thus a person with a salary of, let us say, $46,800 may have had a bad debt loss of $26,800 and no profits to offset it. Under the law as passed by Congress his net income would this year, for instance, be only $20,000 and if he had no other deductions he would pay taxes on $20,000. But the regulation issued by the Office of Economic Stabilization above would erase the bad debt deduction altogether next year and the individual would have to pay the treasury everything that remained over and above $25,000 just the same because his taxes are figured on the $46,800 amount and not on his real net income.

Since when can an executive agency nullify the deductions written into the tax laws by the Congress? If the Office of the Director of Economic Stabilization or any other government bureau can fix the tax rates at will and disregard the specific rates of taxation and allowable credits written into the revenue laws, then has not a precedent been established whereby in the future executive agencies can write whatever tax rates they like into the executive orders and call it "anti-inflation"? Has Congress granted any such discretionary power to the executive bureaus? The men on capitol hill who had most to do with the writing of the revenue laws answer in the negative. They insist that no more flagrant example of abuse of power has been recorded under the whole New Deal than this attempt to grab the power to fix tax rates.

The new limitation on top salaries goes into effect January 1, 1943, and will not apply to incomes earned during 1942 but employers will have to be careful how they pay out salaries in 1943. If they pay more than their employe should have under these complicated computations they run the risk of being put in jail as well as having the whole item of salary—not merely the excess—disallowed in the corporation income tax return.

Every employer must sit down next year with his top executives and figure out what deductions they have or might have and go into the details of the employe's tax return so as to be sure that not one penny in excess of $25,000 net after taxes is paid. The employer must be sure also that if the employe works for two companies as is the case in large business enterprises neither employer shall pay any sums that might put the combined net income from salary after taxes up above $25,000. It is reported that the treasury is working on a new set of regulations to take into account the persons in the salary range between $46,800 and $67,200 who might be affected by the wording of the latest regulation of October 27, 1942. But there is no intimation that the regulations will bring any relief.

(Reproduction Rights Reserved)

Washington, Nov. 26 — Someone has misled Jimmy Byrnes—director of economic stabilization—and, incidentally, many other persons in America have been misled into believing that only persons with a salary of $67,200 are affected by the salary limitation decree issued by the White House. The truth is that anybody with a salary of $46,800 might be affected under certain circumstances; such a taxpayer may be compelled to give back money to the treasury so as to conform to the regulation.

The confusion arising is so great that it is understood that the treasury itself is considering the issuance of an explanatory regulation which will indicate that persons with a salary range from $46,800 to $67,200 may find themselves affected by the salary restriction and required to give money back to the treasury.

Mr. Byrnes in a recent speech said:

"The so-called $25,000 salary limitation actually affects only those having a salary in excess of $67,200. The tax on that salary will reduce the net income to $25,000."

But what was forgotten evidently was the effect of allowable deductions on the result. Thus, a married person receiving a salary of $46,800 and having two dependents, with allowable deductions equal to ten per cent of his gross salary, will find that under the new 1942 revenue law his total normal tax, surtax and victory tax amounts to $21,792 which leaves $25,000 after taxes. This excess of $8 will have to be returned to the treasury.

Take the man who has a salary of $50,000 and again allowing for deductions amounting to about ten per cent or $5,000, and the total tax is $23,881, which leaves the taxpayer a remainder of $26,119. But this is $1,119 in excess of the $25,000 which he may retain under the Byrnes formula. He will have to give that to the treasury unless the regulations are changed.

Now it is true that a person with a $67,20 salary cannot retain more than $25,000, but it is apparent that when certain deductions allowable under the revenue laws are taken, the net amount remaining might exceed $25,000. Any excess would have to be given to the treasury. So as the sum of allowable deductions increases, the chances grow that the taxpayer will be compelled to give the treasury more money, so as to have not more than $25,000 left after taxes.

It is estimated that approximately 5,400 persons in the United States receive salaries in excess of $46,800.

The number of persons with dividends in excess of $46,800 was about 5,234 in the year 1939, and the present estimate for 1942 made by competent statisticians is that the number is about 8,000.

Thus, one set of citizens can retain far more money than another set, even though the amounts received are the same. The people who work are penalized. The people who derive money from investments are not penalized. Congress didn't authorize either group to be punished, but if punishment is to be meted, Mrs. Roosevelt is right in declaring that both groups ought to be treated alike.

Incidentally, Mrs. Roosevelt, on her return from her visit to Britain, stated that "practically no one" in Britain has more than $21,00 left after payment of taxes. This might lead some observers to believe that Britain has a salary ceiling. This is not true.

In Britain anybody can earn as much as he wishes and the only way his salary can be cut is by a tax law. There is no barrier to the earning of $1,000,000 a year or deriving that sum from investments if the opportunity can be found. Incidentally, in Britain the amount remaining to the taxpayer on a $1,000,000 income is $38,420, and that $1,000,000 is net income only after many allowable deductions have been made—Britain's laws being more liberal than ours.

If the allowable deductions in both the United Kingdom and America were to amount to 20 per cent, respectively, the net cash retained by the British taxpayer out of a gross salary income of $67,200 would be $14,074, while in the United States the taxpayer, because of the salary limitation, would retain net cash of only $11,560. And yet it is being widely stated that Britain's system is more drastic than ours.

SONG IN SOCK COSTS $20

Because of a song in his sock, Jeremiah Daly's trip from Holyhead, Wales, to Ballinrae, County Cork, cost him $20. This "socking" was in the form of a fine imposed because the ditty was "Valleys of Lackalmore," a Republican song, which he said he was afraid to produce for fear he be considered an I. R. A. member. He also was fined $12 for a letter, which he said was for his foreman's wife in Ireland, found in the other sock, providing a total socking of $32.

Trustees of City Library Pay Mrs. Goodrich Tribute

The following is a statement by trustees of the local library covering the resignation of Mrs. Goodrich as librarian:

"It is a matter of deep regret to us of the Board of Trustees of the Kingston City Library and the reading community of our city, whom she has served so long and well, that illness has forced her to submit her resignation. We thank her for her work. Nobody could have been more generous of her time and attention, nor more agreeable in her daily contacts than she. She will be greatly missed by us all who have applied to her in search of an erudite work, or fugitive fact. She was masterful in her knowledge, and most generous in its dissemination.

"It seemed to me, that the top notch of her adaptability was in the cordial friendliness she had for young and old who sought her help, and as we part, may we say that upon our part it is cum summa laude."

HOME BUREAU

Health Leaders Meet

Yesterday afternoon the health leaders of the Ulster County Home Bureau met at the Home Bureau office on Wall street with Mrs. DeWitt Crowell of Wallkill, chairman of the project. Miss Elizabeth Myer gave a detailed report on fundamental concepts necessary for the understanding of placing children in foster homes. She pointed out that many children might easily become social problems if they were not given the proper care in a foster home. She explained the responsibilities and the need for special understanding and affection. Primary in importance for foster parent characteristics should be happiness and loving care. When the foster parents are given a sum toward the maintenance of the child, the caring of this child should not be based on economic necessity.

Following Miss Myer, Dr. Hollis Ingraham explained the clinic system in the county and other health resources in which the county is rich if people would only make use of them. He spoke of the health problems which face the people in the time of war. There will be a scarcity of skilled help, and materials and the increase in common diseases. In order to meet these tests, everyone should have a physical examination, correct defects and to further learn all he can about nutrition.

On Saturday morning, the recreation leaders met at the Home Bureau office with Miss Helen Bradburn to discuss plans for physical fitness. Miss Bradburn instructed the group in definite exercises that can be done to make the body supple and at the same time strengthen it. Miss Bradburn explained that the ordinary tasks in housework provide excellent exercise if done properly. She stressed the importance of keeping the back straight and bending from the hip joint rather than from the waist.

Mrs. Harry Sutton also taught the group several exercise games which she has found successful. These together with the instructions from Miss Bradburn were given to the leaders to carry back to their respective communities and local Home Bureaus.

MRS. HELEN BUTTRICK

The Ulster County Home Bureau is starting a new venture in it's radio program, the Ulster County Home Hour, scheduled weekly, Monday at 11:15 a. m. over station WKNY. Mrs. Helen Buttrick, professional home economist and resident of Woodstock is preparing a dramatic serial called, "The Folks of Freedom Valley."

"Freedom Valley" is a small village tucked away in the Ulster hills and is made up of families of people whose lives will have a familiar ring to the listeners. There will be a young doctor less than ten years out of medical school; his able assistant, the Public Health Nurse; the pastor and his energetic wife; the schoolteacher who also plays the organ at the church; the engineer who runs the co-operative dairy, and the farmer's family as well as the town's folk.

Miss Everice Parsons, home demonstration agent, will introduce the "Folks of Freedom Valley," Monday, February 2, at broadcast time, 11:15 o'clock. The topic at that time will be "Books for Fighting Forces."

Trips to Albany

A trip to visit the Legislative Forum at Albany, February 3, is being planned by the Ulster County Home Bureau. A bus will leave the Governor Clinton Hotel at 8 a. m., February 3 and will return from Albany at 3 p. m.

The Legislative Forum is sponsored jointly by all the women's educational organizations in the state. It's purpose is to renew and discuss bills that are presented to the state legislature. Discussion of bills attempts to bring out all contributing factors and is carried on a non-portion basis.

This trip is open to anyone interested in legislation. Reservations must be made at the Ulster County Home Bureau by Saturday, January 31.

MORE THAN 20 NEW POTATO SALADS IN BOOK OF 250 MODERN RECIPES

Potato Salad is practically an American institution — what picnic or Sunday night supper is complete without it? Few of us know that this luscious dish can be prepared in many variations, that it is ideal for luncheon or as the main dish of a meal, that it is delicious hot as well as cold. Even if you have your own favorite recipe for Potato Salad, try a new one next time. An entire section in the new Cookbooklet, "250 Ways of Preparing Potatoes," is devoted to salad recipes and you're sure to find every one of them fascinating and adaptable to a family meal or party menu.

Here's a recipe that is perfect for a simple hot luncheon dish or for party refreshments — the children especially will go for it:

Bologna Cups With Hot Potato Salad

6 thin slices large Bologna
2 cups sliced cold cooked potatoes
1 hard-cooked egg
2 sweet pickles
2 tablespoons vinegar
1 tablespoon chopped onion
Mayonnaise to moisten

Leave casing on Bologna, place in frying pan, heat gradually until edges curl up to form a perfect cup. Fill with hot potato salad made by mixing potatoes, sliced egg, pickles, vinegar, onion and mayonnaise and heating slowly in top of double boiler. Add more salt if desired. Place filled Bologna cups on a platter and garnish with parsley. Serves 6.

And these are just two of the interesting salad suggestions in this remarkable guide book of potato cookery.

Potato Salad between layers of red tomato aspic is a festive dish to tempt the whole family—it's so colorfully beautiful, too. The new Potato Booklet presents a number of interesting salads in a special section.

Here's one you can try right away:

Creole Potato Salad

3 cups diced cooked potatoes (warm)
2 tablespoons grated onion
1 tablespoon minced green pepper
¾ cup finely diced celery
1 hard-cooked egg
1 tablespoon chow-chow
5 tablespoons oil
2 tablespoons vinegar
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
Lettuce

Combine ingredients in the order given. Chill and serve with a garnish of lettuce. Serves 6.

To obtain each Cookbooklet present 13c and one coupon from the Kingston Daily Freeman at any outlet mentioned therein. You may order by mail if you wish. Just send one coupon from page two and 16c for each booklet (13c for book and 3c for postage) to the Cookbooklet Dept., Kingston Daily Freeman, Freeman Square, Kingston, N. Y.

Farm Association Meeting Attracts Large Attendance

There was an unusually large attendance at the special meeting of the board of directors of the Ulster County Farm and Home Bureau and 4-H Club Association last Friday night. President C. C. DuMond of Ulster Park presided at the meeting. E. W. Hathaway was re-elected secretary for 1942, numerous items of business were transacted and plans made to coordinate the agricultural activities of various agencies in the county for the duration of the war emergency.

Edmund R. Bower, county 4-H agent, was authorized to serve as executive secretary of the "Victory Garden" program which will get underway in the near future. Mr. Bowers will call a meeting of representatives of interested agencies at which the program will be planned. It is hoped that all agencies interested in promoting gardens will coordinate their plans with those to be worked out. It was emphasized that only ground suited to gardening should be planted, because it is necessary to conserve the supply of seed.

Plans are being made to help farmers meet the labor shortage which is already being felt. It is likely to be serious during the spring and summer season. It will be necessary for all groups interested to cooperate to enable farmers to meet the production goal set for them.

Mr. DuMond, who is also president of the New York State Farm Bureau Federation and a member of the executive committee of the American Farm Bureau Federation, gave a most interesting report on the price-control legislation now pending in Washington. There was considerable discussion on this subject and it was clearly indicated that farmers will have to pay still higher wages to compete with industrial wages and that somewhat higher prices of certain commodities are needed to insure maintaining the present production.

W. C. T. U. to Meet

The regular monthly meeting of the Ulster Park-Port Ewen W. C. T. U. will be held at the home of Mrs. Lizzie McLain of Esopus on Wednesday, January 28 at 2:30 p. m. The meeting will be in charge of the president, Mrs. Leslie Herring. The word for roll call will be "Faith." Visitors will be welcome.

Judgment of $179 Directed in Case

Action for Conversion Brought by Concern

Judgment in the sum of $179 was directed Monday afternoon in Supreme Court by Justice Russell in an action for conversion brought by the Ellenville Lumber Co. against William Greenberg and another. There was no defense to the action.

Joseph Kooperman appearing for the plaintiff claimed that the sum of $179 was due the plaintiff. David Rosenthal, president of the plaintiff company, testified to the transaction and said the defendant owed a balance of $179 and judgment with interest was directed.

Jury Taken

A jury was taken in an action for work, labor and services brought by Harold Boice against Miss Florence E. Griffin of Hurley. Boice, now a guard at the Hercules plant, seeks to recover $4,556.18 which he claims is due him for services rendered as foreman of the Griffin farm and stables for a period of several years. Mr. Boice claims he was employed by Miss Griffin as superintendent from about 1925 and that up until about 1933 he was paid regularly at the rate of $125 a month. He claims he was entitled in addition to board. About 1933, he claims, he was not paid regularly and now seeks the balance.

The defendant claims that Boice was to be paid $125 a month but that he was to pay board and she claims in a counter-claim $3,700 for board and lodging and now contends that she owes the plaintiff only $310.36. It is admitted by the defendant that this sum is due. Senator Wiswall of the firm of Wiswall, Walton, Wood and MacAffer with David Schoentag appears for plaintiff and Charles de la Vergne and Francis Martocci appear for the defendant.

Sleep is Swell!
UNDER AN ELECTRIC AUTOMATIC BLANKET

New SLEEP COMFORTS YOU NEVER DREAMED OF BEFORE

THE BLANKET WITH A Brain
Offers the Most Fundamental Improvement in Sleeping Comfort Since Blankets Were First Used More Than 5,000 Years Ago.

Slip into a bed warm as toast
Before retiring snap on the control switch. You'll fall asleep faster in a bed already warmed . . . your body completely relaxed . . . freed from the work of warming cold sheets.

When two sleep together
People sleeping together seldom require the same amount of covers. With the lighter-weight automatic blanket, sleeping companions find greater comfort. Ease of movement, together with an abundance of fresh air, overcome double—sleeping difficulties.

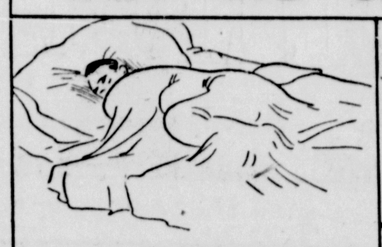

Wake up fresh every morning
It takes as much bodily energy to keep warm as it would to walk in your sleep all night. Save that energy by sleeping under an automatically warmed blanket and wake up really rested.

Natural beauty from restful sleep
The best aid to beauty is a good night's sleep. A bad night's sleep does something to your disposition. Relax and get your beauty sleep under an Electric Automatic Blanket.

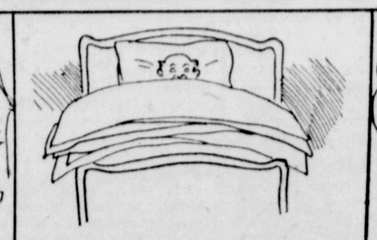

GET RID OF THESE DISCOMFORTS . . . . !

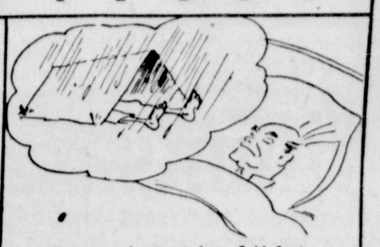

No damp cold sheets in rainy weather
Sleeping between damp sheets on raw spring nights is a disagreeable experience. Your bed can be dry and comfortable if it is warmed before retiring with the Electric Automatic Blanket.

No midnight hunt for extra covers
The "blanket with a brain" automatically maintains the degree of warmth you select. You don't have to get up in the middle of the night to search for extra covers or to get rid of extra blankets. Just enjoy uniform warmth all night long.

No piling on heavy covers
Get all the fresh air you want and sleep like a top under a single lightweight automatic blanket. In coldest weather a bedspread is the only extra cover needed. Get rid of four to six pounds of useless weight.

No cramped retreat from Cold Spots
The Electric Automatic Blanket warms the whole bed surface. No need to tie yourself in knots to avoid cold corners. Normal sleepers usually change position twenty to forty-five times during a night's sleep. It can be done comfortably in a bed that's warm all over.

Aged Man Is Found Dead of Heart Attack

Edward Osterhoudt, 75, was found dead in bed in his room in the home of Mrs. Frank Banks, 108 North Front street, at 11 o'clock Thursday night. Dr. C. B. Van Gaasbeek, who was called by the police stated that death was due to a heart attack.

Coroner Frank J. McCardle of Rosendale issued a death certificate to that effect.

It was at 11 o'clock last night that the police department received a call to the North Front street house, and Officers Fallon and Harnen responded in one of the radio cars. According to the police report the aged man had been ill during the day.

He retired to his room that night after asking Mrs. Banks to set his alarm clock for 8:30 o'clock this morning. When she entered the bedroom to wind the clock she found him dead in bed.

Mr. Osterhoudt's daughter, Mrs. May Murray of 200 Columbia avenue, Jersey City, N. J., was notified of her father's sudden death.

TB Hospital Auxiliary Asks Yuletide Funds

The Ladies' Auxiliary of the Ulster County Tuberculosis Hospital endeavors each year to bring cheer to the hospital patients at Christmas. In order to continue this work, the auxiliary is making an appeal to the general public for funds.

Although the patients at the hospital are not in the front line of the war, each is fighting an individual battle and the auxiliary desires to help them wage it to a successful finish. Contributions may be sent to Mrs. Frederic W. Holcomb, 188 Fair street.

Guilty of Operating Still at Plattekill

New York, Nov. 27 (Special)—Pleas of guilty were made before Judge Henry W. Goddard in Federal Court here Wednesday by two Brooklyn men, Vincent Curtolo and Antonio Mule, to an indictment charging them with carrying on illicit liquor distilling operations at the Old Schoonmaker Homestead, Plattekill, in 1940.

Curtolo was continued on bail for sentence December 9 and Mule was remanded, pending sentence on December 3.

The indictment charges that through their operations, with six other men, 22,950 gallons of liquor was produced at the still. The tax loss to the government was $18,360.

Memorial Mass Is Held For Society's Deceased

St. Mary's Church was crowded Thursday morning at 10 o'clock when a solemn high Mass was sung under the auspices of the Ulster County Holy Name Union. The Mass was celebrated as a memorial for Holy Name men who died during the year. A special intention was for the men and women now serving in our armed forces, and for a speedy victory followed by a just and lasting peace.

Previous to the Mass the congregation joined in the singing of the National Anthem. The Very Rev. Monsignor Martin J. Drury, V.F., P.R., pastor of St. Mary's Church, presided. The officers of the Mass were the Rev. B. C. Roth, assistant pastor of St. Mary's, celebrant; the Rev. John Gorman, of Holy Name Church, Wilbur, deacon; the Rev. Edwin Egan, of St. Francis de Sales Church, Phoenicia, subdeacon; and the Rev. John J. Drew, assistant at St. Mary's, acting as master of ceremonies. A number of priests from the various county parishes also occupied seats in the sanctuary among them being the Rev. John B. Conroy of Quarryville, the Rev. John D. Simmons of St. Joseph's Church, the Rev. Austin V. Carey of the Benedictine Hospital, the Rev. Father Geis of Ellenville, Father Vogel of Saugerties and Father Rivoli of Glasco. During the Mass Father Conroy led the men in a recitation of the Holy Name pledge to God and country.

Monsignor Drury delivered a short but eloquent sermon taking for his text the words, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and His justice, and all other things shall be added thereunto." After welcoming and congratulating the men from the various parts of the county the preacher explained in a forceful manner the fundamental reason for the world chaos and the things necessary for a lasting peace following our victory, namely—seeking of God and His justice.

At the close of the Mass the officers and delegates of the Ulster County Union held a short meeting in St. Mary's Hall. It was decided that the officers now guiding the society should continue in office for the duration of the war. Also that due to the conserving of gas and rubber and difficulties of transportation there would be no further county meetings held during the winter. A meeting to be held in April was left to the discretion of the officers to be called by them as circumstances warrant. County President William F. Leehive presided and spoke briefly upon current problems.

Two Persons Die In Gun Battle

Riot Starts When Negro M.P. Tries to Arrest Man; at Least 12 Wounded

Phoenix, Ariz., Nov. 27 (AP)—Two persons were killed and at least 12 wounded early today in a three-hour gun battle between negro soldiers and military and civilian police.

Police Chief Don Steward said that he had a man "shot out from either side of me" during the melee.

The riot, which Steward said started when a negro military policeman attempted to arrest a recalcitrant, brought more than 100 military and civilian police officers to the scene and 28 blocks were placed under army control. Steward emphasized that it was entirely a negro affair.

The dead:

Robert Riley, 44, negro, Phoenix, found shot to death in his car.

An unidentified negro soldier, whose body was found sprawled in the street soon after the shooting started.

Among the men injured when white military and civil police called:

Lt. August J. Essman, 39, former Sheridan, Ore., football coach, shot in the abdomen.

The most seriously hurt, in addition to Essman, are a negro sergeant and private, the addresses of whom are unknown. A white Phoenix police officer was hospitalized.

Available executive officers at the encampment where the negro soldiers were stationed had no comment. Newsmen were referred to Col. Fred Ellis, regimental commander, who was called when the trouble started.

An armored military car patroled the scene immediately after the shooting stopped, the police department reported.

Assisting military authorities, in addition to Steward, were Sheriff Lon Jordan and Horace Moore, state highway patrol superintendent.

The trouble, the police department reported, started when a military policeman shot a negro soldier. Officers said companions of the wounded soldier returned with Garand rifles and other army equipment.

Among the casualties was a reporter from the Arizona Republic who reported one of his shoes was shot off.

Rotary A Boys Officers

Election of officers of Rotary A Boys Club was held at the Y. M. C. A. Tuesday night. The Yanks ticket overwhelmingly won. Ellenville Man Charged With Assault

Charged with having held up an Ellenville colored man for an hour or so, with a shotgun, Orville Justice, 30, of 187 Center street, Ellenville, was brought to the Ulster county jail Thursday afternoon to await a hearing on December 3 before Police Justice Herman Cohen on a charge of assault in the first degree.

According to the story told Justice Cohen following Justice's arrest Wednesday, the defendant had gone to a house on Clinton avenue, Ellenville, which is occupied by some colored people, and asked for drink. They told him they had none, but finally sent out and bought some liquor. Justice stayed for some time, then left for his home, taking with him Alphonso Parsons, it being alleged that he promised Parsons a jacket if he would go with him.

Arriving at the house, Justice is said to have taken a shotgun from a closet and threatened Parsons with it, stating that he had been "rolled" for $60. After some time had elapsed a girl who lives in the house called Officer Abe Rand of the Ellenville Police Department. Rand took the gun, which is said to have been loaded, away from Justice and placed him under arrest.

Justice was arrested in July, 1941, charged with first degree assault, following an affair in which a knife was used, but the grand jury failed to indict and the charge was dismissed in September of that year. According to information received by Justice Cohen he also had been in trouble previously in West Virginia.

Henry D. Fagher Thanked For Efficient Services

At the reorganization meeting of the members of the Kerhonkson Draft Board, at which Charles C. Walden, Jr., of Stone Ridge was named chairman, resolutions were adopted thanking Henry D. Fagher of Kingston, R. D., retiring chairman, for the untiring and efficient work he had done. Mr. Fagher, who is cashier of the Rondout National Bank, and who has been a member of the board since its inception in October, 1940, gave pressure of personal business as his reason for giving up the work, adding that he felt that a man who lived nearby would be able to devote more time to the affairs of the board.

Clark Gets Medal

Washington, Nov. 27 (AP)—Lieutenant General Mark W. Clark, who traveled by submarine to Algiers to conduct negotiations with French officials prior to the American occupation, has been awarded the distinguished service medal, Secretary of War Stimson announced today. The citation accompanying the medal praised Clark, who at the time was a major general, for distinguished service in the planning and organization for the African operations.

Machinery Is Released

Washington, Nov. 27 (AP)—Secretary of Agriculture Wickard issued an order today releasing farm machinery and equipment held by dealers to permit such supplies to be rationed among farmers by county farm rationing committees. The order becomes effective tomorrow.

Substantial Reduction Is Foreshadowed in Budget

down the amount to be raised by taxation to around $675,000.

Last year the total gross budget was $887,544.47 from which refunds and charge backs amounting to $64,169.17 were made leaving a total net budget of $823,375.30. Of that $106,030.51 was for administrative, $120,866.20 for judicial, $41,489.93 for protection of persons and property, $15,300 for educational, $302,859.54 for highways and $216,511.49 for charities.

Earlier this month County Treasurer Chester A. Lyons reported a balance of $382,339.50 in the highway fund, but against this fund there remained certain charges which must be deducted before the close of the present year.

Fourth Ward Seeks Flag

Proud of the fact that their ward has over 275 men in the service of Uncle Sam, some of whom are on the fighting fronts, the air raid wardens of the Fourth Ward are sponsoring a campaign to purchase a service flag and at the request of Zone Warden John McGrane, all sector and post wardens of the Fourth Ward are urged to attend the final meeting which is to be held on Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock at their headquarters, 239 Hasbrouck avenue. The cooperation of all the wardens is needed in this campaign, James Howard, chairman of the service flag committee, will make his final reports at this meeting.

Controls Estate

Philadelphia, Nov. 27 (AP)—Donald L. Brubaker, of Altoona, Pa., has been given control of the $53,880 estate of his half-brother, the late August J. Brubaker of Philadelphia, in a ruling by Judge Charles L. Klien of Orphans court. August Brubaker, in a will dated November, 1940, willed the estate to his brother Donald with the request "it be used to relieve the distress of the poor and needy, and giving attention to certain specified individuals.

Cabinet Changes Ahead

Washington, Nov. 27 (AP)—A plan to solve the manpower situation is being advanced, a competent source said today, in a way which would involve changes in the President's cabinet. Should it go through, he reported, functions of the War Manpower Commission would be transferred to the Labor Department and Harold L. Ickes would become secretary of labor instead of Interior secretary.

Our idea of an understanding wife is one who has the pork chops ready when you come home from fishing.

A local shiek told a girl: "I would give $5.00 for just one kiss from a nice little girl like you." The girl replied, "Oh, how terrible!" He asked if he had offended her. She replied: "No, I was just thinking about the fortune I gave away last night.

A college education: something that enables a man to get a job from a man who never went to school.

While a young mother was bathing her baby, a neighbor's little girl came in and watched the process. The child was holding a doll minus an arm and leg and much knocked about generally.

Child—How long have you had your baby?

Mother—Three months.

Child—My, but you've kept her nice!

Two business men were riding in the subway, sitting side by side, saying nothing but looking very worried. After many minutes one of them heaved a long and deep sigh. The other looked at him for a moment and said, "You're telling me!"

Mandy—Ah wants a qwat of sanctified milk.

Grocer—Whut yoa'll means is pacified milk.

Mandy—Look heah, small one, when Ah needs inflammation Ah'll specify.

"Don't preach too long. Better leave the people longing than loathing.

An officer on board a battleship was drilling his men. "I want every man to lie on his back, put his legs in the air and move them as if he were riding a bicycle," he explained. "Now begin."

"Why have you stopped, Murphy?" asked the officer.

"If you plaze, sor," was the reply, "Oi'm coasting.

The reason dictated letters sound more impressive is because a man when dictating feels free to use four-bit words he doesn't know how to spell.

Affable Waiter—How did you find that steak, sir?

Guest—Oh, quite accidentally. I moved a piece of potato and there it was, underneath.

Some folks drop only a nickel in the collection plate Sunday so they'll have enough change left to give the waiter a quarter.

No More Desserts

Washington, Jan. 26 (AP)—Sugar rationing will mean that White House dinner guests henceforth can expect salads in place of deserts. Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt made that clear today at a press conference. She again expressed disapproval of hoarding. She said she and President Roosevelt used very little sugar anyway and that the guests would get salads instead of sweet deserts. The rationing for the White House, she said, will be a mathematical problem. The program to be put into effect early next month is expected to limit sugar to one pound per person per week.

Chapter 23

Freddy Rand, Again

"YES, said Rod softly, "there's Lavinia. And she's devoted to you."

"I'm not so sure of that devotion any more," said Miss Dorcas rather sadly. "I have been a great disappointment to Lavinia."

"How do you mean?"

"Ever since she was a little girl, I understand, she has dreamed of doing the things I have done—living my sort of life. She's even fought to put men and romance out of her life, so that she could come to me in a jungle or some far-off place. And having me come back and insist that she live the normal life a young woman should live—the sort of life most girls her age live—has been something of a blow to her."

"Well, I'm not going to worry much about that," said Rod, "I'm glad you did come back, and that you insisted upon her spending her vacation at Harbor Head. I only hope when we get to New York we'll be able to persuade had that — that — everything has turned out as it should turn out."

"So do I," said Miss Dorcas. The suddenly she sat up straight and said: "Oh! Freddy Rand!"

"What?" said Rod, startled. "Who's he?"

"He's a young widower in the store where Lavinia works. He's been after Lavinia to marry him."

"You — you — don't mean she might do it?" said Rod uneasily.

"That's just what I was thinking about," said Miss Dorcas. "We females are unpredictable creatures, and Lavinia might be just silly enough to rush back to New York and tell Freddy she'd be his wife. She might do it out of sheer perverseness. Good lord, can't this train go any faster?"

"But—she seemed to care for me," said Rod, frankly troubled. "The way she — she — responded when I kissed her. The way she looked at me. She couldn't run off and marry anyone else, Aunt Dorcas."

"I hope you're right, my dear boy. But we shall see. If only we could have taken a plane!"

The train sped on. Miss Dorcas and Rod finished their lunch and went back to the chair car. They continued to talk, but now it was as though they had begun to run down. A sense of worry had come to them both, and every little while each seemed lost in thought—thought that was not too comforting.

Along the Hudson, One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street, then underneath Park Avenue. And finally into Grand Central Station. Aunt Dorcas and Rod lost no time in getting to a taxicab.

"I'm sticking right with you," said Rod, when Miss Dorcas gave the address of Lavinia's apartment. "I'll go to a hotel later on."

"Good!" said Miss Dorcas. "I think I'll need some moral support." But when the taxicab came to a standstill at the end of their journey, when Rod had paid the driver, and he and Miss Dorcas were standing upon the sidewalk, Miss Dorcas said: "You wait down here, Rod, while I go up and see if Lavinia's in—and if she's dressed to receive company."

"All right, Aunt Dorcas," Rod said. "But for Pete's sake don't keep me in suspense any longer than possible."

"I won't." Miss Dorcas went up the steps. "Lavinia's vacation has several more days to run, so I imagine she's in—probably reading a book."

"Unless she's out dining with that Rand person," said Rod.

"Just keep your fingers crossed, Rod!"

"I will—never fear!"

No Lavinia

MISS DORCAS disappeared into the house, and Rod lit a cigarette which he smoked as he sat upon the stoop. "Dear God," he thought, "let me get a break, just for once!"

A good job in the airplane factory, a comfortable salary. A small apartment not too far from where he worked, and Lavinia there to greet him at the end of each day. A peaceful existence after many months of horror and suffering. A chance to be of service to his own country and England, and at the same time have a little personal life that carried with it love and contentment.

It seemed such a little to ask—and yet it meant so much to him, so terribly much. He wasn't going to be a deaf man, after all. And his heart was settling down to act like a healthy heart should act. Maybe he was going to have a future like a normal young man should have. Maybe he was—

His thoughts were abruptly shattered by the sudden opening of the door back of him. He jumped to his feet. Miss Dorcas was standing there staring at him.

"She's gone!" she said.

"Gone?" Rod repeated inanely. "I—I mean she hasn't been home at all!" Miss Dorcas rushed on. "The apartment is just as we left it when he went away. Covers over furniture—dust over everything."

"But—she wired you from New York," said Rod. "She must have been here."

"In New York, yes," said Aunt Dorcas. "But I tell you she hasn't been to the apartment! Not a sign of her—bag nor baggage."

Rod stood frozen with apprehension.

"W-w-what shall we do?" he asked, feeling more helpless than he had ever felt before in all his life.

Miss Dorcas couldn't answer at once. Her brain was a jumble of fears and forebodings. Newspaper headlines about the strange disappearances of girls swam before her eyes. Murders. Accidents. Suicides. Kidnappings. . . .

"Do you suppose she has run off and married that Rand man?" Rod asked finally.

"I don't know—I don't know anything," Miss Dorcas wailed. "Get a taxicab, Rod—quick."

Rod saw one coming, and signaled it. Miss Dorcas climbed in, and Rod right behind her.

"Where are we going?" he wanted to know.

"To Zoe Raymond's," Miss Dorcas replied. "Lavinia may have gone there to stay." She leaned forward, gave the driver the address, and said: "Go as fast as you can."

"Yes'm," said the driver. And off they were at great speed.

"I should have thought of Zoe the first thing," Miss Dorcas said. "But the sight of that deserted, dusty apartment shocked all the common sense out of me."

Rod shood his head slowly. "I ought to be handling this situation, Aunt Dorcas," he said. "But—I don't know which way to turn."

"Just stick with me, my dear," said Aunt Dorcas gently. "That's all I ask."

Still No Lavinia

ZOE and Peter Raymond lived in a walk-up apartment, one of those where one pushed a button in the vestibule, and someone upstairs pushed another button—and you got in eventually.

Rod was now pushing the button underneath the name "Raymond"—pushing it frantically and frequently.

"Oh, lord," Miss Dorcas said, "Zoe's not at home either."

"It looks that way," said Rod. "What in heaven's name do we do now, Aunt Dorcas?"

"Go on, push the button again."

Rod did so. And again he listened at the speaking tube opening.

"Why don't you break down the door?" demanded a tinny voice.

"Oh!" said Rod. "Hello. Hello. this is—"

"Let me talk!" said Aunt Dorcas. She put her mouth to the opening. "Hello! Is that you Zoe?"

"Yes, it is," the tinny voice replied. "Who are you?"

"It's Aunt Dorcas, I—"

"Aunt Dorcas!" said Zoe. "How wonderful?"

"Zoe, is Lavinia there?"

"Why, no! She's in Harbor Head, isn't she?"

"No! Open the door, Zoe. I've got to talk to you."

"Just a moment!"

There was a clicking sound. Rod grabbed the door-knob. He and Aunt Dorcas bustled in, and raced up the stairs. Zoe was standing in the open door of the apartment when they reached her floor.

"Zoe, this is Mr. Elliott," Aunt Dorcas said, breathlessly. "We're looking for Lavinia."

"Well, for mercy's sake," said Zoe. "How do you do, Mr. Elliott. Are you the young man Lavinia wrote me about?"

"Never mind that," said Miss Dorcas. Then rapidly she told of Lavinia's departure from Harbor Head, of the telegram she had sent from New York. "And now," Miss Dorcas climaxed, "she's disappeared entirely—as though the earth had opened and swallowed her."

"Oh!" said Zoe. "Oh! This is terrible."

"We know that," Miss Dorcas said. "Has Peter seen her at the store?"

"Of course not. He'd have told me if he had."

"Then," wailed Rod," where is she?"

Zoe wrung her hands. She walked back and forth in the small living room. Then she stopped suddenly.

"Hull!" she said.

"Who's Hull?" said Rod. "Another man?"

"No," said Zoe. "It's a little town in Connecticut where—"

"Where Lavinia's been going on her vacations?" Miss Dorcas interrupted. "Is that is?"

"Yes," said Zoe. "Maybe she could have suddenly decided to go there—instead of to the apartment!"

"How do you get to this place called Hull?" Rod wanted to know.

"It's within commuting distance of New York," said Zoe. "Lavinia stayed at a farmhouse—a little way out from town."

"Have you got a time-table?" Rod asked.

"I think so," said Zoe. She began to go through a desk.

"We haven't time for that now," said Miss Dorcas. "Come on, Rod. We'll telephone and see if Lavinia's in Hull—and safe." She turned to Zoe. "Is there a telephone at the farmhouse?"

"Yes," Zoe answered. "Lavinia telephoned me at once to ask me to get her some books."

"What's the name? I mean who do I ask for?"

"The man she boards with is named Stone. You ask for him, and then—"

"All right, we'll call her," said Miss Dorcas.

Manufacturers to Lend Idle Machine Tools

The attempt to round up every idle machine tool in the United States has resulted in an immediate and patriotic response from large and small manufacturers, the Army and Navy Munitions Board announced today.

Offers to give or lend to the government idle tools "for the duration" and offers to sell or lease machinery at the government's own estimate of its value are among those received by the machine tool section of the Army and Navy Munitions Board.

Typical of such responses is the following from J. K. Collings of the Turbine Engineering Company, Hoboken, N. J. who has an idle 65-inch Pond vertical boring mill:

"Selling price your figure as is where is. Will have picture taken and mail pronto. Alternatively you can have machine for duration gratis if you remove and replace after war."

The original query to Mr. Collings from C. A. Simmons of the War Production Board's machine tool section was as follows: "Government survey shows you have 65-inch Pond vertical boring machine mill not being used. Important that every available machine tool be put to immediate use. Invite your co-operation to release machine for defense work. Wire selling price and mail complete description and photograph if possible."

Despite the war Rotary clubs are carrying on in Sweden, Finland and Switzerland.

THE MORNING AFTER

The table looked so pretty with all its candles all alight;
The family was all there and the turkey was a sight!
We gathered around the table with many a thankful sigh,
And ate our fill of turkey as well as pumpkin pie.
But, Oh! The morning after, when our tummys began to hurt!
How we wish we hadn't eaten any more of that dessert!—Ann Rose.

Mrs. Perry—My daughter comes out this week.
Mrs. Harry—How strange! So does my husband. How long was your daughter in for? Frank good three months off for good behavior.

Mrs. Youngbride—Our cook says those eggs you sent yesterday were quite old.
Farmer — Very, very sorry, ma'am. They were the best we could get. You see, all the young chickens have been killed off, so the old hens are the only ones left to do the laying.

Never marry on Sunday. It isn't right to gamble on the Sabbath.

Girl—If wishes came true, what would be your first?
Soldier—I would wish—Ah, if only I dared to tell you!
Girl—Go on, go on! What do you think I brought up wishing for?

Well, my dear, I have carried you safely over all the rough places of life, haven't I?
Wife—Yes, and I don't think you missed any of them.

On her way out of a Cafeteria, a smartly-dressed girl handed the cashier a slip of paper on which appeared the number 1004180. The cashier glanced at it, and let the girl pass without paying.
When the proprietor appeared, the cashier handed him the note. He studied the numbers frowningly, then demanded to know its meaning.
Cashier—You see, it reads: "I owe nothing for I ate nothing."

The gentleman carefully removed two cigars from his upper vest pocket and placed them on the table. Then he opened his arms. But the girl did not rush into them. "You," she said coldly, "have loved before."

Teacher (in physiology class)—Junior, can you give a familiar example of the human body as it adapts itself to changed conditions?
Junior—Yes-sum. My Aunt gained fifty pounds in a year, and her skin never cracked.

Father—Junior, who is the laziest boy in your class?
Junior—I don't know, Dad.
Father—Then you ought. This report says while other boys are learning their lessons, there is one who sits in his seat and watches the rest.
Junior—Oh, that's the teacher Dad!

When you write to the boys in service, be cheerful. If you can't be exactly cheerful, at least be truthful and stick to exact facts and actual conditions. Every soldier has his job to do. Be sure your letter is not one to detract from his efficiency.

Goose (hissing)—You're not the only pebble on the beach!
Rooster—You're no Plymouth Rock yourself.

"Montreal: Seaport and City," by Stephen Leacock

At first blush, one might think the choice of a humorist to write the history of a seaport a curious one. And after reading Stephen Leacock's "Montreal: Seaport and City," one might change one's mind. Mr. Leacock even livens up the traditional list of acknowledgements. After thanking a goodly list of important people and mentioning other sources, he adds: "Acknowledging all these debts, I feel also that I owe a good deal of this book to my own industry and effort."

Montreal is the whole of Canada seen through the wrong end of the telescope. That is, Canada as a whole is plagued by a division of race and language, and a vast train of circumstance stems therefrom. So with Montreal, which is divided between English-speaking and French-speaking populations, neither of which speaks with the other except in a business way. In writing about the two great universities of Montreal, Mr. Leacock remarks that men have served lifetimes on the faculty of McGill, for example, without ever visiting the University of Montreal more than once—perhaps not even once.

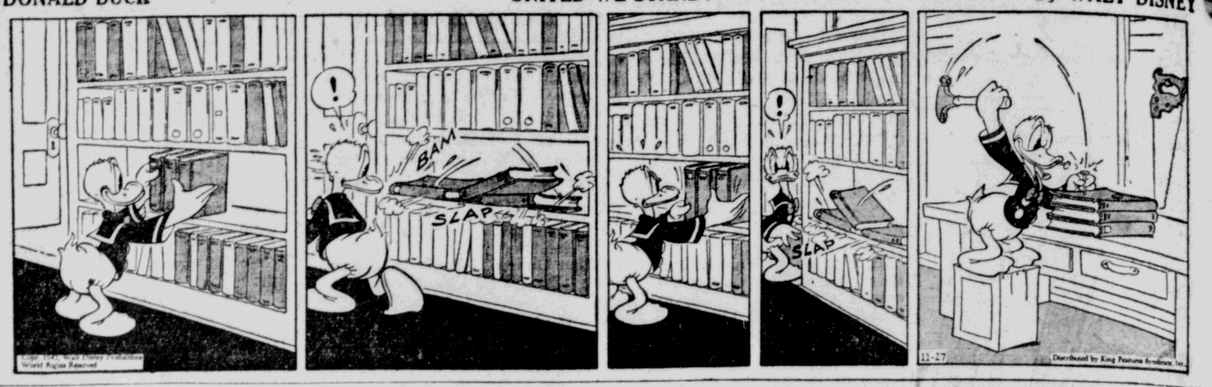

The historical background is beautifully sketched. You cannot understand Montreal without knowing Canadian history, and here you have enough of it. Also, you must know that Montreal is an island and conditioned by its situation in one of the great rivers of the world; that no comparable port lies farther from blue water than Montreal. And the relation of Canada with us and with Britain is the third essential, normally a very dusty study, and for Mr. Leacock the exact opposite.

This is his armature. Like a good sculptor, he covers the armature with clay deftly applied—in this case it is polychrome. Such matters as the old ice palaces which used to melt at once into ruins, the enormous civic banquets, the Fenian "invasion," the historic fires, the background of the fur trade, early-day (and latter-day) shipping, the peregrinations of the Canadian capital, now here now there—all these and much more are the surface and at the same time the substance of Mr. Leacock's good-humored and full-blooded story.

Vitamin-Mineral Product Reported

Six Vitamins, 3 Minerals Combined in Preparation

Six vitamins and three minerals vital to good health are combined in the latest multiple vitamin preparation. The vitamins are A, B1, B2, C, D and nicotinic acid. The minerals are iron, calcium and phosphorus.

The minerals have been added upon the basis of the now commonly acknowledged fact that vitamins alone are not enough for health. Deficiency diseases can develop from the absence of these vital minerals as easily as from the absence of necessary vitamins.

The blood needs its iron. True enough, the amount is extremely small. The daily requirement is about one one-thousandth of an ounce. But without it, the red blood-cells cannot manufacture the pigment which gives them their color and their physiological power. This pigment, hemoglobin, is an iron compound. So various types of anemias develop in the absence of iron.

The bones require both calcium and phosphorus. Rickets is not only a vitamin-deficiency disease. It may occur also because there is a lack of calcium or phosphorus in the diet. The amount of these substances in the blood is likewise extremely important. The "calcium level," as the medical man calls it, has marked effect upon nerve irritability, muscular control, and the tone of the blood vessels.

The vitamins listed are the common ones which everyone should know by now. Vitamin A is necessary for the eyes. Night blindness results in its absence. Vitamin B1, known also as thiamin, protects the nerves.

Once upon a time beriberi was called an Oriental disease. We know today that it flourishes in this country as well as in Asia and that damage can be done by a shortage of Vitamin B1 even though it may not be great enough to cause the development of the clinical symptoms of beriberi.

Dr. Russell Wilder of the Mayo Clinic has called this vitamin "the morale vitamin" because of its effect in maintaining mental alertness and energetic spirits.

Vitamin B2, known also as riboflavin, is part of the so-called vitamin B complex. So is nicotinic acid which prevents pellagra. Absence of riboflavin causes serious ailments.

As in the case of thiamin, it is possible to have "sub-clinical" deficiencies of riboflavin and nicotinic acid, that is, shortages which produce generalized feelings of ill health without the demonstrable symptoms of pellagra or a similar disease.

Vitamin C is the preventive of scurvy and gum diseases. Vitamin D, the "sunshine vitamin", is needed to prevent rickets and to enable the body to utilize its calcium and phosphorus.

It costs about $10,000,000 a year to put that good smell into beauty products.

Rush for Aviation Courses; New Rulings

Faced with an unprecedented rush for applications for entrance into the Aviation Cadet Course of the United States Air Corps, Colonel John F. Daye, recruiting officer of the Southern New York Recruiting District, announced today that effective Monday, January 26, all such applicants in the metropolitan area must apply in person to the Army Building, 39 Whitehall street, New York city.

Col. Daye disclosed that since the first of the year regular staffs assigned to this phase of recruiting have been swamped with a triple increase at both 90 Church street and 39 Whitehall street.

"Although we are highly pleased with the splendid response of our youth, it has nevertheless become physically impossible to cope with the increase through the normal processes," the colonel said. "Therefore 39 Whitehall street will in the future function as a clearing house for all applicants, and the subsequent examinations will be daily allocated to the seven aviation cadet teams at both places."

HOW TO STRETCH RUBBER

(AP) Feature Service

THAT rubber shortage really is going to catch up with you, and if you're wise you'll take care of household rubber goods. U. S. Rubber Company research experts say a little extra attention will retard rubber deterioration, lengthen the life of articles on hand and give you greater value from those available in the future. Here are some rights and wrongs:

WRONG—Never put rubber boots near a stove or radiator. Dry them with a cloth and place them in a closet, away from heat.

RIGHT—Drain hot water bottle after use and inflate slightly to keep sides from sticking. Store away from sun and heat.

RIGHT—Coil garden hose to prevent kinks and unnecessary strain. Never hang it over a nail. Store it in a cool, dry spot.

SHE'S RIGHT, he's wrong. Don't toss wet raincoat on a chair to dry. Put it on a wooden hanger, away from all heat.

Flashes of Life Sketched in Brief

(By The Associated Press)

Meaner Than Mean

Philadelphia—A man pleaded guilty before Judge Joseph L. Kun to a charge of stealing, and cashing, four old age assistance checks from needy neighbors.

"You are the meanest thief ever to appear in my court," asserted the judge, imposing a prison term. "Next case."

Up stepped a defendant charged with theft, and the complainant, Joseph M. Seymour.

"I was in St. Peter Clavers' Church," Seymour began. "This man knelt beside me and asked me to say some prayers for him. While I was praying, he took my wallet from my hip pocket."

The judge passed sentence without comment.

Real Fireman

Nashville, Tenn.—Two engine companies and two trucks of the Nashville Fire Department rushed to answer an urgent fire call.

When they got there, Fire Lieut. Clay Belcher took a deep breath and blew out the fire—a blazing oil heater.

What's in a Name?

Los Angeles—Robert (Boxhead) Jones, star end of the Southern California football team for three seasons, will be graduated Saturday.

Boxhead is the only Trojan in history to score 100 per cent on the football intelligence test. He diagrammed correctly each of the 11 players' assignments on 76 different plays.

Boxhead is a numismatist, philatelist, rifle expert and a Phi Beta Kappa.

Boxhead's unimaginative football playmates thought up his nickname.

That Ill Wind Again

Dallas, Tex.—Thirteen-year-old Helmut Wolfe, sensing possibilities in a tire shortage, invested 40 cents worth of materials in a vegetable crate and some wheels he found in a junk yard.

He's doing quite a business among pedestrain shoppers with his bicycle-trailer delivery service at 15 cents a trip.

Off The Record

Chetek, Wis.—Bothered by stage fright?—Then read this.

Scheduled to speak before a community meeting, Robert Jennes told his audience "This is strictly off the record."

He then produced a phonograph, attached a record made previously and joined the audience to hear his address.

Horse Still King Here

Dorchester, Neb.—The horse and buggy days may be over, but a count of vehicles assembled at the Joe Rasplicka farm during an auction sale showed two automobiles, 20 teams of horses with wagon and six saddle horses.

Queen Shuns Shop Rush

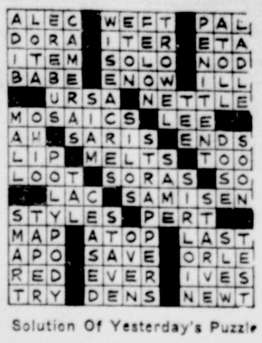

Britain's queen is not one of those who make a rush for the shops which are selling real silk stockings released by the government. In a more fortunate position than most women when the scarcity began, she had many pairs. It is reported in London that she has made up her mind not to buy any more until the end of the war when her supply is exhausted. She told a friend that she thought many other women—girls in the service or on leave and the sweethearts and wives of men coming home—needed them much more than she did.

Accidents Are Increasing With Employment Rise

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 25 — The current increase in employment is causing a considerable rise in number of industrial accidents according to a statement issued today by Industrial Commissioner Frieda S. Miller. A preliminary tabulation covering the first half of 1942 shows that 51,122 compensated accident cases were closed in the first six months of this year. This total is nearly 10,000 higher than that for the first half of 1941 and represents an increase of more than 20 per cent.

The relative rise in number of accidents was greater upstate than in New York city. The tabulation of the closed cases compiled under the direction of Dr. E. B. Patton, director of the Division of Statistics and Information in the Department of Labor, shows that the 51,122 cases included 18,870 closed in upstate districts and 32,252 closed in the New York city district. Compared with the first half of 1941 the upstate total was 26 per cent higher while that for the metropolitan area was slightly under 20 per cent higher.

The increase in number of industrial injuries was particularly noticeable in areas with defense work, especially in the metals manufacturing centers. In the Buffalo area, which has large steel mills and airplane factories, compensated accidents rose 36 per cent in the first half of 1942 compared with the same period in 1941. In the Syracuse and Rochester districts the increase amounted to about 26 per cent while in the Albany area it was somewhat less than 20 per cent.

About 20,000 of the accidents tabulated occurred in manufacturing and about 31,000 in non-manufacturing industries covered by the Workmen's Compensation Law. Most of the present rise in number of industrial injuries has occurred in manufacturing although all industry groups registered some increase. The rise in factory accidents was over 40 per cent while in non-manufacturing industries it was about 10 per cent.

This half year's cases included 368 compensated deaths and 50,754 compensated non-fatal injuries. The number of cases in the two large groups of non-fatal injuries, namely temporary and permanent partial disabilities, has gone up considerably but, so far, no appreciable increase appears in number of compensated death cases.

John Kelley Will Resign Tuesday

Will Leave S.E.C. Post for New York Law Firm

John H. Kelley, assistant general counsel of the Securities and Exchange Commission, is resigning from the commission on December 1, 1942. He will be associated with the law firm of Ignatius & Stone, 150 Broadway, New York, N. Y.

Mr. Kelley has been with the commission since its organization, being first employed in the office of general counsel at Washington, D. C. During this early period, he conducted a survey of practices in connection with unlisted trading of securities under congressional direction to the commission, and assisted in the preparation of the report and proposed legislation growing out of that survey. He also worked on the preparation of rules and regulations under the securities exchange act, and conducted and prosecuted one of the commission's early precedent-making manipulation cases.

He was appointed assistant general counsel in 1937, and since that time has been at the head of the legal division in New York, where the commission's largest regional office is located. In this capacity, Mr. Kelley has supervised and directed the staff of attorneys charged with enforcement work and participated in the trial and hearings of many important cases. His office conducted a series of investigations and court actions which eliminated widespread violations of law in connection with installment selling of securities, and conducted the investigations and hearings growing out of the McKesson & Robbins matter.

Prior to his employment by the commission, Mr. Kelley was engaged in the general practice of law, and is a member of the New York and New Jersey Bars. He is a native of Kingston, N. Y., and a graduate of Fordham University Law School.

Washington In Wartime

By Jack Stinnett

Washington—Not since the fight over reorganization of the supreme court (and that covers a lot of territory) have the foundations of Congress been so rocked as in the Senate scrap on the poll tax bill.

Only by seeing it could you believe it. From the very outset, party lines broke down. Friends turned against friends of long standing. Traditional foes discovered that they were bedfellows. And from the first day of the ruckus, jangled nerves resulted in spirited verbal rows that left the public galleries and the Senate itself a little breathless with astonishment.

Imagine the ordinarily courteous, kindly, long-haired Texan, Senator Connally, tossing such bitterisms at aged, lame-duck Senator Norris that even he (Senator Connally) seemed amazed at his own remarks and withdrew some of them from the record.

Imagine dyed - in - the - wool Democrats, men who have followed the administration through many a fight without a public whimper, turning on Majority Leader Senator Barkley and threatening rebellion against his leadership.

Imagine Senator (The Man) Bilbo—or any other senator, for that matter—standing on his feet at the very time that news was rolling in from both hemispheres of titanic battles, threatening to tie the Senate up for 30 days or more with a filibuster.

Observers here are bemoaning the fact that Congress, fresh from the strafing it got for voting itself pensions and bickering over political issues, gasoline rationing cards, etc., has stuck out its neck again.

It undoubtedly has, but before you pass judgment, it might be well to consider one more thing: That there isn't a single parliamentary weapon used in the poll tax scrap that hasn't been used for a century and a half under that very same Capitol dome.

In other words, this is nothing new—not even in war time. The filibuster has been recognized as a parliamentary expediency for 150 years. Taking up all the Senate's time with roll calls (raising the point of order that no quorum is present) isn't quite as old, but almost. Loading a bill down with extraneous and highly controversial amendments (the poll tax state senators threatened to tie more than 40 onto this bill) each of which would result in days of debate, also is an ancient trick.

All of these things have been done before — and even in the World War, the Civil War and others. It's just "Democracy at work"—a phrase that is a pretty good springboard to take off from when you are trying to form opinions on the antics of the legislative branch of our government.

Flashes of Life Sketched in Brief

(By The Associated Press)

Teeth For Country

Wilkes-Barre, Pa.—Seven-year-old Arthur Lewis' father gave him a nickel when he lost a tooth in a tussle with his sister Carol, 3.

He promptly started another scuffle, explaining:

"If she kicks out another tooth maybe you'll give me another nickel and I can buy a defense stamp."

He got the nickel—and kept the tooth.

Generals March, Too

Columbia, S. C.—Tramp, tramp, tramp, the generals are marching too.

It's Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress and his staff.

The general, feeling that his headquarters staff has been overlooked in orders decreeing a stiff physical training program for his division, ordered the staff workouts—three times a week.

Determined Sailor

Helena, Mont.—A few weeks ago Thomas H. Anderson, 19, of Poplar Bluff, Mo., decided to enlist in the navy. He was told he needed his father's consent. Father refused.

Anderson traveled 1,000 miles to Savanna, Ill., where his father was employed, to present the navy's case. Father listened—and was convinced.

Back came Anderson 1,000 miles to Montana. He will be sworn in today.

Fewer Diners

Kansas City—Usually the City Union Mission has 1,500 persons for its Thanksgiving dinner for the homeless and jobless.

But Mrs. David Bulkley, superintendent of the church-supported unit, found her job much simpler this year.

Only 500 showed up.

Spring Season

Raytown, Mo.—Clayton W. Erwin was pleased when a long dry spring on his farm started spouting 4,000 gallons of water each hour.

He told W. Logan Jones, manager of a water company, of his good fortune.

Cried Jones:

"That's the leak we've been hunting for eight months."

The water main has been repaired, Erwin's spring is dry again—and water company officials have quit worrying about bankruptcy.

BOY ROMPS WITH LION

The seven-year--old son of Superintendent M. Flood of the Dublin Zoo has made a pal of a year-old lion, which was born during a blitz in the Empire Theatre, in Leeds, England. So attached has the animal become to the boy that he is the only person it will allow near it. Daily the boy romps with it on the lawn of the Dublin Zoological Gardens, the pair rolling about playfully on the grass. The fun over, the lion meekly follows the boy back to its cage.

What Congress Is Doing Today

(By The Associated Press)

Senate

May consider resolution authorizing investigation of Puerto Rican relief needs.

WAR COMMENTS

"The man behind the man behind the gun,"—as they are singing of him—has now settled down to the job—and what a job he's doing! Those fellows in the factories are as important as the men at the front, but have it easier.

Most people are decent and cooperative about the rationing. Indignation is rising against those who selfishly insist on as much comfort and ease as they had in normal times.

There is still too much squandering of fat pay by people not used to it, who will regret their thriftlessness.

The cost of this war is already, in one year, several times as great as it was for the whole war period last time. But the limitless outpouring of wealth shortens the war, and we shall produce new wealth faster in a peaceful world.

Our conquest of Africa should be finished within a few weeks. Then comes the conquest of Europe. And after that, the conquest of Asia. Some job! But feel Uncle Sam's muscle.

The Duce is sick with disaster, and Italy suffers the fate forecast for her by Churchill and Roosevelt when she entered the war.

Hitler the Great is on the skidway to destruction, and moving fast.

RUBBER PROGRESS

With the grim ministrations of Czar Jeffers and national rationing of motor fuel, the rubber situation seems to be developing fairly well. It is not quite a year now since the Pearl Harbor attack and the drying up of the rubber supply in the East Indies. The restoration of that oriental supply is still in the vague distance, but the usual American procedure of self-help in emergency is said to be solving the problem.

The end of the first rubberless year will find most of the private motor cars and trucks in this country still operating, though with a slower pulse, and rubber still available for military and other essential purposes. The old rubber collections have helped greatly. The government and public have handled the situation sensibly, and nearly all of the motorists are now cooperating.

What of the future? Synthetic production of rubber is proceeding so satisfactorily that the second anniversary of Pearl Harbor, one year from this coming December 7, will find the American people meeting 90 per cent of their rubber needs with synthetics. And if the war continues going as well as it has been going lately, it may not be long after that until rubber is coming again from the East Indies. Meanwhile good progress is reported for rubber production in Central and South America.

TINY STATES SAFE

Some creatures, it is said, are so small that they are never stepped on. If this applies to countries also, it explains why Hitler, who generally respects only the rights of the stronger, has left Andorra alone.

This little republic of 191 square miles and 5,000 population, lying high up in the Eastern Pyrenees between France and Spain, was in the line of march of the German soldiers occupying the whole of France. Yet Hitler ordered his troops to keep out of Andorra. So this tiny state, 1,000 years old, which kept its independence during the stormy times of Napoleon and the first world war, may hope to weather the present tempest also.

Andorra is not the only small state surviving in Europe today, nor is it even the smallest. Between Austria and Switzerland lies the principality of Liechtenstein, which has enjoyed a separate existence since 1719. With an area of but 65 square miles and a population of 10,000, it belongs to the Swiss Customs union and uses Swiss currency, yet is independent.

The smallest of all is San Marino, in northern Italy, with an area of only 32 square miles and a population of 14,000. It boasts of being the oldest state in Europe, going back to the fourth century. Like Liechtenstein and Andorra, it has managed to stay out of the conflicts that have engulfed practically all Europe.

ETERNAL FEMININE

Trust a woman in an unexpected emergency! There is Mrs. B. A. Freed, for instance, a housewife in Moline, Mo., who unexpectedly found herself up in the air alone, without the slightest notion what to do about it. She had been sitting in her husband's plane while he cranked it, and just happened to push something or other, and up went the plane.

Well, Mrs. Freed naturally grabbed the steering wheel and turned it this way and that. But it just made figure eights, and thrashed around and up and down and in and out, and cut the tops off a lot of cornstocks, and finally busted the wheels down under and came to a stop, and the ambulance that had been summoned for her arrived and toted her off to the hospital.

And what did the hospital people do? Well, they fixed up her lip where she had cut it somehow, and that was all. She confessed to nervousness, but it was her husband who suffered from shock.

There has been heavy fighting lately in the Buna Gona area of New Guinea. What a wonderful college yell could be made out of that!

Take a stout swig of something and brace yourself in a chair. An economist proposes a war tax of 40 billion dollars a year.

Even a quart of milk a day and a dish of spinach for every child won't make a perfect world.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M. D.

OPERATION IN PEPTIC ULCER

During the war of 1914-1918 the number of cases of ulcer of the stomach and of the small intestine among the soldiers and civilian population greatly increased. After the war there was a gradual decrease in ulcer until the years of the depression when again there was an increase. After the first few years of the depression the ulcer cases gradually decreased. Since the beginning of the present war there is again an increase of ulcer in both army and civilian life.

The above facts definitely show that aside from other factors—slender body, rough foods, infection—nervousness and emotional disturbances is the match that lights the fire.

For many years the treatment of stomach and intestinal ulcer was by medicine and diet in mild cases and operation in severe cases. In other words the physician handed the case over to the surgeon when he felt the patient required operation to save his life.

Today the physician and surgeon work as a team on cases of peptic ulcer. What is called a "combined" clinic was started at Bellevue Hospital, New York, in 1928, and Dr. J. William Hinton, Associate Professor of Clinical Surgery, Columbia University, in Medical Clinics of North America, states:

"When the clinic started, January 1928, we believed, as a result of what we had seen in our follow up of surgical operations, that operation generally gave poor results. For that reason we would not advise operation unless the pain was so severe the patient insisted. I felt from the beginning that medical care for the 'uncomplicated' ulcer gave excellent results."

"If a patient with ulcer is seen early in the course of the disease, meaning the first few months or year and is put under medical management and if he cooperates in the treatment, the chances of avoiding surgery over a ten year period are excellent. If the patient with ulcer is first seen late in the disease, five years or longer after the onset, then the chances of improvement under medical management are greatly reduced."

The lesson here is like the lessons we have learned about other diseases, namely that the sooner the patient reports to his physician with symptoms that persist more than a few weeks despite "home" treatment, the sooner will the disease be recognized and surgery avoided.

BABSON ON BUSINESS

INSURANCE STOCKS

Babson Recommends a Check-up; But All Policies Are O. K.

New York City, Nov. 27—Investors will soon be seeing newspaper reports about the government getting after fire insurance companies. The trouble started with a grand jury investigation at Atlanta, Ga.; it will probably be pushed by the department of justice until it reaches the Supreme Court. The government has already investigated life insurance companies and they came through with a good bill of health. Now the government is after the fire insurance companies. It seems as if with Germans, Japanese and Italians on our backs, the department of justice could wait until after the war.

Insurance Stocks Fundamentally Sound

Insurance stocks may roughly be divided into four groups:—(1) Life (2) Health and Accident (3) Fire and Marine (4) Casualty. The life insurance companies already have government competition in the form of "Social Security" and will probably have more. On the other hand, it should be many years before there will not be a field for life insurance companies. There will always be a demand for policies which the government will not wish to issue.

Fire insurance companies will probably be forced to reorganize their sales methods. It is costing too much to sell all kinds of insurance. In fact, some New Dealers are said to believe that "selling" fire insurances should be eliminated by the adoption of automatic compulsory fire insurance equal to the assessed value of one's buildings. This, however, should not harm the good and independent companies which would still be needed to carry the insurance, make inspections and adjust losses. I further think highly of the stocks of well-established, independent fire insurance companies as inflation hedges. Such companies have an advantage in being able to raise their rates to meet any emergency—a privilege not enjoyed by life companies.

The future of health and accident companies is not so clear. Most of their policies are now for small amounts with working people. If social security is enlarged to include health and accident, these companies may suffer. The wise ones are already hedging by taking on other lines. The casualty group are the newest in the field. Thus far they have been very successful; but how they will survive the war, only the future can tell. The government already owns one of the largest in the field.

An Honorable Business

The insurance business has always appealed to me as a most honorable business. It comes the nearest to Christian teaching of any big business. Through insurance, when a family loses its father by death, or its home by fire, or its employment by illness, or gets involved in an unfortunate lawsuit, all the "neighbors" chip in and help pay the loss. The loss, which would otherwise fall on one family, is spread over thousands of families. Money invested in an insurance company can do a lot of good, be fairly safe and return a good income. In fact, due to their experience and set up, insurance companies have an opportunity of becoming leaders in the new co-operative commonwealth ahead.

But why this government investigation? The answer is that too many insurance companies have gotten into the hands of Wall street and other financiers or are being operated as helpless members of "fleets". Of course, the difficulty is that the regulations of good, independent companies, which are not mixed up with "fleets" or Wall Street, may suffer with the weak ones.

What to Buy

The fire companies which should come through this investigation best are the medium-sized ones located outside of New York city free from certain "fleet" entanglements and not dependent upon any other company for business. Among the better ones are the following: Boston Insurance, Providence-Washington, Security of New Haven, Springfield Fire and Marine, Agricultural Insurance, New Hampshire Fire, Glens Falls, St. Paul Fire & Marine, Northwestern National Insurance and the Hartford Fire.

Of course, a successful company must have a good group of of loyal and active agents. Most necessary of all, however, is an honest management which is working solely for the stockholders and has no conflicting outside interests. Such men should be good business-getters, conservative investors and experienced underwriters. Insurance companies should insist upon thorough investigation both as to risks and investments. Policyholders, however, have nothing to fear—wherever a company is located, whether independent of a fleet member. Nothing is safer than fire insurance policies.

Consult Your Broker

I advise readers to show their lists of insurance stocks to an honest broker, asking him to mark the ones which are being operated independently and are not depending upon some New York "daddy". These should be O. K. The value of "fleet members" depends largely, however, upon whether they are being operated solely for the benefit of the fleet stockholders, or are being operated, under a management contract, partly for the benefit of some other company. Especially ascertain whether the directors of the company in which you hold stock are checking their investments, underwriting, agents, etc., or are blindly leaving these important matters to others.

Every company, whether or not a member of a "fleet," should keep in touch with its own agents and policyholders. Then, if at any time the management contract is cancelled by the big company, the little company would not be left high and dry as a mere shell. This can be avoided if the directors of the little companies will insist on proper up-to-date information and personal supervision. I go further and say that small companies which are members of "fleets" will ultimately survive or perish according to the character, independence and aggressiveness of their own local board of directors.

"AT CENTURY'S TURN"

By H. L. VAN DEUSEN

It is interesting to recall that the first "talking movies" as they were then called was shown in the Broadway Theatre on May 7, 1928, when Al Jolson was featured in "The Jazz Singer."

It was in April of that year that a vitaphone and movietone apparatus was being installed in the theatre at a cost of $25,000.

Harry Lazarus was manager of the Broadway Theatre that year.

In the 14 years that have elapsed the movies have developed wonderfully, and as for the silent pictures they replaced, only the old timers recall them. In the days of the silent movies such stars as Charlie Chaplin, Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks were three of the leaders in the field.

And speaking of the movies it was on April 22, 1908, that the Sahler building on Wall street was leased to be opened shortly as the Novelty Theatre where the old silent movies were shown for a number of years. The Novelty furnished competition for the Bijou located in a former store on the same side of Wall street.

Physical Director L. C. Godfrey resigned as physical director at the local Y. M. C. A. on April 25, 1918, to accept a position as executive secretary of the Maplewood Branch of the Y. M. C. A. in Rochester. I also recall that among the Kingston men who left the local "Y" to accept positions with the Bedford Branch were Gus Bonesteel, who is still there, and Clarence Schoonmaker, who some years ago returned to Kingston and served the local "Y" as its general secretary for several years.

One of the big fires in Kingston in 1908 was that of April 30 of that year, that destroyed the hardware store of J. T. Johnston and damaged the First National Bank on the Strand. The fire damage was placed at $100,000.

Mr. Johnson, who died some years ago was one of the best known hardware merchants in Kingston, and was engaged in business on the Strand for many years. He was also active in civic affairs and had served as a member of the city's board of water commissioners.

I also recall that in April, 1908, butter was selling at 25 cents a pound, and eggs at 17 cents a dozen. It should be recalled, that in those early days the average wage paid in Kingston totaled from $10 to $12 a week.

For that money the men worked from 7 o'clock in the morning until 6 o'clock at night.

Living conditions were much cheaper in those days in order to compensate for the low rate of wages, and families were brought up with the wage earner making from $10 to $15 a week, but they set as good a table in those days as they do today with wages considerably higher.

Who Makes Laws in United States—Congress or Whimsical Writers in Executive Agencies?

By DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington, Nov. 27 — Who makes the laws in America—the Congress or a whimsical group of regulation writers in the executive agencies?

Thus the constitution says that tax laws must originate in the House of Representatives and that they must be passed by a majority of both houses of Congress. But the new bureau of economic stabilization has just issued a few decrees that conflict with the laws of Congress and unless some more decrees are issued to clarify the muddle, the citizen will not know how to make out his income tax return and the employer will not know what to withhold from an employe where the salary earned is in excess of $25,000.

For several weeks it has been insisted that only the persons with salaries in excess of $67,200 were affected by the Byrnes "law." Now it turns out that anybody with a salary slightly in excess of about $46,800 can under certain circumstances be affected by the anti-management decree.

The existing regulation reads as follows:

"No amount of salary. . . . shall be paid or authorized to be paid to or accrued to the account of any employe or received by him during the taxable year which, after reduction by the federal income taxes on the amount of such salary, would exceed $25,000. The amount of such federal income taxes shall be determined by applying to the total amount of salary . . . paid or accrued during the taxable year, undiminished by any deductions, the rates of taxes imposed by Chapter 1 of the code . . . as if such amount of salary were the net income (after the allowance of credits applicable thereto), the surtax net income and the victory tax net income, respectively, and without allowance of any credits against any such taxes."

The foregoing simply nullifies the tax laws of Congress by removing at one fell swope all the deductions that a taxpayer is entitled to under the revenue laws. Congress, in other words, says the taxpayer may deduct certain items but the Byrnes edict says the taxpayer may do no such thing if he is in certain brackets.

Thus a person with a salary of, let us say, $46,800 may have had a bad debt loss of $26,800 and no profits to offset it. Under the law as passed by Congress his net income would this year, for instance, be only $20,000 and if he had no other deductions he would pay taxes on $20,000. But the regulation issued by the Office of Economic Stabilization above would erase the bad debt deduction altogether next year and the individual would have to pay the treasury everything that remained over and above $25,000 just the same because his taxes are figured on the $46,800 amount and not on his real net income.

Since when can an executive agency nullify the deductions written into the tax laws by the Congress? If the Office of the Director of Economic Stabilization or any other government bureau can fix the tax rates at will and disregard the specific rates of taxation and allowable credits written into the revenue laws, then has not a precedent been established whereby in the future executive agencies can write whatever tax rates they like into the executive orders and call it "anti-inflation"? Has Congress granted any such discretionary power to the executive bureaus? The men on capitol hill who had most to do with the writing of the revenue laws answer in the negative. They insist that no more flagrant example of abuse of power has been recorded under the whole New Deal than this attempt to grab the power to fix tax rates.

The new limitation on top salaries goes into effect January 1, 1943, and will not apply to incomes earned during 1942 but employers will have to be careful how they pay out salaries in 1943. If they pay more than their employe should have under these complicated computations they run the risk of being put in jail as well as having the whole item of salary—not merely the excess—disallowed in the corporation income tax return.

Every employer must sit down next year with his top executives and figure out what deductions they have or might have and go into the details of the employe's tax return so as to be sure that not one penny in excess of $25,000 net after taxes is paid. The employer must be sure also that if the employe works for two companies as is the case in large business enterprises neither employer shall pay any sums that might put the combined net income from salary after taxes up above $25,000. It is reported that the treasury is working on a new set of regulations to take into account the persons in the salary range between $46,800 and $67,200 who might be affected by the wording of the latest regulation of October 27, 1942. But there is no intimation that the regulations will bring any relief.

(Reproduction Rights Reserved)

Washington, Nov. 26 — Someone has misled Jimmy Byrnes—director of economic stabilization—and, incidentally, many other persons in America have been misled into believing that only persons with a salary of $67,200 are affected by the salary limitation decree issued by the White House. The truth is that anybody with a salary of $46,800 might be affected under certain circumstances; such a taxpayer may be compelled to give back money to the treasury so as to conform to the regulation.

The confusion arising is so great that it is understood that the treasury itself is considering the issuance of an explanatory regulation which will indicate that persons with a salary range from $46,800 to $67,200 may find themselves affected by the salary restriction and required to give money back to the treasury.

Mr. Byrnes in a recent speech said:

"The so-called $25,000 salary limitation actually affects only those having a salary in excess of $67,200. The tax on that salary will reduce the net income to $25,000."

But what was forgotten evidently was the effect of allowable deductions on the result. Thus a married person receiving a salary of $46,800 and having two dependents, with allowable deductions equal to ten per cent of his gross salary, will find that under the new 1942 revenue law his total normal tax, surtax and victory tax amounts to $21,792 which leaves $25,000 after taxes. This excess of $8 will have to be returned to the treasury.

Take the man who has a salary of $50,000 and again allowing for deductions amounting to about ten per cent or $5,000 and the total tax is $23,881, which leaves the taxpayer a remainder of $26,119. But this is $1,119 in excess of the $25,000 which he may retain under the Byrnes formula. He will have to give that to the treasury unless the regulations are changed.

Now it is true that a person with a $67,20 salary cannot retain more than $25,000, but it is apparent that when certain deductions allowable under the revenue laws are taken, the net amount remaining might exceed $25,000. Any excess would have to be given to the treasury. So as the sum of allowable deductions increases, the chances grow that the taxpayer will be compelled to give the treasury more money, so as to have not more than $25,000 left after taxes.

It is estimated that approximately 5,400 persons in the United States receive salaries in excess of $46,800.

The number of persons with dividends in excess of $46,800 was about 5,234 in the year 1939, and the present estimate for 1942 made by competent statisticians is that the number is about 8,000.

Thus, one set of citizens can retain far more money than another set, even though the amounts received are the same. The people who work are penalized. The people who derive money from investments are not penalized. Congress didn't authorize either group to be punished, but if punishment is to be meted, Mrs. Roosevelt is right in declaring that both groups ought to be treated alike.

Incidentally, Mrs. Roosevelt, on her return from her visit to Britain, stated that "practically no one" in Britain has more than $21,00 left after payment of taxes. This might lead some observers to believe that Britain has a salary ceiling. This is not true.

In Britain anybody can earn as much as he wishes and the only way his salary can be cut is by a tax law. There is no barrier to the earning of $1,000,000 a year or deriving that sum from investments if the opportunity can be found. Incidentally, in Britain the amount remaining to the taxpayer on a $1,000,000 income is $38,420, and that $1,000,000 is net income only after many allowable deductions have been made—Britain's laws being more liberal than ours.

If the allowable deductions in both the United Kingdom and America were to amount to 20 per cent, respectively, the net cash retained by the British taxpayer out of a gross salary income of $67,200 would be $14,074, while in the United States the taxpayer, because of the salary limitation, would retain net cash of only $11,560. And yet it is being widely stated that Britain's system is more drastic than ours.

SONG IN SOCK COSTS $20

Because of a song in his sock, Jeremiah Daly's trip from Holyhead, Wales, to Ballinrae, County Cork, cost him $20. This "socking" was in the form of a fine imposed because the ditty was "Valleys of Lackalmore," a Republican song, which he said he was afraid to produce for fear he be considered an I. R. A. member. He also was fined $12 for a letter, which he said was for his foreman's wife in Ireland, found in the other sock, providing a total socking of $32.

Revised 'Milk' Amendment Could Mean Confiscation

Sheffield Vice President Announces Possibility of Federal-State Order Change

New York, Jan. 27 (AP)—R. M. Wellwood, vice-president of the Sheffield Farms Company, said today that revised schedules of payments to milk distributing co-operatives, proposed in amendments to the Federal-State milk orders, could result in confiscation of the property of proprietary milk handlers.

Testifying at a public hearing before presiding officer Glen J. Gifford, Wellwood accused co-operatives proposing the amendment of attempting "to collect money from non-members by force of a provision written into a federal order."

About 100 government officials and representatives of various milk interests attended the hearing.

Wellwood declared that when the milk industry discussed the problems of surplus milk production in May, 1933, certain principles were agreed to, including, he said one "to provide an equal cost of milk for each use to all handlers, and to assure an equal price to all producers through the operation of an equalization pool."

"Recognition was given to the cooperative movement at this time," he said. "The principle of cooperative provisions differs sharply from the proposal now being considered as to cooperative payments.

"The proponents have said that the cooperative handler is motivated by the desire to get the highest price for all milk for all producers, and that the proprietary handler is motivated only by profit.

Asks Question

"In the absence of a profit motive, can an operating co-operative business possess financial stability unless it comes from subsidies, involuntarily supported by producers who are not members?

"We as proprietary handlers must have the welfare of the farmer always in mind if we are to maintain a satisfactory supply of milk. Without that we could not have a successful business.

"Since September 1, 1938, there have been months when the Sheffield Farms Company made a profit. There have been many months when it had a loss.

"Under the present order we must account to the producers at uniform prices while an operating cooperative is exempted from that necessity.

"We are now faced with the proposal that one of our major competitors — a co-operative — would receive out of a settlement fund belonging to all producers 10 cents a hundredweight on all the milk they handle.

Would Be $1,000,000

"The milk of the Sheffield Farms Company in the market pool for one year at 10 cents a hundredweight would amount to approximately $1,000,000. The Dairymen's League handles a great deal more milk than we do.

"If it is twice our amount they would receive an income from that source alone of approximately $2,500,000. Now they claim that they should have the right of competing in surplus markets on the basis of a less-cost-of-milk product to them to the extent of a minus differential.

"They want this extra amount in addition to the regular payments to compete for these surplus markets and they want all the farmers to pay for it."

"This appears to us to be not only discrimination but over a period of time to be confiscation of our property.

"If this job of marketing milk can be done more efficiently by a cooperative organization than by a proprietary company there is no need for any subsidy.

"We have no quarrel with any cooperative that wishes to collect anything from its own members for services it renders to them. However, to collect from non-members by force of a provision written into a federal order is quite another thing."

Pearl Harbor Quiz Promised by Maas Of Naval Branch

Washington, Jan. 27 (AP)—A sweeping, supplementary study of the Pearl Harbor disaster "and all that led up to it" by the House naval committee was promised today by Representative Maas (R.-Minn.) World War veteran and ranking Republican member of the committee.

Maas' statement followed a closed meeting of the committee.

Chairman Vinson (D.-Ga.) declined to comment.

While declining to divulge what transpired at the executive session, Maas told the newsmen that "after conference with several members, I can assure the country that the House naval affairs committee will undertake a thorough investigation of the entire Pearl Harbor situation, and all that led up to it and will study also the Roberts report."

Earlier Senator Norris (Ind.-Neb.) demanded that army and navy commands be unified in a single defense department.

U. S. Uncovers Junk And Gives Orders

Cincinnati, Jan. 27 (AP).—A federal steel-hunting expedition, uncovering an estimated 4,000 tons of scrap in four Ohio cities, today gave junk dealers 30 days in which to turn it over to hungry mills.

Otherwise, said Major Alvin C. Rasmussen "those who refuse to do so will have their entire stock requisitioned and allocated to steel plants by the government."

Operators of "automotive graveyards" were instructed to report within a week that they had begun to move steel to mills.

War Fund Grows

Charles W. Walton, chairman of the American Red Cross War Fund Campaign announced today that a contribution of $500 was received from the C. Hiltebrant Dry Dock Co., and also a contribution of $179 was received from the employes of the C. Hiltebrant Dry Dock Co.

Mr. Walton also announced that the town of Saugerties whose quota was $3,500 has reached its goal and gone over the top. Chairman Fabian L. Russell of the American Red Cross War Fund Committee, Town of Saugerties, has reported that further contributions are being made.

Mr. Walton further announced that Edgar V. Beebe and Vanderlyn Pine, co-chairman of the American Red Cross War Fund Committee, Town of New Paltz, have turned in contributions amounting to $2,105.02, up to and including January 23. This amount places the town of New Paltz with the other towns that have gone over the top, making them the fifth town that has completed its full quota.

Two Arrested

Two arrests were made by the police in the city Monday, and both cases came up for a hearing before Judge Matthew V. Cahill in police court today. In the case of Ralph A. North of Boiceville, charged with parking his auto with the left side to the curb on Broadway, an adjournment was taken until later. Fred Crantz of 145 Elmendorf street, charged with public intoxication, was given a suspended sentence.

Body of Girl Is Found

Laurel, Md., Jan. 27 (AP)—Chief of Police Edward Brown said the partially-clothed body of a pretty, blond girl, about 24 years old, apparently slain, was found near here this morning by two teen-age boys. Brown said the body of the girl was found lying face down 75 to 100 feet from a road leading from Laurel to the Laurel race track. He said she "apparently was killed" sometime in the early part of the night.

Even Sure-Footed Cats Stumble Into This Moat

NEW YORK.—Sure-footed as a cat, eh? Well, Bronx park zoo attendants have found out that all cats aren't so nimble. Five lions recently were transferred to a barless run separated from the spectators by a moat. One of them is so clumsy he's fallen in six or seven times, the others at least twice.

Vitamins and Honey Build Energy Quick

DETROIT. — The Michigan Honey association has perfected a concentrate of vitamins mixed with honey to take care of that "tired feeling."

"We have given it to people suffering from extreme fatigue and found it immediately restored their lost energy," M. S. Zia, the president, said.

reported attacked in U. S. waters.

Actually, only seven ships have been reported attacked in U. S. waters.

Other Developments

Other swift-breaking developments included:

In the Philippines, a Tokyo broadcast asserted without confirmation elsewhere that Japanese troops had captured Balanga, chief town on the east coast of Batan peninsula facing Manila Bay.

In the Dutch East Indies, the N. E. I. command acknowledged that Japanese sea-borne troops had apparently succeded in occupying new points in southeast Celebes Island, in the Kendari section.

On the Malayan front, British headquarters reported that Japan's invasion hordes had effected another landing near Endau, on the east coast, 80 miles north of Singapore.

A British bulletin said the landing was executed despite heavy assault by R.A.F. bombers which scored a direct hit on a Japanese cruiser and 12 direct hits on troop-laden transports.

In Singapore itself, R.A.F. fighting planes battled Japanese bomber formations in prolonged action over the $400,000,000 island stronghold this morning. Bombs fell on several districts, and a few fires were started.

Imperial Tokyo headquarters said 50 British planes were shot down yesterday—39 in air battles in which R.A.F. bombers and torpedo planes attacked Japanese transports off Endau; 10 shot down over Rangoon, Burma, and one at Singapore.

A Tokyo broadcast said Japanese forces were advancing "according to plan" upon Moulmein, across the bay from Rangoon, but admitted terrific resistance.

In central Malaya, front-line dispatches indicated that the hard-fighting British, Australian and Imperial Indian troops were still holding positions below Kluang, 50 miles north of Singapore, but said the Japanese were attacking steadily with the support of incessant dive-bombing and machine-gunning attacks.

Other British defenders were making a stand at Ayer Hitam, 19 miles northeast of the Batu Pahat sector, which is 64 miles north of Singapore, and at Semggarang on the west coast.

Painting a picture of growing Allied might, Prime Minister Churchill told the House of Commons he doubted that the victory flushed Japanese would gamble on an attempt to invade Australia—"a very ambitious overseas operation in the precarious and certainly limited time before the British and American navies regain, as they must regain, ultimate command of the Pacific."

"We are taking many measures with the United States to increase the security of Australia and New Zealand and are sending reinforcements, arms and equipment by the best routes," he added.

The Prime Minister further disclosed that President Roosevelt would "propose the establishment of a Pacific (war) council in Washington or London" to include representatives of Australia, New Zealand, the United States, Britain and the Netherlands.

Battle Continues

Beyond word that the historic battle in the Strait of Macassar was continuing, no further details were immediately available.

The only aircraft carrier believed to have been assigned to the Japanese armada was torpedoed by a U. S. submarine, and it was officially reported that the carrier "is believed to have sunk." Even if she survived, navy men said, her disabled condition would immobilize the planes aboard.

The U. S. and Dutch forces listed 11 ships as definitely sunk in the four-day-old battle in the 414-mile strait between Borneo and the Celebes, six as probably sunk and 17 others heavily damaged.

In addition, five Japanese planes which challenged U. S. flying fortresses had been shot down before the attack upon the carrier was announced.

Contributing to the one-ship-sinking-a-day program of the U. S. armed services for the 51 days of the war was a second motor torpedo-boat foray into Japanese-held Subic Bay, which cuts into the Luzon coastline 50 miles northwest of Manila.

There Ensign George E. Cox, Jr., of Watertown, N. Y., 27-year-old veteran of speedboat racing on the St. Lawrence river torpedoed and sank a 5,000-ton Japanese vessel.

The Royal Australian Air Force reported that three Japanese ships in Rabaul harbor were damaged in a bombing attack last night and two were left in flames. All the Australian aircraft, supporting the ground forces reported to be still challenging the invaders, were reported to have returned.

A British announcement said 1,202 persons had been killed by Japanese bombs in Rangoon, the Burmese capital, since December 23.

Sugar Allowances Might Be 12 Ounces

Washington, Jan. 27 (AP).—The individual sugar allowance may be as low as 12 ounces a week per person when rationing begins next month.

Price Administrator Leon Henderson explained that the allowance of 50 pounds per year per person which previously had been forecast, applied to the nation as a whole and failed to take into account meals in restaurants and hotels.

Deductions for public eating places probably will cut the ration down to three-fourths of a pound, he said.

Home Defense

Sixth Ward

A defense meeting will be held for the Sixth Ward, Wednesday evening at 7:15 o'clock, in No. 3 Public School, it was announced by Abe Singer, zone warden. Moving pictures will be shown at 7:30 o'clock by Fire Chief Joseph L. Murphy about incendiary bombs, and there will be lectures by the chief and Captain L. S. Miller. All residents of the Sixth Ward interested in studying Red Cross first aid courses are invited to enroll at the meeting for instructions.

To Show Movie

An interesting and timely movie will be shown in the auditorium of the Kingston High School on Friday evening as part of the local defense program. The movies will show the effects of actual bombing as well as the combatting of incendiary bombs dropped from airplanes.

While this movie is intended primarily for the benefit of the air wardens and assistants, it is of such timely interest that all residents of the city, who can do so, should make it a point to be present in the auditorium that evening. Admission will be free.

Fire Chief Joseph L. Murphy, who has been kept busy for several months lecturing all over the city and county on the methods to be used in fighting incendiary bombs, will be the principal speaker of the evening.

About the Folks

Miss Mabel Comerford of Spring street, who has been ill for two weeks has returned to her work.

Huge Cake Is Presented

Washington, Jan. 27 (AP)—President Roosevelt has a tremendous birthday cake — weighing 350 pounds and standing 6 feet 4 inches tall. It was decorated liberally with "V's for Victory" and the telegraphic code signal for V, with red, white and blue candy icing and it was topped by a sailor and girl jitterbugging. The cake was turned over to Mr. Roosevelt today by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, along with checks totaling $10,529 representing donations of A. F. L. Unions to the campaign against infantile paralysis. The cake itself was the gift of the Bakery and Confectionery Workers Union and was designed and baked by Clement Maggie, Washington pastry expert.

Taxpayers to Meet

The regular meeting of the Town of Rosendale Taxpayers Association will be held at the Maple Hill school house January 29, 1942. All members are requested to be present as a number of important matters are to be voted on. The meeting will start at 8 o'clock.

Removed to Kerhonkson

Floyd Decker, owner of the Mid-Hudson Appliance Co., of 785 Broadway announces that L. B. Watrous is no longer a salesman for the company or associated with it in any other way. Mr. Decker's company removed to Main street in Kerhonkson.

Henderson Makes Appeal

Washington, Jan. 27 (AP)—Acting Price Administrator Leon Henderson was reported today to have made a last-minute appeal to Senators for final approval of compromise price control legislation. Well-informed sources said that he had written a letter to Senators in an attempt to refute any implication that he believes the pending bill would not achieve the degree of price control that current conditions warrant. It also had been reported that Republicans might try to block President Roosevelt's expected appointment of Henderson as administrator once the bill becomes law.

Pounds Out 255

Bowling with the Sevens at Emerick's Recreation alleys Monday night in the City League, Randy Kelder picked up a 255 single and closed up with a triple of 612 to help his teammates take three straight games from the Petersens.

Freddie Rice who had a 717 triple Sunday night came through again, this time collecting 634.

Other 200 or better scores in the league last night were collected by Niles with 220, Raible with 203, and Jones with 200.

New York, Jan. 27 (AP)—Stocks extended Monday's rally by fractions to a point or so in today's early market transactions but the majority eventually lost rising momentum.

Dealings slackened after midday and extreme gains were substantially reduced or cancelled near the final hour. Many leaders were unable to make headway and, while small advances were the rule for assorted rails, steels, oils, and specialties declines were plentiful. Transfers were at the rate of about 600,000 shares.

Reports of further Japanese warship casualties in the Far Pacific cheered Wall Street and the hopeful tone of Prime Minister Churchill's address to the House of Commons was encouraging. The growing threat to Singapore was an offset marketwise. Many bright earnings statements helped counteract persistent tax doubts.

Carrier bonds again were forward leaners. Cotton futures hit new 12-year peaks, apparently spurred by House passage of the price control bill.

Among stocks new highs for 1941-42 were recorded for Loew's Devoe & Raynolds and Cuban-American Sugar. The sugars, though, seemed to have run out of steam. In front at times were N. Y. Central, Great Northern, U. S. Steel, Standard Oil (N. J.), Sears Roebuck, Paramount Pictures and J. I. Case.

Backward were General Motors, Chrysler, du Pont, Union Carbide and Boeing.

Supported in a slim curb were American Gas, Electric Bond & Share and Aluminum of America.

Ellenville, Nov. 27 — Charles Palmer of Lackawack, died on Sunday, November 22 at the Medical Center, New York. Funeral services were held on Wednesday, November 25 at Wood & Lambert's Funeral Parlors. Burial was in Fantinekill cemetery.

Funeral services for Harriet Stockwell Waterman were held yesterday afternoon from the Salvation Army chapel on North Front street, with Adjutant Hoffman in charge. Bearers were: John, Chester, Edgar, Howard, Raymond and William Waterman, all sons of deceased. The remains were accompanied to the Shandaken Rural cemetery, where burial took place, by members of the Home League of the Salvation Army. At the grave, the services were in charge of Adjutant Hoffman and Miss Betty Hoffman sounded taps over the grave.

Calvin E. Lord, a retired machinist, of 84 Franklin street, died on Wednesday in the Kingston Hospital. Funeral services were held this afternoon in the parlors of A. Carr & Son, 1 Pearl street, with the Rev. William R. Peckham, pastor of the Clinton Avenue Methodist Church, officiating. Burial was in Maplewood Cemetery in South Jewitt. Surviving are his wife, the former Miss Winifred Matthews; a son, Ralph M. Lord, of Tannersville, and a daughter, Mrs. Blanche E. Snyder of New York city.

Otis Holden died at the Benedictine Hospital Thursday after a short illness. He was born in Shandaken and came here about 24 years ago. He was a chauffeur for many years in this city driving for various firms. Besides his wife, he is survived by two brothers, Wilson of Arkville and Wesley of this city; also two sisters, Mrs. Uriah Golneck of Newark, N. J., and Mrs. Philip Yerry of Poughkeepsie. Funeral will be held Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the James M. Murphy Funeral Home. Burial will be in Montrepose cemetery.

Ellenville, Nov. 27 — James Madison Wright, 88, died at his home in Cragsmoor on Thursday, November 19 after a brief illness. He was born at Cragsmoor, October 7, 1854, the son of James J., and Elizabeth Baker Wright. He married Jennie Mayer in New York in 1882. She died in 1918. Surviving are one son, James H. Wright of Walden; three daughters, Elizabeth and Georgia Wright and Estelle Boonton, all at home and several nieces and nephews. Funeral services were held at the Pulling Funeral Home on Sunday, November 22, the Rev. Donald H. Spencer officiating. Burial was in Fantinekill cemetery.

New Paltz, Nov. 27 — Dennis Williams, aged 84 years, died Tuesday, November 24, at his home on North Front street, New Paltz. He was born and lived most of his life in New Paltz. He is survived by his wife, Annie Ackert Williams; two sons, Frank D. Poletti Might Be 1946 Candidate

Lehman's Resignation Puts Spotlight on Poletti With 'Comeback' Hope

By WILLIAM W. TYLER

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 27 (AP)—Governor Lehman's resignation four weeks before expiration of his term spotlights Lieut. Governor Charles Poletti, on whom some Democrats already look as their "comeback" hope for 1946.

His potentialities as gubernatorial candidate four years hence received plenty of mention after leaders recovered from their November 3 disappointment—the election of Republican Thomas E. Dewey as governor.

Supporters of Poletti forecast a brightening of his political star, despite his defeat by Thomas W. Wallace.

Poletti was a candidate for re-election on both the Democratic and the American Labor Party tickets. Although defeated he ran far ahead of John J. Bennett, candidate for governor on the Democratic voting line, and well in front of Dean Alfange, American Labor Party gubernatorial nominee, under the A.L.P. label.

In addition he carried New York city over Wallace by more than 600,000 votes, which normally is sufficient to elect a Democratic governor.

With the defection of A.L.P. and some New Deal Democratic ballots an important, if not decisive factor in Bennett's defeat, backers of Poletti claim his hold on both could weld the elements necessary for a return to Democratic state control in 1947.

On top of these political factors, Governor Lehman's early entrance on his new job of directing foreign relief and rehabilitation drapes the gubernatorial mantle on Poletti, even though briefly, and gives him the prestige of actually occupying the governorship.

He becomes the 46th governor and, unexpectedly, the last of a 20-year Democratic regime.

That can't hurt him when it comes time to talk nominations in 1946.

Governor Lehman, slated to quit the gubernatorial chair on or about December 3, is the fifth of New York's chief executives to resign but the first since Charles Evans Hughes bowed out of Albany to become a United States Supreme Court justice in 1910.

Previous resignation freed Grover Cleveland for the presidency in 1885, Martin Van Buren to become United States Secretary of State in 1829, and Daniel D. Tompkins to campaign successfully in 1817 for vice president.

Lehman's decision raised the question of who receives the governor's resignation and started a quick search of the law by his counsel.

The law, it develops, provides this his resignation go to both houses of the legislature but, since legislators do not convene until January, he flles it meanwhile with the secretary of state.

Impending departure of the Lehmans has other interesting ramifications.

Ordinarily elevation of Poletti to the governorship would make Joe R. Hanley, Republican majority leader of the Senate, acting lieutenant governor. But since Hanley is vacationing at Hot Springs, Ark., where he plans to remain until late December, the honor passes to Oswald D. Heck, of Schenectady, Republican speaker of the Assembly.

Thus Heck temporarily will fill the office which Wallace, his fellow townsman and friend, takes over permanently January 1.

The situation also gives Democrats a crumb of comfort, of which the waggish are taking full advantage.

"Well, anyway, Tom Dewey won't be the next governor," they are chuckling ruefully.

Action Is Settled In Negligence Case

Another Case Is Brought to Trial This Morning

A negligence action brought by Thomas Taylor and another against Samuel R. Palmer, which was started in Supreme Court Wednesday, to recover for damages caused by a collision near the Pine Bush cemetery at Accord, was settled. Taylor claimed damages to his car when it struck the Palmer car which was turning in at the cemetery gate. Mr. and Mrs. Taylor reside in Kingston and Palmer lives in Ellenville.

This morning another negligence action arising out of an automobile accident was taken up for trial. Angelo Riozzi and his son Anthony Riozzi bring an action against Madeline Comstock and her husband, to recover damages for injuries which Anthony suffered when struck by the Comstock car, driven by Dr. Comstock, near the Saugerties school on October 3, 1940. The boy, about 13 years old, had come from school when he was struck by the car registered in the name of Mrs. Comstock and driven by her husband. James H. Hyer appears as attorney of record for plaintiff and Judge A. J. Cook appears as trial counsel for Herbert F. Hastings, Jr., attorney of record for the defendants.

New York, Nov. 27 (AP)—Wall streeters returned from their holiday festivities with about the same market opinions as they had before and the result was that today's stock buying continued on a selective basis.

Although peace favorites continued to attract mild demand as the battle front news remained encouraging, selling in the war group never was urgent and the opinion was expressed that perhaps there had been a little too much liquidating emphasis placed on the latter recently. Tax offerings still were a restraining influence.

Dealings were slow and price changes negligible from the start but plus marks had a shade the best of it near the fourth hour.

Bonds and commodities were narrow.

Stocks tilting forward included J. I. Case, Montgomery Ward, American Telephone, Ananconda, Chrysler, American Airlines, Eastern Airlines, DuPont, Dow Chemical, Johns-Manville and Standard Oil of New Jersey. Hesitant were Southern Pacific, Chesapeake & Ohio, U. S. Rubber, Bethlehem, Douglas Aircraft, Kennecott and Phelps Dodge.

'Bully Beef' Pilots Are Among Most Daring Over New Guinea Battle Areas

By MURLIN SPENCER

Somewhere in New Guinea, Nov. 26 (Delayed) (AP) — The Americans call it "bully beef express."

But there's a note of respect when they use that name for, of all the fliers who ride the skies over embattled New Guinea, the pilots of "the bully beef express" are among the most daring, the most skillful and the hardest working.

Unarmed, except for the .45 calibre automatics, which the pilots carry, and virtually cold meat for any enemy plane, these Douglas and Lockheed army transports sweep in and out over enemy territory to land within a few miles of the Japanese lines to deliver their cargoes and pull away again.

I have seen them fly directly over a Japanese anti-aircraft gun position so low that the Japanese could not fire their anti-aircraft batteries but did blaze away with machine-guns.

Unshaven pilots will stand beside the planes when they have landed and bellow for men to hurry and unload them so they can get going before some Zero should happen by.

They carry soldiers, natives, ammunition and what-not. They land in fields even the early-day barnstormers would have shunned.

The pilots are all members of the army transport service. They don't go out in combat against enemy planes but they fight the weather, towering mountains and cloud banks that build up to 20,000 feet to deliver their cargoes.

American troops now fighting the battle of Buna owe a great deal to these pilots, for they've delivered them ammunition for their guns and food for their stomachs.

Who are these pilots of "the bully beef express?"

They're men like Lieut. J. M. Rodgers of Birmingham, Ala., and Lieut. W. D. Wells of Ovid, N. Y., and not long ago a high school coach at Jeffersonville, Ohio.

There are also men like Master Sergeant Michael Kullich of Harrisburg, Pa., who helped keep the planes going despite the rough treatment the transports received.

The first time I really saw the transports in action I was sitting on a sandy beach barely a mile away from the Japanese positions on Cape Endaiadere, an enemy strong point.

Inland a short distance, near a landing strip, was a Japanese anti-aircraft gun.

Over the trees from the west came a big transport. It seemed to fly directly over ack-ack positions, continued on out to sea a short way and came back. It repeated the operation several times but it was too low for the ack-ack guns to go into action.

"The fool! Doesn't he know there is an ack-ack gun there?" One of the spectators asked. The pilot undoubtedly knew but he took a chance while he dropped his supplies to the troops below.

In another case a transport pilot set down on the field, unloaded his plane and took off. Two minutes later Zeros appeared and machine-gunned the area, but the transport got away.

Other transport pilots have landed on wet fields bordered by jungle, found the ground too soft and skidded into trees. But the planes were patched up and flown out.

They lose aircraft once in a while, just as in the other aer' l services. Within the last week a transport plane took off from a field on the north side of New Guinea, ran into a flight of Zeros and was shot down.

But 'The Bully Beef Express" continues to operate as one of the most daring, skillful and important transport lines in the world.

Eugene Slagle Saved By Faithful Collie

Somerset, Pa., Nov. 27 (AP) — Three-year-old Kenneth Eugene Slagle, Jr., wandered three miles from his home in the freezing cold of the Allegheny mountains yesterday—but his faithful collie dog saw to it that no harm befell him.

After state police and six volunteer fire companies searched for the boy six hours, he was found safe in a farm field.

Fireman Thomas Bowman said the dog had dug a hole in the ground in which its little master could lie, safe from the cold wind. There Bowman found the boy and dog, snuggled happily against each other.

Morbid Tragedies Studied At Sorosis Meeting

The Sorosis met yesterday with Mrs. Cora Drake and studied several plays illustrating the topic, "Tragedy Without Song." Mrs. Harry Perley read the paper for the day which covered the type of play presented during the period of 1920 to 1930. These plays were full of frustrations and morbid in character.

"Ice bound" by Owen Davis was the first story to be reviewed, a tale of rugged New England characters. The plot revolves around a son whose mother left her money to the girl she wanted him to marry. Sidney Howard's "They Knew What They Wanted" and Eugene O'Neill's "Desire Under the Elms" further illustrated the sordid stories of domestic and marital difficulties typical of the plays at that time. The discussion was brought to a close with "Strange Interlude" by Eugene O'Neill. It is probably the greatest tragedy that he wrote in his powerful and original manner. All of the plays depicted clearly the sort of drama which was making a strong impression through the Little Theatre Movement.

During the business session the club voted to cooperate with the federation in the Victory Book Campaign. Next week the club will meet at 2:30 p. m. at the home of Mrs. Harry Perley, 19 Mountain View avenue. Mrs. R. Gardner Burns will have the paper for the day.

Education and Peru Are Topics For 20th Century Club

Mrs. E. O. Allen was hostess to the 20th Century Club Monday afternoon, January 26. Continuing the study of South America papers for the day were on the country of Peru.

Mrs. George Kenny gave a general summary of education which is highly centralized in every country. There is a federal secretary in the cabinet. The educational system comprises the elementary schools of five to six years and a secondary school of five to six years making a total of 10 to 12 years of preparation before entering the university. Parallel with the schools of high education such as normal schools are schools for professional type of work.

The Lima Conference of 1938 was reviewed by Mrs. T. D. Edmonston. This conference fostered mutual understanding and cooperation among the republics and also improved economic conditions, cultural and juriditial bonds, and things tending toward future development of continental solidarity.

Mrs. J. C. Fraser in mentioning the geographical environment of Peru showed the contrast in area: Plains, plateaus, mountains, glaciers, jungles, desert and low land. One of the most interesting features of the highway construction for the country is the Peruvian Central which is one of the highest and the most remarkable roads in the world. It extends from Callao to Huancayo. The one point reaches an altitude of 15,655 feet, nearly three miles high. Mrs. G. N. Wood said that Peru is a country with every variety of climate, produces a wide range of products. Besides coffee, cocoanuts, mangoes, cotton and alpaca wool, Peru exports large quantities of tagua or "vegetable ivory" which is used in the manufacture of bottons. Peru is the leading country in the world for the export of bananas, sending 70,000,000 bunches to the United States each year.

The 20th Century Club will meet February 9 at the home of Mrs. Harry B. Walker, Broadway. The topic will be Bolivia.

Mr. and Mrs. Kniffin Feted

Some 70 friends from Marlborough, New Paltz and Gardiner visited the residence of County Welfare Commissioner, Albert D. Kniffin, at the county farm, Saturday night and gave Mr. Kniffin and his bride a notable welcome. Part of the program was a buggy ride for the bride and bridegroom. The celebrants had brought a buggy attached to a truck for motive power in the absence of a horse, and escorted the couple for a "drive" to New Paltz and return.

From Syracuse University, Lewis Boice, John L. Fallon, Clayton Brower are at their homes for mid-term vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Burhans of Spring Lake celebrated their 57th wedding anniversary at their home Sunday. They received bouquets of cut flowers, fruit and numerous cards. A dinner party in their honor was given by the immediate family. They were: Mr. and Mrs. Lewis G. Burhans of Park Boulevard, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Woolsey of Spring Lake, Mr. and Mrs. Harry D. Burhans of Flatbush and Mrs. Floyd Crantek of Hackensack, N. J.

Mrs. James C. Hungerford of 34 Fair street will entertain this evening at a foursome of bridge. Her guests will be Mrs. Arthur E. Oudemool, Miss Elizabeth Turner and Miss Caroline Little.

Miss Virginia Hoffman is the guest of Miss Billie Huber at Mamaroneck. Miss Hoffman and Miss Huber are classmates at Syracuse University. Miss Hoffman will return to her home, 143 Fair street, for the week-end.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry C. Tronson are today celebrating their 50th wedding anniversary at the home of their daughter, Mrs. Beulah Hagenlocker on Richmond Parkway. Relatives and friends will call this evening to extend their best wishes. Mr. and Mrs. Tronson were married January 27, 1892, by the Rev. H. W. Sherwood, who was pastor of the Wurts Street Baptist Church at that time.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Lyke of the Sawkill road are celebrating their 30th wedding anniversary today.

Miss Edith May Babcock of Janet street has passed civil service examinations for typing and left this morning for Washington, D. C., where she has accepted a position with the War Department.

William A. Sharkey, son of Mrs. George J. Sharkey of 50 Johnston avenue, is among the 215 Union College students, who received an average grade of "B" or better for the first semester and were honored by inclusion in the Dean's List.

Minstrel Is Successful

The Sherwood World-Wide Guild of the Wurts Street Baptist Church successfully repeated its minstrel at the Glenford Church hall. Despite the inclement weather, a large turnout witnessed the performance. Since the first presentation, the organization has received many invitations from other churches. George Parsells is the director of the play.

Kaffee Klatsch

The Sisterhood of Temple Emanuel will sponsor a Kaffee Klatsch tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock in the social hall of the Temple. A cake sale will be held in connection with the social afternoon.

Celebrate 50th Anniversary

MR. AND MRS. CHARLES HOWE

Today Mr. and Mrs. Charles Howe of Port Ewen are celebrating their 50th wedding anniversary. On Saturday evening their son, Raymond, gave a family dinner in their honor at Broglio's in West Park. The "bridal couple" entered the dining room to the strains of Mendelssohn's Wedding March, played by Miss Peggy Day. During the evening several vocal solos were sung, among them being "I Love You Truly," "Silver Threads Among the Gold" and "We've Come a Long Way Together." A feature of the dinner was a large wedding cake appropriately inscribed. Those who attended were the guests of honor, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Howe, Mrs. Warren Howe, Sr., Miss Dorothy Howe, Miss Ruth Howe, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Howe and Raymond Howe, Jr. It was with genuine regret that Mr. and Mrs. Warren Howe, Jr., were unable to attend.

Pearl Harbor Widows Have Their Own Motto

Long Beach, Calif., Jan. 27 (AP)—Sixty Pearl Harbor widows have applied for jobs in an airplane plant with the motto "Keep 'Em Flying to Avenge Our Husband's Deaths."

"We feel that we should do all we can to carry on the work and the cause for which our husbands so nobly gave their lives at Pearl Harbor," said Mrs. Fern Evans. Her husband, W. C. Evans, chemists' mate, third class, was reported lost in action.

"Aircraft work is one way of doing our part. We are determined to do our share in the war effort that must go on and on until our loved ones are avenged and the final victory is won."

Sixty widows and a gold star took aptitude tests yesterday for positions at Lockheed and Vega Aircraft Corps. Navy Chaplain J. E. Johnson said there are 160 Pearl Harbor widows here and he expects more to apply for jobs.

Paul M. Kenefick, in charge, said the tests "showed that these women as a group were far superior to those who have contacted us at our regular employment offices."

Parent-Teacher Ass'n

Flatbush Unit

Lawrence Cahil, head of the physical education department of the Saugerties schools, was the speaker at the January meeting of the Flatbush P.-T. A.

Mr. Cahill showed how important physical fitness is in the general development of the individual.

A social hour was enjoyed following the meeting, during which refreshments of cake and coffee were served by the 4-H Club girls.

Births Recorded

The following births have been reported to the Board of Health:

Mr. and Mrs. Francis J. Tomaseski of 51 West Union street, a son, Francis Joseph, in Kingston Hospitaol.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert P. Muller of New Paltz a daughter, Dorothea Marie, in Kingston Hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. George J. Kerbert of Saugerties, a daughter, Andrea Lucille, in Benedictine Hospital.

Tummy Tighteners

By BETTY CLARK
AP Feature Service Writer

Are you getting ready for the long hard pull—when you may have to pull your stomach in by yourself, without the aid of a girdle? Marjorie Craig demonstrates a tummy tightener she teaches successfully in a New York beauty school. She sits against a wall with arms at her sides, climbs the wall one foot at a time until she sits on the back of her neck (actually!). Coming down (one vertebra at a time), she rests on her waist whi' she exhales and lifts her rib cage toward her ears before she breathes again. You get the same results on your hands and knees if you hump your back like a cat, exhale and lift your rib cage.

PUBLIC WARNED AGAINST SPREADING WILD RUMORS

My own needlessly distressing experience of late, because of a mistaken rumor repeated to me as a fact, has moved me to print a perhaps unnecessary wartime word of caution against too easily giving credence to unfounded and disconcerting rumors.

The very well-balanced, widely-informed, expertly-capable are alone given the privilege of writing the editorials in all newspapers of high standing. No editor ever announces unconfirmed reports as facts. Moreover, the writers of the news columns in these same papers report plainly where each bulletin comes from.

When we read "It is rumored" or "an unconfirmed report says," we must train ourselves to realize that such news belongs in our "hoped-for" list, or our "hope it's not true" list. But let us train ourselves now to read the news with some attention as to whether a qualifying doubt heads the dispatch before we risk adding to the jitters of everyone by rushing into our neighbors' houses to babble a rumor as a fact.

Tuxedos Permissible at Evening Wedding

Dear Mrs. Post: I am being married at eight in the evening. We are using the main church, but there will be only about a hundred guests. The men in the wedding—four ushers and the best man besides the bridegroom—want to wear their tuxedos because otherwise they would be putting two of the men to great expense in providing themselves with tail coats.

I thought this would be permissible at a simple wedding like ours is to be, but a friend now tells me that tuxedos are not properly worn at an evening wedding except in communities where tuxedos are the only evening suits worn on any occasion. Will you clarify this point?

Answer: Although the point your friend makes is true, I see no reason why there should be any greater objection to the informal evening clothes of the men of the bridal party at a very simple wedding in the evening than is now considered permissible at a daytime wedding. At the present time when uniforms are introduced into so many wedding pictures, the usually rigid exaction that the men of the bridal party must be dressed alike, is necessarily laid aside. And yet since the rule still holds for men in civilian dress, it would look better—much—to have all of them wear tuxedos, rather than have some in formal tails and some in informal tuxedos. The mixture of uniforms is quite all right because the reason why is obvious.

WOODSTOCK

Woodstock, Jan. 27—The name of the Epworth League of the Methodist Church will be changed to the Young People's Methodist Church Fellowship. Meetings will be held Sunday evenings at the Shady Methodist Church, beginning at 6:30 o'clock. This hour is selected so as not to interfere with the regular Sunday service in that church which begins at 7:30 o'clock. Three young people spoke on Sunday evening, the subject being, "What the Fellowship Will Mean to Me." The speakers were: Donald Reynolds, Catherine Sonenburg and Velma Cashdollar.

Mrs. Shaffer Vredenbergh suffered painful, but not serious injuries when she fell on the sidewalk in Kingston on Friday.

The Ponckhockie dart ball team defeated the Woodstock Reformed Church team at Woodstock on Friday evening, taking all three games.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Myers of Tannersville visited Mr. and Mrs. Ray Wagner Sunday.

The Ulster County Christian Endeavor Society will hold its annual rally and banquet at Stone Ridge Thursday evening. Members of the Woodstock Christian Endeavor Society will attend.

The Methodist Church Men's Club of Woodstock will play the Congregational Church at Kingston on the evening of Monday, January 26.

A special missionary service was held at the Methodist Church on Sunday morning. Special leaflets relative to the service were printed, and the sermon preached by the Rev. Mr. Haws was along missionary lines. The contribution was given to missions.

Agudas Achim Women's Group

The regular monthly meeting of the Agudas Achim Women's Group will be held Wednesday evening, January 28, at 8 o'clock. All members are urged to attend as the final plans for the Red Cross card party to be held February 4 will be made.

New Defense Jobs Opening Each Day

If you can't be in the army or navy, why not try for a defense job? After brief—and free—training you can help fight our battle with rivets and dies.

Workers are needed in every section. That goes for women, too! With production speeding up and men joining the services, women have a chance for every sort of defense job. There are women inspectors, parachute makers, lens grinders, labratory aides, flying instructors.

You can get training for many needed skills in free government courses, lasting 4 to 12 weeks. Many defense plants and arsenals are training workers right on the job.

Also, for aviation jobs you can get government training, under the Civilian Aeronautics Authority.

Meanwhile, older men, long away from their trades, are brushing up their skill in government "refresher courses." Some are even starting from scratch.

Our 32-page booklet tells what agencies are giving these and other defense courses, lists typical defense jobs, sections where they can be found and addresses where you can register for work.

Send 10c (plus one cent to cover cost of mailing) for your copy of "Getting a Defense Job" to The Kingston Daily Freeman, Home Service, 635 Sixth avenue., New York, N. Y. Be sure to write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

Mice Aid Snake Escape

Mice helped a venomous Cape cobra to escape in the Snake Park at Capetown, South Africa, and it was at large four months. It was one of 24 destined for the Bronx Zoo in New York, and escaped from its pen through a hole nibbled by mice in one corner of the floor. Beneath was the special heating apparatus on cement. The vicinity was raked, but the snake was not found. One day Director Christian saw it back on the pen floor. It had just awakened from its winter sleep.

Aged Man Is Found Dead of Heart Attack

Edward Osterhoudt, 75, was found dead in bed in his room in the home of Mrs. Frank Banks, 108 North Front street, at 11 o'clock Thursday night. Dr. C. B. Van Gaasbeck, who was called by the police stated that death was due to a heart attack.

Coroner Frank J. McCardle of Rosendale issued a death certificate to that effect.

It was at 11 o'clock last night that the police department received a call to the North Front street house, and Officers Fallon and Harnen responded in one of the radio cars. According to the police report the aged man had been ill during the day.

He retired to his room that night after asking Mrs. Banks to set his alarm clock for 8:30 o'clock this morning. When she entered the bedroom to wind the clock she found him dead in bed.

Mr. Osterhoudt's daughter, Mrs. May Murray of 200 Columbia avenue, Jersey City, N. J., was notified of her father's sudden death.

TB Hospital Auxiliary Asks Yuletide Funds

The Ladies' Auxiliary of the Ulster County Tuberculosis Hospital endeavors each year to bring cheer to the hospital patients at Christmas. In order to continue this work, the auxiliary is making an appeal to the general public for funds.

Although the patients at the hospital are not in the front line of the war, each is fighting an individual battle and the auxiliary desires to help them wage it to a successful finish. Contributions may be sent to Mrs. Frederic W. Holcomb, 188 Fair street.

Guilty of Operating Still at Plattekill

New York, Nov. 27 (Special)—Pleas of guilty were made before Judge Henry W. Goddard in Federal Court here Wednesday by two Brooklyn men, Vincent Curtolo and Antonio Mule, to an indictment charging them with carrying on illicit liquor distilling operations at the Old Schoonmaker Homestead, Plattekill, in 1940.

Curtolo was continued on bail for sentence December 9 and Mule was remanded, pending sentence on December 3.

The indictment charges that through their operations, with six other men, 22,950 gallons of liquor was produced at the still. The tax loss to the government was $18,360.

Memorial Mass Is Held For Society's Deceased

St. Mary's Church was crowded Thursday morning at 10 o'clock when a solemn high Mass was sung under the auspices of the Ulster County Holy Name Union. The Mass was celebrated as a memorial for Holy Name men who died during the year. A special intention was for the men and women now serving in our armed forces, and for a speedy victory followed by a just and lasting peace.

Previous to the Mass the congregation joined in the singing of the National Anthem. The Very Rev. Monsignor Martin J. Drury, V.F., P.R., pastor of St. Mary's Church, presided. The officers of the Mass were the Rev. B. C. Roth, assistant pastor of St. Mary's, celebrant; the Rev. John Gorman, of Holy Name Church, Wilbur, deacon; the Rev. Edwin Egan, of St. Francis de Sales Church, Phoenicia, subdeacon; and the Rev. John J. Drew, assistant at St. Mary's, acting as master of ceremonies. A number of priests from the various county parishes also occupied seats in the sanctuary among them being the Rev. John B. Conroy of Quarryville, the Rev. John D. Simmons of St. Joseph's Church, the Rev. Austin V. Carey of the Benedictine Hospital, the Rev. Father Geis of Ellenville, Father Vogel of Saugerties and Father Rivoli of Glasco. During the Mass Father Conroy led the men in a recitation of the Holy Name pledge to God and country.

Monsignor Drury delivered a short but eloquent sermon taking for his text the words, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and His justice, and all other things shall be added thereunto." After welcoming and congratulating the men from the various parts of the county the preacher explained in a forceful manner the fundamental reason for the world chaos and the things necessary for a lasting peace following our victory, namely—seeking of God and His justice.

At the close of the Mass the officers and delegates of the Ulster County Union held a short meeting in St. Mary's Hall. It was decided that the officers now guiding the society should continue in office for the duration of the war. Also that due to the conserving of gas and rubber and difficulties of transportation there would be no further county meetings held during the winter. A meeting to be held in April was left to the discretion of the officers to be called by them as circumstances warrant. County President William F. Leehive presided and spoke briefly upon current problems.

Two Persons Die In Gun Battle

Riot Starts When Negro M.P. Tries to Arrest Man; at Least 12 Wounded

Phoenix, Ariz., Nov. 27 (AP)—Two persons were killed and at least 12 wounded early today in a three-hour gun battle between negro soldiers and military and civilian police.

Police Chief Don Steward said that he had a man "shot out from either side of me" during the melee.

The riot, which Steward said started when a negro military policeman attempted to arrest a recalcitrant, brought more than 100 military and civilian police officers to the scene and 28 blocks were placed under army control. Steward emphasized that it was entirely a negro affair.

The dead:

Robert Riley, 44, negro, Phoenix, found shot to death in his car.

An unidentified negro soldier, whose body was found sprawled in the street soon after the shooting started.

Among the men injured when white military and civil police called:

Lt. August J. Essman, 39, former Sheridan, Ore., football coach, shot in the abdomen.

The most seriously hurt, in addition to Essman, are a negro sergeant and private, the addresses of whom are unknown. A white Phoenix police officer was hospitalized.

Available executive officers at the encampment where the negro soldiers were stationed had no comment. Newsmen were referred to Col. Fred Ellis, regimental commander, who was called when the trouble started.

An armored military car patroled the scene immediately after the shooting stopped, the police department reported.

Assisting military authorities, in addition to Steward, were Sheriff Lon Jordan and Horace Moore, state highway patrol superintendent.

The trouble, the police department reported, started when a military policeman shot a negro soldier. Officers said companions of the wounded soldier returned with Garand rifles and other army equipment.

Among the casualties was a reporter from the Arizona Republic who reported one of his shoes was shot off.

PENNEY'S

Will You Say, On December 26th, "I Wish I HAD . . . ."?

Will you wish you had remembered in time to send a present to the neighbor's boy in service?

Will you wish you had sent a little remembrance to that old couple that everyone else has forgotten?

Will you wish you'd bought someone a less-lavish present, and spent the money for more things, for more people?

There's still time to plan a GOOD Christmas, a cheerful, warm Christmas, for a lot of people, while continuing your regular War Bond buying.

That's the kind of Christmas we've planned here at Penney's.

Come in and let's tell you about it!

TORPEDOED TANKER SURVIVORS ARRIVE IN NORFOLK

Members of the crew of the tanker Venore, who were saved after their ship was torpedoed and sunk off the Carolina coast, are grouped together after their arrival at the Norfolk, Va., naval base. An Axis submarine posing as a lightship lured the 8,016-ton Venore to close range with the blinker signal and then sanw the vessel by torpedo and shellfire with the possible loss of 22 lives.

SEVENTH SHIP SUNK OFF ATLANTIC COAST

The Navy Department announced the 8,000-ton tanker Venore, formerly the Charles G. Black, (above) was torpedoed and sunk off the Atlantic coast. It was the seventh vessel sunk and the eighth attacked by submarines off the seaboard in the past two weeks.

Sentence Suspended on Illicit Still Charges

New York, Jan. 26 (Special)—Six men charged with violating the liquor distilling laws at Port Ewen were sentenced in United States District Court here today before Judge Simon H. Rifkind. They received suspended sentences of a year and a day and probation of one year each. Fines of $200 each were imposed by the court.

The defendants were John Sangi, Joseph Sangi, Michael Greco, August Greco, Michael Greco, Jr., and Tony Konopski. They had pleaded guilty on January 14 to an indictment returned last July, charging them with the possession of an unregistered 1,000-gallon still on the farm of George A. Kirton, Port Ewen, on June 28, 1938, and with possession of 15,500 gallons of mash intended for distillation.

The court required a down payment of $50 on the fine and gave them additional time in which to pay the remainder.

Dr. Ingraham to Speak

The Kiwanis meeting, Thursday, promises to be not only interesting, but especially appropriate at this time, as Dr. Hollis S. Ingraham, the District State Health Officer, is to be the guest speaker. No doubt every member will take advantage of this meeting and be present not only personally but with their guests.

Wiring Catches Fire

Shortly after midnight this morning the fire department responded to a still alarm of fire in the apartment house at 62 Hunter street, owned by Nathan Greenfield of New York. The fire was caused by a short circuit in the electric wiring. The damage was slight.

At a Special Term of the County Court of Ulster County, held at the Court House in the City of Kingston, Ulster County, New York, on the 24th day of January, 1942.

PRESENT: HONORABLE J. EDWARD CONWAY, County Judge.

In the Matter of the Application of ANNA E. THOMPSON, as mother and natural guardian of John Joseph Alecca, Infant, and of JOHN JOSEPH ALECCA, said infant, for leave to change his name to JOHN JOSEPH THOMPSON.

On reading and filing the petition of ANNA E. THOMPSON and JOHN JOSEPH ALECCA, verified the 23rd day of January, 1942, praying for a change of the name of John Joseph Alecca, it being requested that he be permitted to assume the name of JOHN JOSEPH THOMPSON, in place and stead of his present name; and it appearing to the satisfaction of the Court that Joseph Alecca, the father of said infant, resides without the State of New York, and in the State of Connecticut, and the Court having dispensed with the service of notice upon said Joseph Alecca; and the Court being satisfied that said petition is true and it appearing from the petition and the Court being satisfied that there is no reasonable objection to the change of the name proposed and it appearing that the interests of said infant will be substantially promoted by the change;

Now, on motion of Charles W. Walton, attorney for said petitioners, it is ORDERED, that the said John Joseph Alecca be and he hereby is authorized to assume the name of John Joseph Thompson in place and stead of his present name, on the 9th day of March, 1942, upon his complying with the provisions of Article 6 of the Civil Rights Law, namely: that the petitioners cause this order and the papers upon which it was granted to be filed in the office of the clerk of the County of Ulster, within 10 days from the date hereof, and that, within 10 days from the date of the entry of the said order, the petitioner cause a copy thereof to be published in the Kingston Daily Freeman, and within 40 days after the making of this order, proof of such publication by affidavit be filed and recorded in the office of the clerk of the County of Ulster, and after such requirements are complied with the said petitioner, John Joseph Alecca, shall on and after the 9th day of March, 1942, be known as and by the name of John Joseph Thompson, which he is hereby authorized to assume, and by no other name.

Enter,

J. EDWARD CONWAY
County Judge of Ulster County.

Drivers Granted One Day of Grace For Buying Stamps

Because February 1 comes on a Sunday automobile drivers have been granted another day of grace for buying the new $2.09 use-tax stamp, which must be displayed on all cars beginning next week. The law was to become effective on February 1 but since Sunday is the first of the month the Internal Revenue department has granted a day of grace.

The revenue department will be supplied with a list of all persons securing 1942 licenses and anyone who has a 1942 license and fails to send in the return card when they buy their use-tax stamp will probably hear from the revenue department. If you fail to secure a revenue stamp for your car as required by law you may be fined $25 or sentenced to 30 days in jail or both.

Stamps costing $2.09 and good until July 1 may be purchased at any post office and must be affixed to the car in a prominent place. Should someone steal your stamp provisions is being made to have the injured person appear before a revenue man, fill out an affidavit of loss and a duplicate credential will be supplied.

Stet is the name of a Missouri town.

(By The Associated Press)

America plunged back into the job of making hash of the Axis today after beating its lustiest drumstrk tattoo on Thanksgiving.

Except for a brief interlude of religious observance and a heavier-than-usual dinner fare, yesterday was like many another for most Americans who kept the factories humming.

But the spirit of Thanksgiving wandered farther from its native land than ever before, spreading overseas to America's fighting men in far corners of the earth.

In England where London newspapers explained the significance of the holiday, thousands of British homes were opened to American soldiers. Roast pork instead of the traditional turkey was the main dish at overseas bases.

Special servies were held for Americans in Westminster Abbey. Many Catholics observed Thanksgiving at Westminster Cathedral and the Jews at Vest End Synagogue.

President Roosevelt's proclamation giving thanks for "the greatest harvest in the hisory of our nation," was read in London by Ambassador Winant who added an expression of gratitude for recent victories.

There, the sick and wounded of both Britain and America received a touch of Thanksgiving—supplies of turkey donated to the hospitals by the United States army.

In Australia, too, the messtables of our troops held plenty of turkey and the menus bore a message written by a chaplain, Capt. Gerald Scanlon of Boise, Idaho, offering thanks to "the Supreme Being and Father of all."

"We are grateful," it read, "for the rich heritage that is ours and the assurance that the spirit and motives which inspired the Pilgrim fathers are to be found in the fighting men of the United States forces wherever they may be."

On the home front, many war plant bulletin boards bore a greeting from Lieut. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, commander in chief of the expeditionary forces in North Africa.

"On this Thanksgiving Day," Eisenhower messaged, "let us thank God for the American industry—labor and management—which has given us the weapons and the equipment with which to conduct our North African campaign. More power to you."

The President, high officials of the government and of the army and navy, participated in prayer and song service in the White House. After the nationally broadcast services, Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt and a few guests sat down to a dinner of roast turkey.

Then the President and his staff went back to work on a full schedule of wartime activity.

America saw its first Thanksgiving Day of the war bring what probably was a new low in the number of fatal accidents for the holiday as uninterrupted production, gasoline rationing and the absence of many now in the armed services joined to reduce sharply the flow of traffic.

In contrast to past Thanksgiving celebrations, reports of death by violent means trickled in. Early today 80 persons had been reported killed, 30 in traffic, eight by trans and 42 in shootings, coal mine mishaps, fires and by drowning.

Sudden death came to 190 last Thanksgiving Day.

SIDNEY KROM

EDWARD KROM

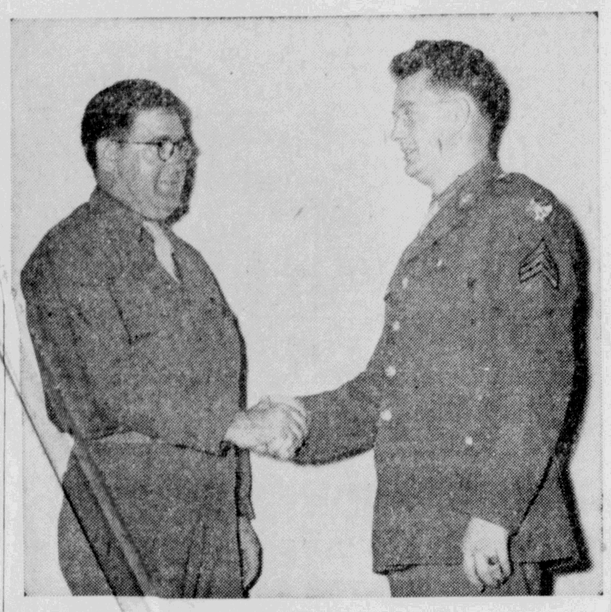

OLIVER KROM

Three sons of Peter Krom of Stony Hollow are in the service. They are Sidney Charles Krom, somewhere in England; Edward Roger Krom at Camp Breckenridge, Ky.; Oliver Albert Krom, somewhere in foreign service.

Two local boys enlisted November 16, at Fort Dix, N. J. They are, left to right, Pvt. Octave Perry, son of Mrs. Anna Perry of 129 Chambers street; and Pvt. Robert Mayr, son of Mrs. Elizabeth Mayr of 55 Newkirk avenue.

Lake Charles, La., Nov. 24.—The handclasp above was in order when Sergeant Herbert V. Darrow of Kingston, New York, learned that Private Louis A. Dibuono was a fellow Kiwanian from Hammond, La. Both men are stationed here at the Lake Charles Army Flying School and when Sergeant Darrow met Private Dibuono he proceeded, as a good Kiwanian, to give him some pointers on how to succeed in Army life. Sgt. Darrow is a graduate of Kingston High School and before his entry into the service he was with the Kingston Savings and Loan Association. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert V. Darrow of 42 Josephine avenue, Kingston. The sergeant was a member of the finance committee of the Kingston Kiwanis Club.

LIEUT. C. VAN VALKENBURGH

Clifford Van Valkenburgh, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Van Valkenburgh of 126 Downs street, has been promoted to first lieutenant. He had been acting as battery commander before his promotion. Lieutenant Van Valkenburgh was graduated from Officer's Candidate School in August and is now stationed at Fort Bragg, N. C.

midwestern mayors, civic officials, and representatives of oil companies.

"There has been so much complaint, both from the mid-west people and mid-west congressmen against extension of gasoline rationing December 1 that the committee thought it best to hear both sides of the rationing issue," Chairman Truman (D.-Mo.) told reporters.

The President's order, announced last night, emphasized that the need for extending what Mr. Roosevelt preferred to call "mileage rationing" as a rubber conservation measure was becoming more acute daily.

"We must do everything within our power to see that the program starts December 1 because victory must not be delayed through failure to support our fighting forces," the President said in identical letters to Jeffers and Henderson.

The effect of the President's order was to reject pleas, mostly from members of Congress from oil-producing states, that nationwide rationing was unnecessary. These members last week formed an unofficial 15-man committee which recommended a 90-day delay.

Their clamor led to resumption of hearings by a special sub-committee of the House interstate commerce committee studying the overall gasoline and rubber situation. Both Jeffers and Henderson, testifying at the hearings, declared nationwide rationing was necessary as a rubber conservation measure.

They repeated this contention in radio broadcasts last night in which they were joined by Undersecretary of War Robert Patterson and Rear Admiral Claude A. Jones, assistant chief of procurement and materials.

Stray Horse Found

Thursday afternoon Officers Burger and McDonough in one of the police radio cars rounded up a stray horse on Pine street. The animal was placed in the Palen livery where he was later claimed by the owner, Mrs. Paul Perlman.

WOODSTOCK

Woodstock, Nov. 27—Miss Hope Herrick and Miss Theodora de Ruyter left for New York on Wednesday morning to spend the Thanksgiving holiday. Miss Herrick will visit the Herbert Southards and Miss de Ruyter will spend the holiday with her mother, Mrs. Theodore de Ruyter.

The missionary division of the W.S.C.S., will hold its Thanksgiving meeting at the Methodist church on Monday evening, November 30 at 7:30. The Rev. Eugene Duryee will be the speaker. Mr. Duryee was at one time a missionary in Japan. The general public is invited to attend the meeting.

Mrs. Marcena Fredenberg spent the Thanksgiving holiday at Home Place. She entertained Mrs. Burger and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Toms.

A union Thanksgiving service was held in the Methodist Church on Wednesday evening at 7:30. All denominations in the community were invited to join in the service. The Rev. Mr. Todd was the guest speaker. Special services were also held in St. Dunstans on Thanksgiving day.

Two Arrests Are Made

Leonard Ferguson, 61, a negro of 15 Broadway, was given a suspended sentence when arraigned today before Judge Matthew V. Cahill in police court on a charge of public intoxication. He was arrested Wednesday afternoon at the Kingston Hospital where he was being treated for a cut over the left eye. According to the police he suffered the cut in a fall on the sidewalk. Harry Hutton, 48, of 4 West Union street, charged with public intoxication, was sentenced to two days in the county jail. As he had already served that time he was permitted to return home.

Resort Publicity For Ulster County Helps Business

quiries as to place to spend a vacation.

In all there were 381 direct inquiries made to the committee for information regarding boarding places; 152 telephone calls were received for information and three people asking about purchasing property in the county were referred to the Real Estate Board as a result of the publicity. Continuing, the report stated that the members of the committee desired to thank all who assisted in the work of making the season so successful. Merchants wrote the committee, reporting an increased business from boarding houses and it was estimated that at least 750 to 1,000 new people were brought to the county.

In conclusion, the committee recommended that for 1943, the appropriation be increased to $2-500 in order that a year around program of publicity might be carried out. The committee's report was received and filed and referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

The Committee on Highway Accounts reported claims of $49.76 and recommended they be paid. The second report of the Committee on Printing reported bills amounting to $13.04 to be in proper form and recommended they be paid.

It was moved that $50,000 be transferred from the balance in the Highway Fund, to the Snow Removal Fund for clearing the highways of snow this winter. This was referred to Committee on Appropriations.

Clerk Simpson asked that all returned school tax amounts be in and that unpaid water district taxes be in by December 1.

The board adopted the grand jury list and the board then recessed until Friday evening at 7:30 o'clock.

Oscar Olsen spent Monday in New York.

Charles Haupt and son, Charles, Jr. spent the week-end at their home here. Charles, Jr. has enlisted in the army, and is now at Jamaica, L. I., waiting to be called.

It has been announced that The Vly Church will close for the winter. The last service was held on November 22.

The Ladies' Aid meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Agnes Kerl on Thursday afternoon, December 3.

Mrs. Oscar Olsen, Mrs. George Wurster, Mrs. Roy Boynton, Mrs. Moses Van Demark, and Mrs. Emma Palen were guests of Mrs. James Palen recently.

Mr. and Mrs. James Palen held a party recently for the Red Cross, and $8.30 was donated.

Ahavath Israel Engages Rabbi Harold Englander

Congregation Ahavath Israel is pleased to announce that it has engaged Rabbi Harold Englander as its spiritual leader. As a result of his guidance during the recent holiday season the congregation looks forward to a long period of mutual cooperation and progress.

This Friday evening, November 27 at 8 p. m., will mark the beginning of the series of late services followed by community singing and refreshments. The topic of the sermon will be, "Are We Worthy of Giving Thanks." Everyone is welcome to participate in this celebration of the Sabbath.

Sunday morning at 9:30 a. m. registration for the Ahvath Israel School will commence and classes assigned. The parents as well as the children are urged to appear promptly. Classes will begin this Sunday immediately after registration is completed.

Reports for Service

Letter Carrier James J. Dugan of Brewster street, who has served with the local post office department for a number of years, left today to report for duty as an electrician's mate in the U. S. Navy. He enlisted some time ago, and had received orders to report in New York city on Saturday.

Hits 717 Triple

FREDDIE RICE

Veteran Freddie Rice reached into the highlights of the 1941-42 bowling campaign Sunday night at the Central Recreation alleys and pounded out a sensational 717 triple for the Kendalls in the Hudson Valley League. Rice picked up plenty of pinnage with scores of 248, 245 and 224 to complete his sizzling triple. It was Rice's fifth 700 or beter in his enviable career as one of the top-notch bowlers of this section. Last night in the City League Rice came through with a 634 triple with scores of 193, 226 and 215.

Something to See

New York, Jan. 27 (AP)—Says Charles Halbert, 6 foot 10 inch center of West Texas State's tallest basketball team in the world: "We came here to play Long Island University and to see the sights but everytime we step out of the hotel everybody stops and stares at us."

Benefit at Hialeah

Miami, Fla., Jan. 27 (AP)—Owners of 14 of the nation's finest thoroughbreds have been invited to enter them in a war benefit day program at Hialeah Park Friday.

All track income that day will be divided equally among the Red Cross, Army Relief Society, Navy Relief Society and the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis.

Famous race horses invited are Alsab, Requested, War Relic, Market Wise, Challedon, Pictor, Mioland, Porter's Cap, Meissen, Attention, Our Boots, Bless Me, Devil Diver and Amphitheatre.

Boxing Show Postponed

Los Angeles, Jan. 27 (AP)—A naval Relief boxing show scheduled for tonight has been postponed to February 3 because of Richie Lemos' slow recovery from influenza.

Lemos and Chalky Wright, both Los Angeles lightweights, were billed in the show's feature bout.

It is estimated that more than 50,000,000 radio sets are in use in the United States.

Larry French Will Stick in Baseball To Win 200 Games

Los Angeles, Jan. 27 (AP)—Larry French, at 34, is one of the most prosperous major league ball players. But Larry is ambitious to win 200 games in the big time, so he's going back for two or three seasons.

The good looking southpaw needs 18 victories to reach 200. He figures he can pick up 14 of them next season. He'll have to reverse his 1941 record to do that, but he's confident.

"My arm wasn't any too good last season," explained Larry. "But I've been taking regular treatments this winter and it feels fine now. I think I'm good for about 14 wins with the Dodgers this year. Inasmuch as I'm only 34 I ought to be able to pitch two or three more seasons."

French did very little last season toward hitting that 200 mark. He won only five games while losing 14. But then, he was with the Chicago Cubs until late August and they didn't give him or any of their other flingers much help.

Larry doesn't need to go back to the sun-baked mounds to insure his wife and 10 year old Larry Jr., three squares a day. He owns several apartment houses, has a thriving used car business, dabbles in real estate and is reported to have salted down several of the lettuce leaves he picked up as salary in 13 years in the big time.

French, always a willing worker, twice pitched in more games than any other National Leaguer—47 in 1932 and 49 in 1934, all for the Pirates. He's gone to the slab 40 games or more in each of nine seasons.

Looking ahead, Larry hopes that if the Dodgers are in the '42 World Series, he'll get in long enough that the customers know it. He was in two games last October, but so briefly that "if you turned your head, you missed me entirely."

SKI SCHOOL: 2

By ALF ENGEN
SunValley Ace and National 4-Way Champ

CLIMBING—

Having learned how to walk on skis, the next procedure is climbing and the easiest method is sidestepping. Standing at right angles to the slope, lift the upper ski and place it a step above the lower one. At the same time, tilt the right knee slightly in towards the slope in order to grip the snow with the edge of the ski. Then the other ski is brought up parallel with the upper one and the process continues.

It also is possible to combine sidestepping with traversing. In this, you walk ahead and upward simultaneously.

Each time, the upper ski is placed uphill and set down firmly ahead of the lower ski which then is brought parallel. A diagonal or echelon pattern results from this method.

The herringbone method is sometimes enough for short, direct ascents. It derives its name from the pattern formed in the snow. A "V" is formed with the skis, the tops on the wide end. Then, pressing forward with the knees, step upward with the left ski. The right ski should be kept well anchored on its inside edge with the left pole as another support. Anchor the left ski in similar fashion and step over it with the right.

Alf Engen demonstrates the herringbone climb

Win Over Kingston Gives Spa Quintet First Place Berth

Recreations Will Play in Pittsfield on Thursday; Expect Close Race to Finish

As a result of the week-end skirmishes in the New York State Pro Basketball League, the Albany Senators have finally relinquished their hold on first place to the Saratoga Indians by a margin of five points.

When the Spa aggregation whipped the Kingston Recreations Sunday night by 44 to 35 it meant the first place berth for the Indians. The plight of the Senators is far from serious, however. The club has lost two less games than Saratoga and that means something.

Meanwhile, the Recs find themselves in a do-or-die situation with the first half rapidly coming to a grand finale. Kingston is still within striking distance of the play-off berth it has been seeking.

Although the Recreations are lodged in fifth place with seven victories and eight losses, the club needs only one or two wins to vault them into second or third place. Thursday night the Recs will travel over to Pittsfield to meet the Golden Bears. The home game for the Recs this week has been called off due to the horticultural show in the auditorium.

This game might go a long way in deciding one of the two play-off positions. A victory over the Bears would give the Recs third place, the position currently held by the Troy Pros. This is the only game scheduled for the Recreations this week.

The complete schedule for the league teams this week includes Albany at Troy Wednesday, Kingston at Pittsfield Thursday, Pittsfield at Glens Falls Saturday and Albany at Saratoga Sunday night.

All of these games will have an important bearing on the standings in the loop. The only club without much hope in view is Glens Falls. The Fallsmen are in last place with seven wins and 11 losses which just about eliminates them from any further consideration in this half.

The Recs will return to the municipal auditorium Wednesday night, February 4, against the Troy Pros in another important clash. Judging from the present standings of all the clubs it looks like a race to the finish for every club.

Ben Hogan Captures Coast Golf With Nine Under Par

Former Texas Caddy Hits 279 to Win 1st Money; Snead and Little Follow in Order

San Francisco, Jan. 27 (AP)—Benny Hogan, the best golfer in the country for money, marbles or chalk the last two years, is well on his way to making it three terms in a row.

In the 1942 golfing gold rush, Benny the Par-Buster already has staked out two claims and made them pay. His latest feat was a mud-splattered victory in the San Francisco Open. He won $1,000 first money with a nine-under-par 279.

For 72 holes Hogan battled a soggy, slippery course to lead the way from start to finish. Less than three weeks before he won in the Los Angeles Open, worth $3,500 plus an extra $1,000 from the play-off gate receipts with Jimmy Thompson.

In between the wins, he picked up extra change in a two-day tie for second place in the Oakland tournament. His total winnings for the first three P.G.A.-sanctioned tourneys is $4,775.

The Hogan method has paid dividends by walloping par to a frazzle. He let fly with a telling lead-off 32-33—65 in the first round of the San Francisco Open. It was seven under standard figures for the 36-36—72 California Club course. The rest of the clan couldn't catch him from then on.

After the first round, the event was suspended for two days due to practically unplayable conditions.

Returning to action, he fired a 71, and in yesterday's last two rounds posted 72 and 71 respectively.

He finished in darkness and despite a bogey five on the last hole, carded an under par round to earn the plaudits of a scant crowd circling the green.

Hogan, former Fort Worth, Tex., caddy, is the candy kid of Hershey, Pa., now and as usual, the one to beat in every tournament. He undoubtedly will be the favorite to knock over the 36-hole event at the Rancho Santa Fe, last on the California leg of the winter circuit, this week-end.

Three strokes behind Hogan, charging like the light horse brigade, came Sam Snead. The Hot Springs, Va., ball belter brought in two dazzling rounds of 69-68 to take second money of $750 with a total 282.

Lawson Little finished third with 284. He nosed out Dick Metz, in at 285, and the latter shaded three men at 286—Al Zimmerman of Portland, Ore., and two Californians, Lloyd Mangrum and Harry Dazzler.

Byron Nelson, winner of the Oakland Open last week and twice a national champion, was next with 287. He deserved much credit, starting as the favorite in the San Francisco renewal. On his first round he staggered in with a 76. He finished with a 67, the second best round of the tournament.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

(Wide World Sports Columnist)

New York, Jan. 27—(Wide World)—Laugh of the week: There's nothing wrong with racing that words won't cure, according to Herbert B. Swope's report to his fellow racing commissioners at the Miami meeting...."The word 'handle' carries with it a very unfortunate connotation," Swope explained. "There is a low commercial sound in which the implication is very definitely 'handling for your own benefit.'"....well?.... When Bill Terry turned over the Giants' reins to Mel Ott he didn't volunteer any special advice but said "It's your club. If you want to know anything or want me at the training camp I'm available any time."....P. S.: Terry will be in camp for at least the first few weeks....Football isn't the only cause of NYU's athletic troubles. At a recent basketball game only 400 student seats were filled instead of the usual 2,000.

Figuring Out Figures

After you've piled up enough comparative scores to prove that Abb Normal could beat Minnesota's football team 99-0, try this one: On January 14, Loyola of Baltimore beat Western Maryland in an overtime basketball game, 39-38. Within the next week each one beat Catholic U. by the same score, 50 to 33, and the half time score in each game was 26-20.

Odds and Some Ends

Johnny Risko, the old rubber man, tried to join Gene Tunney's corps of navy athletic directors but found he wasn't eligible.... probably neglected to have himself retreaded....That ordinary-sized guy who looks lost among the West Texas basketballers is Jerry Malin, sports Ed. of the Amarillo News....You can count Dick Bartell out as a possible manager at Jersey City. He's wanted on the Giants because he can play either shortstop or third and is in no danger of being drafted....Eddie Mead, who is taking over fight promoting at Washington's Uline Stadium, already has persuaded Ray Robinson and Lem Franklin to show their wares there....Headline in West Coast paper: "Army to Call Vandal Guard"—sounds like the best way to prevent sabotage.

Today's Guest Star

Si Burick, Dayton (O.) News: "In his anticipation of that salary reduction—whether it's cut or slashed—Lombardi has proved that he can see farther than the end of his own nose....and that's seeing a long way, chums; a long, long way."

Sportpourri

The next "fastest human" may be Jim O'Reilly, Southern California sophomore. Coach Dean Cromwell says he's "as good as any sprint prospect I ever had and may be the best of them all."....Report says that Bill Dudley already has come to terms to play for the Pittsburgh Steelers next fall but the signing won't be announced until after graduation...Move is under way to restore basketball in Boston high schools, which dropped the sport 30 years ago when games used to bust up in fights....Don Durdan (remember him, Duke?) has joined up with the Oregon State basketball squad after missing one season. It was as a basketballer that he first went to college....When Serge Rachmaninoff gave a concert in Columbia, S. C., recently, he stayed up two hours past bedtime to talk shop with Ken Roskie, South Carolina fullback who hopes to become a concert pianist.

One Error, No Hit.

When Coach Jess Neely of Rice was asked to show movies of the Rice-Texas football game at a luncheon, he did. But they were the films taken at the 1940 game, which Rice won 13-0, not last season's 40-0 Texas triumph. "It was all a terrible mistake," Jess explained to an unbelieving audience.

D. S. T. to Help

Wichita, Kas., Jan. 27 (AP)—Daylight Saving Time will keep the blackout away from semi-pro games this summer.

Ninety per cent of the games in semi-pro leagues are played at twi-light and it's usually a race with nightfall to get in the required innings.

Ray Dumont, president of the National Semi-pro Association says the extra hour of daylight this summer will permit nine innings of leisurely ball instead of the usual seven.

'Y' Outfits Have Busy Schedule

Advance Slate Listed to February 14

According to Bert Streeter, booking manager of the Y. M. C. A. basketball teams, the "Y" clubs will have plenty to occupy their minds during the next couple of weeks.

This Friday the Varsity plays host to the Poughkeepsie All Stars. February 3, the Varsity and Crackers will meet the jayvee and varsity squads at Wallkill Prison. February 6 the Buddies Grill of Hudson will furnish the opposition for the Varsity at the "Y" court here.

Monday, February 9, the Varsity and Crackers play the Rhinebeck A. C. Jayvee and Varsity squads. February 13 the clubs play a return engagement at the local Y. M. C. A. court. February 14 the Crackers tangle with the Roe Cliff Jansen club of Hillsdale and the Schenectady Rangers will meet the Varsity at the "Y" court.

Streeter, who has been an important man in the scheme of the "Y" plans this year, will report for army duty Thursday at Camp Upton. For a number of months he was stationed at Fort Dix, N. J., until his honorable discharge due to the age limit. Bert was given his orders to report a few days ago. He is private first class in the army.

'Y' Cagers Score 35 to 29 Win Over Roskins on Monday

Game at Middletown High School Played as a Benefit for War Relief Fund

Coach Dick Thomas' Y. M. C. A. Varsity basketball team scored its 12th victory out of 14 starts Monday night at the Middletown High School gym with a 35 to 29 victory over the Middletown Roskins.

All proceeds of the game were given to the Red Cross War Relief Fund. Following the game a dance was held.

The Roskins took a 10 to 3 lead in the first period of play and it looked like a bad night for the Colonial City quintet. The Roskins were held scoreless in the second session however, while Kingston collected six points to make it 10 to 9 for Middletown going into the third period.

Eddie Bock and company started to move for the "Y" team in the final half and took over the leadership. From then on it was all for the local team.

The "Y" club played without the services of two of their players last night. Jess Shultis and "Chipe" Rhymer couldn't make the trip. However, even without these two stars, the team came through with a brilliant victory.

Kingston used Milt Dubin, Tommy O'Hara, Eddie Bock, Al Bruce, "Bub" Van Buren and Harry Stevenson.

Sarasota Youth Dominates Play In Florida Golf

Coral Gables, Fla., Jan. 27 (AP)—A stalwart youngster with a golf swing copied after that of her idol, the late Marion Miley, is the newest threat in the women's winter tournament program.

Nineteen-year-old Mary Jane Garman of Sarasota crashed the select circle which dominates resort play yesterday by winning the medal in the Miami Miltmore event over such seasoned campaigners as Dorothy Kirby, Louise Suggs and Georgia Tainter.

Proud of her 35-43—78, she vowed to "go as far as I can" in match play. She made her way to the semi-finals against virtually the same field at Punta Gorda, Fla., last week.

The only child of golfing parents—her father scores in the 70's and her mother qualified in the third flight here with a 95—Mary Jane took up the game five years ago and has improved steadily.

A woodcock literally has eyes in the back of its head.

High Falls Woman Wins Handicraft Award

New York, Nov. 27 (Special)—Mrs. John Ham of High Falls was named here Wednesday as winner of a second prize in the quilting division at the annual Women's International Exposition of Arts and Industries current at Madison Square Garden.

Mrs. Ham's entry, a hand-quilted spread with a design of royal blue wreaths on a white background, was displayed with the entries of other exhibitors who had previously taken state prizes in a nationwide contest sponsored by Woman's Day Magazine.

The contest, which includes such handicrafts as weaving, knitting, embroidery and crocheting, was conducted to encourage the development of fine needlework in this country and of handiwork in the home.

Chance Telephone Call Saves Woman's Life

Bridgeport, Conn., Nov. 27 (AP)—Miss Geraldine Armfield, 30, is alive today because the number she dialed as illuminating gas overcame her was by chance the number of someone who knew what to do with her feeble call for help.

Made ill yesterday by gas leaking from a pilot light on her stove, Miss Armfield had strength enough left to reach the telephone and dial a number—any number. It turned out to be that of Miss Helen C. Gomperts, a switchboard operator at the Southern New England Telephone Company, who heard her call: "Help me, I'm sick."

Miss Gomperts learned her address and dispatched police to the house. They found Miss Armfield unconscious, but revived her.

Soviet Battle Is Clarified

Bitter Russian Fight Is Depicted, Using U. S. As Conflict Scene.

NEW YORK.—If the Battle of Russia, which to many Americans' ears may be registering only as a distant rumble of unpronounceable names of unfamiliar cities and rivers, were occurring on the same scale in America instead of the Soviet Union the vastness of the Russ-Nazi battleground would strike home more thoroughly.

Then Chicago would be in the place of Moscow, St. Louis substituted for Stalingrad, and the Ozarks seen as the Caucasus, according to the Russian War Relief, Inc., this city, the organization designated by the President's War Relief Control board to send medical supplies, drugs, concentrated food, clothing and other aid to our Russian allies.

How Dispatch Would Read.

Such a simplified dispatch would read:

CHICAGO.—The battle for St. Louis went into its sixth week today with renewed German attacks on a huge scale. New divisions of Germans were reported to be assailing the American lines over thousands of their own dead.

No estimate of United States casualties was released, but defenders of the city were holding out with a heroism and sacrifice beyond description.

On the St. Louis battle hinges control of the Mississippi, America's last North-South transportation route. Some idea of the significance of this route may be obtained from the fact that two-thirds of America's oil has been carried on Mississippi barges since the loss of most of the territory east of the river.

If St. Louis falls, this artery will be severed. German strategy then probably will be to skirt the foothills of the Ozarks and drive ahead to the rich Oklahoma oil fields, major source of America's fuel supply. America would then be dependent on oil shipments from far-off Britain and Russia, with all the attendant shipping difficulties.

Medical Supplies Arriving.

The only bright spot for Americans in today's press were a report of arrival at San Francisco of a consignment of medical supplies and emergency food requirements, sent by American War Relief of Moscow, and news that U. S. troops have pushed back the Germans for several miles around Chicago, which has been besieged for nine months, somewhat relieving the city's position. American forces today stand in this desperate situation:

The United States has lost most of the Eastern states, with their great industrial plants—including three-fifths of the iron ore supply and half the pig iron production capacity, a large portion of the coal mining industry and many of the nation's largest tank, truck, plane and arms factories.

The Germans occupy one-third of the country's agricultural lands, containing 50,000,000 of the richest cultivated acres.

About 40 million people, caught in the swift German advance of last summer, are rebellious slaves of the invaders.

Forty Million Evacuated Westward.

Another 40 million were evacuated westward, along with industrial equipment, machinery, farm tools, and supplies—even including one whole blast furnace.

As a result of the migration, it is believed agricultural production this year will be sufficient to keep Americans fed through the coming winter, though on a lower level than formerly.

Despite such hardships, there is no sign that Americans have lost any of their determination to fight to victory. Two-thirds of the women in unoccupied America are working for the war effort as much as 12 and 13 hours a day—20 million of them in agriculture, 19 million in industry, and 11 million in the auxiliary army services.

Restoring Wounded to Action.

One of the amazing things about this war has been the record set by the American Army Medical services. Seventy per cent of the wounded have been restored to action, and the surgeon general expects this figure to rise above 80 per cent, only 1.5 per cent of the wounded have died.

The surgeon general warns, however, that this record can be kept up only if there is a steady stream of medical and surgical supplies from the outside world, for the vast number of casualties has drained reserves of these vital goods.

SOVIET SNIPER ON THE PROWL

This official Russian photograph is a close-up of Vassily Faronov (nearest soldier), Red Army sniper who is credited by Soviet sources with killing 136 Germans, taking seven prisoners and destroying an enemy tank. He saw action on the Volkhov front.

Cripple Can't Go to War So He Gives Army His Dog

PELHAM, N. Y.—Crippled by an infected hip as the result of a football injury two years ago, 21-year-old Robert Milan can't go to war, much as he wants to.

So he is doing the next best thing—sending a representative.

He has given his dog, Brian Boru, a handsome three-year-old setter named for the warrior king of Ireland, to Dogs for Defense, Inc., to be trained for army duty.

Asks That Women Should Stop Losing Their Gloves

Your gloves, handbag, your umbrella—and other accessories like these are not the most important items of your wardrobe but they deserve extra care these days. Clothing specialists suggest that the habit of losing gloves and umbrella is a good one for American women to break. Buy a glove-holder to attach to your pocketbook if you are inclined to lose your gloves, or sew a name tape on the inside seam.

Take a tip from the sales person and put your gloves on just as she tries them on you: Ease fingers on first; them thumb and palm. Turn rings so the settings are toward palm of your hand. The best way to take most gloves off is to loosen each fingertip, turn the cuff back over the fingers and draw the gloves off. Suede gloves are an exception; try to work them off easily without turning back the cuff or pulling the fingertips.

After you take off a pair of gloves, pull them gently into shape, blow into the fingers, and lay them in tissue paper in a flat box.

Don't let your gloves get too dirty before you clean them.

Watch for rips in your gloves and mend them promptly. Always use cotton thread in sewing leather. Silk thread will cut the leather and pull out.

Aussie's Record Amazes Officer

He weighed around 200 pounds and was "built accordin'," but that was not the reason the recruiting officer's eyes popped when the 27-year-old giant from "outback" offered himself for enlistment in the Australian imperial forces.

Quietly he told them he was a shearer, that he had shorn 20,000 sheep in ten months and that he would be ready to fight after he had completed a contract which would bring his season's tally to 25,000.

The officer was skeptical, but he told them that an official in the manpower office in New South Wales had been skeptical, too, until he had produced the proof.

"I'm not really fast," he said. "My best score for one day is 215 sheep, but my young brother Jack has a record of 250."

A shearing contractor who knew the modest young man said that in 30 years' experience he had not seen a man shear so evenly and steadily over a long period. It was a rare thing for a man to shear 20,000 sheep in one season.

Fewer Students Are Now Working Through College

"Among the changes in student life seen since Pearl Harbor is a decrease in the number of university girls working at outside jobs," says Helen M. Laughlin, dean of women on the Los Angeles campus of the University of California.

"Last semester 22.56 per cent of the women students, about one in five, were earning part of their maintenance. A third of these were working in excess of three hours a day outside, and slightly less than half of these were entirely self-supporting. In 1939 one in every four women students had some kind of outside job.

"The decrease in the number 'working their way' is primarily due to an improvement in family financial conditions. There are fewer applications for loans from the university: 155 last year compared with 245 the year before. However, the enrollment of women students is 900 below that of two years ago, largely due to demands for service in many businesses where jobs were formerly filled by men. In one neighborhood bank where the only women were three stenographers a short time ago, approximately 20 of the 35 employees are now women."

From the office of the dean of undergraduates, Dr. Earl J. Miller, a decrease also in the relative number of men students working outside was reported. Whereas last fall two-thirds of the men declared themselves in the ranks of earners, with one in every four entirely self-supporting, the last figures show approximately but 57 per cent employed.

Repair Center Keeps Them Rolling

Eight farmers turned the old community blacksmith shop in Cuba, N. Y., into a farm machinery repair center. The result is that they are keeping their equipment in tip-top shape for food production, making it last longer, and helping the nation conserve metals needed for war industries.

The center, set up as a co-operative enterprise by the farmers with loans of $20 to each from the Farm Security administration, is equipped with a second-hand acetylene welding apparatus, a set of gas tanks, post drills, a grinder motor with extra wheels, a tap and die set, a heavy vise, and an assortment of small tools.

BUY, BUY BONDS OR BYE-BYE FREEDOM - - - WHICH? NOTHING MATTERS NOW BUY VICTORY!

Farmer—Would you like to buy a jug of cider?

Man—Well—er, is it ambitious and willing to work?

THE MORNING AFTER

The table looked so pretty with all its candles all alight;
The family was all there and the turkey was a sight!
We gathered around the table with many a thankful sigh,
And ate our fill of turkey as well as pumpkin pie.
But, Oh! The morning after, when our tummys began to hurt!
How we wish we hadn't eaten any more of that dessert!—Ann Rose.

Mrs. Perry—My daughter comes out this week.

Mrs. Harry—How strange! So does my husband. How long was your daughter in for? Frank good three months off for good behavior.

WAR EFFORT

Slick, tan legs and painted toosies
Buy War Stamps instead of hosies!

Mrs. Youngbride—Our cook says those eggs you sent yesterday were quite old.

Farmer — Very, very sorry, ma'am. They were the best we could get. You see, all the young chickens have been killed off, so the old hens are the only ones left to do the laying.

Never marry on Sunday. It isn't right to gamble on the Sabbath.

Girl—If wishes came true, what would be your first?

Soldier—I would wish—Ah, if only I dared to tell you!

Girl—Go on, go on! What do you think I brought up wishing for?

Well, my dear, I have carried you safely over all the rough places of life, haven't I?

Wife—Yes, and I don't think you missed any of them.

On her way out of a Cafeteria, a smartly-dressed girl handed the cashier a slip of paper on which appeared the number 100-180. The cashier glanced at it, and let the girl pass without paying.

When the proprietor appeared, the cashier handed him the note. He studied the numbers frowningly, then demanded to know its meaning.

Cashier—You see, it reads: "I owe nothing for I ate nothing."

The gentleman carefully removed two cigars from his upper vest pocket and placed them on the table. Then he opened his arms. But the girl did not rush into them. "You," she said coldly, "have loved before."

Teacher (in physiology class)—Junior, can you give a familiar example of the human body as it adapts itself to changed conditions?

Junior—Yes-sum. My Aunt gained fifty pounds in a year, and her skin never cracked.

Father—Junior, who is the laziest boy in your class?

Junior—I don't know, Dad.

Father—Then you ought. This report says while other boys are learning their lessons, there is one who sits in his seat and watches the rest.

Junior—Oh, that's the teacher Dad!

When you write to the boys in service, be cheerful. If you can't be exactly cheerful, at least be truthful and stick to exact facts and actual conditions. Every soldier has his job to do. Be sure your letter is not one to detract from his efficiency.

Genus Chicken—You're not the only gobble on the beach!

Rooster—You're no Plymouth Rock yourself.

"Montreal: Seaport and City," by Stephen Leacock

At first blush, one might think the choice of a humorist to write the history of a seaport a curious one. And after reading Stephen Leacock's "Montreal: Seaport and City," one might change one's mind. Mr. Leacock even livens up the traditional list of acknowledgements. After thanking a goodly list of important people and mentioning other sources, he adds: "Acknowledging all these debts, I feel also that I owe a good deal of this book to my own industry and effort."

Montreal is the whole of Canada seen through the wrong end of the telescope. That is, Canada as a whole is plagued by a division of race and language, and a vast train of circumstance stems therefrom. So with Montreal, which is divided between English-speaking and French-speaking populations, neither of which speaks with the other except in a business way. In writing about the two great universities of Montreal, Mr. Leacock remarks that men have served lifetimes on the faculty of McGill, for example, without ever visiting the University of Montreal more than once—perhaps not even once.

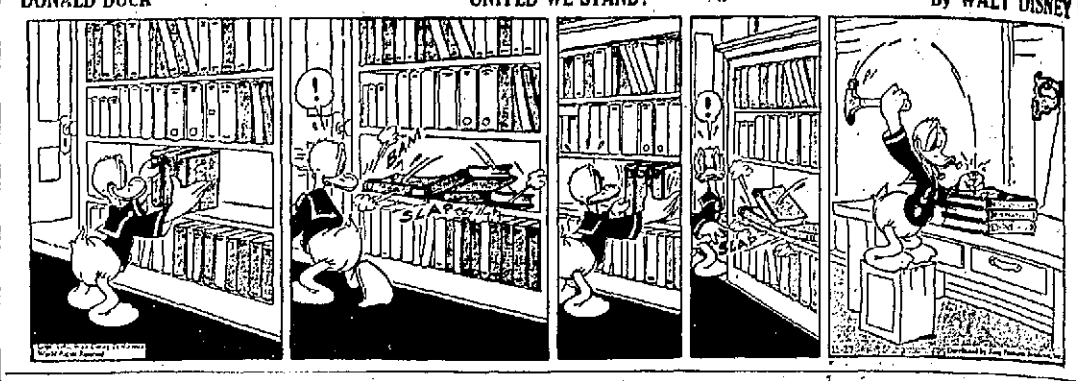

The historical background is beautifully sketched. You cannot understand Montreal without knowing Canadian history, and here you have enough of it. Also, you must know that Montreal is an island and conditioned by its situation in one of the great rivers of the world; that no comparable port lies farther from blue water than Montreal. And the relation of Canada with us and with Britain is the third essential, normally a very dusty study, and for Mr. Leacock the exact opposite.

This is his armature. Like a good sculptor, he covers the armature with clay deftly applied—in this case it is polychrome. Such matters as the old ice palaces which used to melt at once into ruins, the enormous civic banquets, the Fenian "invasion," the historic fires, the background of the fur trade, early-day (and latter-day) shipping, the peregrinations of the Canadian capital, now here now there—all these and much more are the surface and at the same time the substance of Mr. Leacock's good-humored and full-blooded story.

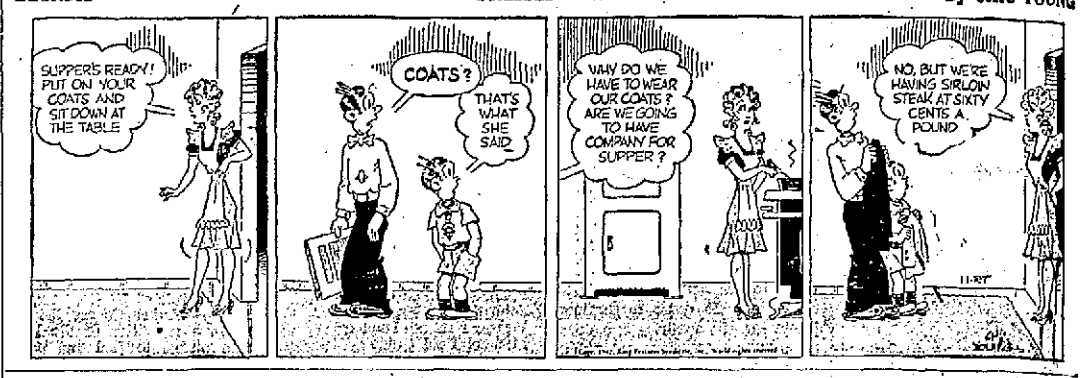

Pottery-making is one of the oldest forms of human industry. In Egypt it was practiced in the 20th Century B. C.

The crater of the Alaska volcano, Mount Katmai, would hold all the buildings of New York city.

though he did assure the House of ultimate victory. His reference to trouble still to come had to do with the battle of the Pacific, and it's difficult to see how he could extract much optimism from that position for the immediate future. It is encouraging, though, to hear him say both Britain and America are sending reinforcements and equipment to the Orient.

Churchill made the disclosure that United States fighter and bomber squadrons would help defend the British Isles and that U. S. bombers would attack Germany. As regards the American troops which have arrived in Northern Ireland, he explained that "very considerable forces are following as opportunity serves."

The significance of Churchill's remark may rest in the fact that Northern Ireland (perhaps getter known as Ulster) is an armed camp and must remain so because of the danger of German invasion of the Emerald Isle. Not only are many troops garrisoned there but Ulster is well equipped with naval and air bases.

One of the reasons for maintaining a large fighting force there is to protect Eire from German invasion—strange though that may seem in view of Eire's determined neutrality. Britain has been trying, of course, ever since the start of the war to secure the use of naval bases in southern Ireland, not only for the protection of Eire but to meet the submarine menace west of Ireland.

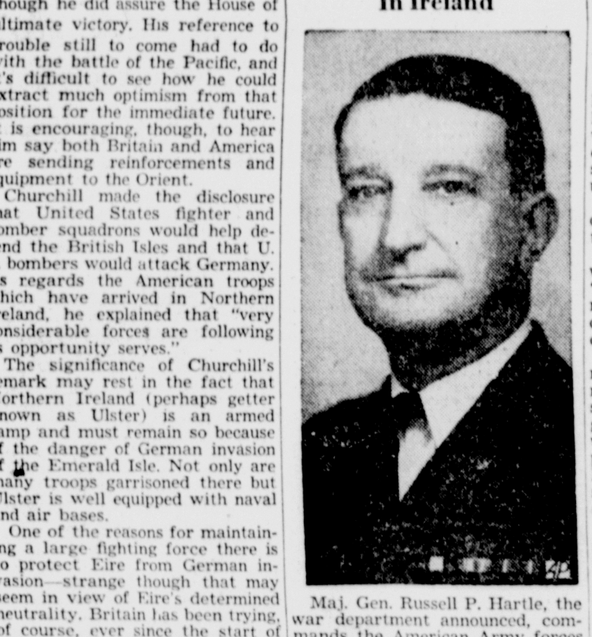

The Dublin government, however, has felt that neutrality was its only course. Thus we find Britain standing on the Ulster border with an army ready to rush to Eire's help if the Germans should violate that neutrality and invade Eire to secure an invaluable base for invasion of England.

That Britain is preparing for a German attempt at invasion of the British Isles there is no doubt. London expects that by spring and perhaps even sooner. The Allies also are looking forward to the time when they can invade the continent. That must come after Hitler is greatly weakened, and the fierce punishment he is receiving from the Russians now may have a vital bearing on the Allied prospects.

Fitness Is Praised

Critical British, Irish and American officials who watched the troops debark spoke highly of their evident fitness.

"You are impressive examples of American military might," declared Sir Archibald Sinclair, British air minister, who welcomed them.

So great was the secrecy surrounding the Atlantic crossing that only a small band of curious onlookers was on hand as the big transports were warped alongside the quays.

When military bands struck up "The Star Spangled Banner," however, a ragged cheer went up from the shore, and like wildfire the electrifying cry ran through the town:

"The Yanks are here!"

Spectators crowded to the streets as the troops marched out of the dockyard after the brief official greeting, swinging along to the stirring strains of "Marching Through Georgia" with the Stars and Stripes fluttering proudly at the head of the column.

The doughboys looked grim as they paraded through town, full packs on their backs and tin hats on their heads.

Grins came to their faces, however, as they broke marching formation to entrain for their encampments and they exchanged friendly greetings with Britishers and Irishmen who crowded close to them.

While most of the doughboys hailed from the midwest and many had never before been aboard any vessel larger than a river steamer, they seemed to be taking in stride the excitement attendant upon their transatlantic voyage.

"When do we eat?" was the question that seemed uppermost in their minds.

They learned quickly that they would get what the British call "a heavy breakfast and two heavy meals" a day. British soldiers get one heavy meal and three light ones daily.

Plans for the disposition to be made of the American troops were not announced, but it was assumed that training—which began only a year ago for some—would be resumed with emphasis placed upon tactics developed by British soldiers who already have seen action on the continent and elsewhere.

Most of the Americans appeared anxious to come to grips with the enemy.

"They're all eager for a fight," was the way one of their officers put it.

First Class Private Milburn Henke, 22, of Hutchinson, Minn., son of a German immigrant to the United States, was the first soldier ashore. He proudly displayed a postcard from his father saying: "Give 'em hell."

Though the Atlantic crossing was described laconically by the navy as "routine" it was an exciting adventure for this correspondent and Harrison Roberts, Associated Press photographer accredited to the A.E.F.

The ever-present danger of enemy submarines, frequent boat drills, the sight of protecting warships wallowing through the waves and the eerie nights when the convoy swept on without a light showing all combined to add to the air of excitement.

Because of the number of passengers aboard the 20-year-old transport there were only half enough lifeboats to go around and the remainder of the personnel was assigned to liferafts.

said one. "We did not know America was at war with us. We knew she was at war with Japan."

The prisoners' overcoats are good, but not nearly as heavy as those of Red army troops. Their boots are not in a class with the Russians' and their headgear — little cloth trench caps—is poor for the climate.

Corp. Max Herman, 23, a former musician, said he had seen no evidence of typhus among his comrades, but added: "We have enough lice though."

NEW PALTZ

New Paltz, Jan. 26—The mixed chorus of the Normal School presented its first concert of the year in the auditorium Thursday evening, January 22. It was an all-musical program consisting of the works of many noted composers The modern dance group also took part.

The New Paltz unit of the Home Bureau will meet at the home of Mrs. Henry Eifert on Millrock road Thursday, January 29. Miss Everice Parsons, the Ulster county demonstration agent, will be present and give the first lesson on menu planning for defense against infection of eyes, ears, skin, elementary tract and nerve degeneration. Those attending will eat their noon meal at Mrs. Eifert's and share in the expense.

Mr. and Mrs. Lester Harvey and her mother, Mrs. Averil, who are spending the winter in Deland, Fla., have written to friends that there are not so many people in Deland this winter as usual. And not a word has been heard from their son, Averil Harvey, since the attack on Pearl Harbor.

Daniel DuBois visited friends in Modena on Monday.

Mrs. Eva Osterhoudt has returned from spending a few days with her son and family in Tarrytown.

Those from the high school who attended the opera, "The Bartered Bride," in New York last week were: Mrs. Dora Arras, Georgette Fairbanks, Lois Warren, Evelyn George, Lois Tamney, Martha Grinrod, Connie Pederson, Hilda Klyne, Elsa Van Orden, Phyllis DuBois, Josette Marion, Rose Marie Strada, Mary Ellen Black, Joan Alverson and Carolyn Dressel.

Mrs. Christian Becker entertained several members of the Arethusa Sorority and Mrs. V. C. Moore at 5 o'clock tea at her home, "The Old Manse," on North Huguenot street, Tuesday, January 20. The table was set very attractively. The colors were blue and white, Royal Copenhagen, and decorated with yellow and white snapdragons and white candles. Delicious canapes, Danish pastries, cakes, one with the sorority colors, were served to the 22 guests. Priority Expert in City

Freeman Photo

John B. Dunn, priority executive of the New York Priorities Field Service, is shown being interviewed by D. S. Moore, of the Kingston Foundry, at the city hall this morning. Mr. Dunn had a full appointment list from 9 o'clock this morning until 5 this afternoon with the business men of Kingston.

Two Are Injured In Street Falls

Several Minor Accidents Are Also Reported

Two persons were injured in falls on slippery sidewalks and there were several minor automobile accidents caused by icy pavements on Monday during the course of the snowstorm in Kingston. The total fall of snow, according to the city engineer's records, was 2½ inches.

Thomas J. Burke of 106 McEntee street, a mail carrier, suffered a fractured thigh bone as the result of a fall on Broadway in front of the former Palen plant, adjoining the Y. M. C. A., while Miss Lena Phillips of 350 Hasbrouck avenue, suffered a broken hip, in a fall near the Central Fire Station while walking to her work in the Fuller Shirt factory.

Both were taken to the Kingston Hospital for treatment.

Milder weather today followed the storm of Monday, and the snow that covered the pavements turned to slush. The lowest temperature recorded yesterday by the official city thermometer was 28 degrees at 2 o'clock, while the highest point reached that afternoon was 33 degrees at 3 o'clock.

The records in the city engineer's office show that the total snowfall so far this month in Kingston was 11¼ inches.

Heavy Salmon Run Tames Wild Bears

Bruin Getting Fat and Lazy Over Unusual Supply.

WHEELER, ORE.—Bears are getting so lazy they wait for the fish to be tossed ashore; sea-gulls are sating themselves to the point of insensibility; fishermen are reaping fat profits.

And still the chum salmon surge up the Oregon coastal streams in a run so heavy hundreds of them are forced from the water and onto the river banks.

Mink and otter have gathered at the banks, too interested in the unexpected and bountiful feast to fear human intruders.

Bears, expert fishers, sit by the streams and wait for dinner to flash from the water and flap at their feet.

Seagulls, always enthusiastic eaters, loll about in a semi-stupor.

Rats have deserted oceanside wharves and barnyards for easier feeding along the streams. Farmers and fishermen hope they won't return; old-timers think they will.

Old-timers can't remember anything like this run of the chum, lowly and once despised member of the salmon family. From Tillamook bay to Alsea river the chum, which spawns in the comparatively short coastal streams, is churning the waters in unprecedented number.

The ugly, white-meated fish, averaging 10 pounds, once was considered not choice enough for human consumption. In recent years, it has been canned and smoked, but always at a price so low the profit, if any, to the fishermen was meager.

With prices at 3½ cents a pound fishermen have made as high as $80 a day each since the run started.

The run began in early October. It increased and increased. About the time it normally would have begun to thin out—it got heavier than ever, and the end is not yet in sight.

Classifies Hoboes From 'Dingbats' to 'Buzzards'

SCHENECTADY, N. Y. — Salvation Army Adjutant Giles Barret of Stanford, Conn., has a hobby of classifying hoboes. He puts them in 24 classifications, from tramps who feel that the world owes them a living, to "jungle buzzards," which he said are the lowest form of parasites.

These "buzzards," he explained, are tramps who "bum" things from hoboes.

Barrett points out that the real hobo is a contraction of "hoeing boy," an intinerant willing to work for his keep. Generally, the real hobo, called a "dingbat," is accompanied by a "gaycat," or novice, who knocks on the door while the former does the talking.

KRUMVILLE

Krumville, Jan. 27—Guests of Mr. and Mrs. Conrad Christensen last Saturday afternoon were: Mrs. Fred Whitman and her two children, Bruce and Juddie of Whitfield, also Mrs. Whitman's sister, Miss Mary Tilly.

Oscar Christensen of New York recently spent a few days at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Conrad Christensen.

The report cards for the second quarter in the Krumville school were recently given out. The pupil in the seventh and eighth grades with the highest average was Patrick Henry, the highest in the fifth grade was Bernard Williams, the highest in the fourth grade was Walter Kruger.

At the recent election of officers in the church school the officers elected for the following year were: Superintendent, Mrs. Loran Hover; assistant superintendent, Helen Davis; secretary and treasurer, Alberta Wager. The present teachers are Mrs. Loren Hover, Leona Merrihew and Mrs. William H. Barringer.

Prof. Ralph Eighmey and the Rev. William H. Barringer last Friday evening attended the party at the Young People's Community Club at Lyonsville for the benefit of the Red Cross.

Harry Marshall of Olive Bridge spent last Saturday at the home of his grandmother, Mrs. Katie Davis.

Mr. and Mrs. Bob Vollmer, who have been staying most of the time at Hurley, spent the week-end at their home here.

Church school will meet at 10 o'clock next Sunday morning. Morning worship service will be at 11 o'clock with sermon by the pastor. The subject of the sermon will be "My Brother."

Brett Heads List To Fill Vacancy

Fire Captain Is Needed at Wiltwyck Station

James M. Brett heads the eligible list of the Municipal Civil Service Commission for the position of fire captain at the Wiltwyck Fire Station to fill the vacancy caused by the death last year of Captain James L. Conlin. The other two names on the eligible list are Joseph M. Hallinan and George D. Matthews.

The list with the three names was filed today with the Board of Fire Commissioners by the local civil service board. The fire board meets tonight and it is expected that they will make an appointment from the list.

The promotion examination for the position of fire captain was held November 26 of last year by the local civil service board. Eight of the paid firemen took the examination and all passed.

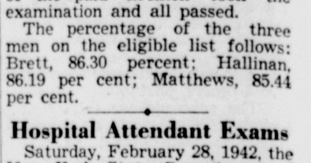

The percentage of the three men on the eligible list follows: Brett, 86.30 percent; Hallinan, 86.19 per cent; Matthews, 85.44 per cent.

Hospital Attendant Exams

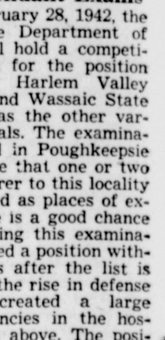

Saturday, February 28, 1942, the New York State Department of Civil Service will hold a competitive examination for the position of attendant at Harlem Valley State Hospital and Wassaic State School, as well as the other various state hospitals. The examination will be held in Poughkeepsie and it is probable that one or two communities nearer to this locality will be designated as places of examination. There is a good chance that anyone taking this examination will be offered a position within a few months after the list is published, since the rise in defense industries have created a large number of vacancies in the hospitals mentioned above. The position of attendant pays $54 a month and maintenance with periodic and definite pay increases. Attendants work on an eight-hour day basis, and are members of the state employes' pension system. There are definite promotional opportunities.

Annual Ball Is Held By Congregation

With a program presented by excellent entertainers, the congregation Ahavath Israel sponsored its sixth annual ball, Thanksgiving Eve at the municipal auditorium. In addition to the entertainment, Enoch Light and his orchestra, who had travelled from North Carolina for this appearance, provided music for dancing.

Mayor William F. Edelmuth, introduced by George Kramer one of the honorary chairmen, greeted the audience and officially opened the ball. The mayor then introduced the master of ceremonies, Henny Youngman.

The first number on the program was a tap speciality by Rosalind Gordon and this was followed by the presentation of Miss Sylvia Cyde who brought the charm of the opera singer to the stage. She chose the popular semi-classics including "L'Amour Toujours L'Amour" and "My Hero" and sang a Russian folk song for an encore. Robert Brinn, tenor soloist, held the audience with his sincere interpretations of the the Clown's Song from "I Pagliacci," the ancient Hebrew Chant of "My People" as well as the lighter music. Together Miss Cyde and Mr. Brinn sang "Will You Remember" from Sigmund Romberg's "Maytime." Both are trained opera singers, Miss Cyde appearing now with the Philadelphia Opera Company and Mr. Brinn sang last year on the "Metropolitan Opera Auditions of the Air" program. Miss Cyde was substituting for Imogene Carpenter.

Carl Rosini demonstrated the arts of magic using several members of the audience for his act. Billed as the whirlwind pianist from station WOR, Pauline Alpert, exhibited her digital mastery in further complicating the rhythm patterns of such pieces as "Begin the Beguine" and a medley of George Gershwin's tunes.

A refreshing tap dance act was performed by the young stars of the St. Moritz, New York city, Jack and June Blair. Both in solo and team, the dancing was expertly executed with humor between the taps. The comedian of the show was Johnny Burke, star of "Count Me In" and "Priorities." Entering in the garb of a World War I soldier, he proceeded to tell the woes of army life from the induction center to the front lines.

The formal program was brought to a close with the dance team of Robberts and White of the Rainbow Room. This team satirized the usual ball room dances. They danced as they see others dance and were well applauded by the audience.

The entertainment and music was furnished by the WOR artists bureau under the direction of Nat. M. Abramson. Jacques Roth conducted the orchestra for the enteinment.

Enoch Light and the orchestra played for dancing throughout the remainder of the evening, using among the many arrangements the song they recently introduced on the air, "Alladin's Lamp" and featuring Miss Leslie James as soloist.

There were approximately 1400 in attendance. Decorations were red, white and blue starred bunting with a large American flag as a back drop on the stage. Herman G. Rafalowsky was general chairman of the ball and he was assisted by the honorary chairmen, George Kramer and Mrs. Daniel Hoffman and the co-chairmen Abe Levy, Daniel Hoffman, Mrs. Nathan Parnett, Mrs. George Kramer and a large committee from the congregation.

Book Club Will Study Current Topics, Contemporary Books

A regular meeting of the Book Club was held at the home of Mrs. Harry Fertel. In view of the interesting material being offered as reading matter in connection with the world situation, it was decided to discontinue reading of the classics and plays and devote more time to contemporary fiction and non-fiction. The Book Club is also to make a study of propaganda.

The program for the year will, however, continue the reviews on music and art. "Victory Through Air Power" by Major DeSeversky will be the first book reviewed this season.

Several of the members have left Kingston because their husbands have joined the armed forces. They are Mrs. William Chazanof, Mrs. Gerald Sumber, Mrs. Sidney Lutzin, Mrs. Harold Nadel. Several new members were accepted and will attend the next meeting.

Mrs. Alex Parnett told of her trip to Hollywood and the home of Mary Pickford. She showed many pictures of "Pickfair" and spoke of other interesting people she met there.

Club Entertains For D. A. R. Regent

The Christopher Snyder Junior American Citizens' Club of Cottekill, which was organized October 28, held a meeting Tuesday and entertained the regent of Wiltwyck Chapter, Mrs. William Macgregor Mills, sponsor of the club. Mrs. Harvey Davis is the director and under her guidance the program was planned.

The opening ceremonies consisted of the parade, the salute to the flag, the pledge of allegiance, the singing of the national anthem and the club prayer. Miss Roberta Hendrickson acted as flag bearer and had as her honor guards, Arthur Freer and John Meyer. The president, Merle Thorpe, conducted the meeting. Miss Ethel Quick presented a health skit and the chairman of the historical committee, Roy Thorpe, read some information about local history. He told of the old Keator home built in 1770 at Keator's Corners which is now known as Binnewater. Jacob Snyder was the first settler in Cottekill and owned the first home, where a revolutionary soldier lived—is still standing. It is the old stone house known as the Christopher Snyder home.

Plans were made to collect scrap, make scrap books and airplane models, and to knit squares for afghans. Other officers of the club are: Morton Glazlay, vice president; Roy Thorpe, second vice president, and Miss Betty Raisner, secretary. The song leader is Arthur Davis.

Accidents Are Increasing With Employment Rise

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 25 — The current increase in employment is causing a considerable rise in number of industrial accidents according to a statement issued today by Industrial Commissioner Frieda S. Miller. A preliminary tabulation covering the first half of 1942 shows that 51,122 compensated accident cases were closed in the first six months of this year. This total is nearly 10,000 higher than that for the first half of 1941 and represents an increase of more than 20 per cent.

The relative rise in number of accidents was greater upstate than in New York city. The tabulation of the closed cases compiled under the direction of Dr. E. B. Patton, director of the Division of Statistics and Information in the Department of Labor, shows that the 51,122 cases included 18,870 closed in upstate districts and 32,252 closed in the New York city district. Compared with the first half of 1941 the upstate total was 26 per cent higher while that for the metropolitan area was slightly under 20 per cent higher.

The increase in number of industrial injuries was particularly noticeable in areas with defense work, especially in the metals manufacturing centers. In the Buffalo area, which has large steel mills and airplane factories, compensated accidents rose 36 per cent in the first half of 1942 compared with the same period in 1941. In the Syracuse and Rochester districts the increase amounted to about 26 per cent, while in the Albany area it was somewhat less than 20 per cent.

About 20,000 of the accidents tabulated occurred in manufacturing and about 31,000 in non-manufacturing industries covered by the Workmen's Compensation Law. Most of the present rise in number of industrial injuries has occurred in manufacturing although all industry groups registered some increase. The rise in factory accidents was over 40 per cent while in non-manufacturing industries it was about 10 per cent.

This half year's cases included 368 compensated deaths and 50,754 compensated non-fatal injuries. The number of cases in the two large groups of non-fatal injuries, namely temporary and permanent partial disabilities, has gone up considerably but, so far, no appreciable increase appears in number of compensated death cases.

John Kelley Will Resign Tuesday

Will Leave S.E.C. Post for New York Law Firm

John H. Kelley, assistant general counsel of the Securities and Exchange Commission, is resigning from the commission on December 1, 1942. He will be associated with the law firm of Ignatius & Stone, 150 Broadway, New York, N. Y.

Mr. Kelley has been with the commission since its organization, being first employed in the office of general counsel at Washington, D. C. During this early period, he conducted a survey of practices in connection with unlisted trading of securities under congressional direction to the commission, and assisted in the preparation of the report and proposed legislation growing out of that survey. He also worked on the preparation of rules and regulations under the securities exchange act, and conducted and prosecuted one of the commission's early precedent-making manipulation cases.

He was appointed assistant general counsel in 1937, and since that time has been at the head of the legal division in New York, where the commission's largest regional office is located. In this capacity, Mr. Kelley has supervised and directed the staff of attorneys charged with enforcement work and participated in the trial and hearings of many important cases. His office conducted a series of investigations and court actions which eliminated widespread violations of law in connection with installment selling of securities, and conducted the investigations and hearings growing out of the McKesson & Robbins matter.

Prior to his employment by the commission, Mr. Kelley was engaged in the general practice of law, and is a member of the New York and New Jersey Bars. He is a native of Kingston, N. Y., and a graduate of Fordham University Law School.

Washington In Wartime

By Jack Stinnett

Washington—Not since the fight over reorganization of the supreme court (and that covers a lot of territory) have the foundations of Congress been so rocked as in the Senate scrap on the poll tax bill.

Only by seeing it could you believe it. From the very outset, party lines broke down. Friends turned against friends of long standing. Traditional foes discovered that they were bedfellows. And from the first day of the ruckus, jangled nerves resulted in spirited verbal rows that left the public galleries and the Senate itself a little breathless with astonishment.

Imagine the ordinarily courteous, kindly, long-haired Texan, Senator Connally, tossing such bitterisms at aged, lame-duck Senator Norris that even he (Senator Connally) seemed amazed at his own remarks and withdrew some of them from the record.

Imagine dyed-in-the-wool Democrats, men who have followed the administration through many a fight without a public whimper, turning on Majority Leader Senator Barkley and threatening rebellion against his leadership.

Imagine Senator (The Man) Wilbo—or any other senator, for that matter—standing on his feet at the very time that news was rolling in from both hemispheres of titanic battles, threatening to tie the Senate up for 30 days or more with a filibuster.

Observers here are bemoaning the fact that Congress, fresh from the strafing it got for voting itself pensions and bickering over political issues, gasoline rationing cards, etc., has stuck out its neck again.

It undoubtedly has, but before you pass judgment, it might be well to consider one more thing: That there isn't a single parliamentary weapon used in the poll tax scrap that hasn't been used for a century and a half under that very same Capitol dome.

In other words, this is nothing new—not even in war time. The filibuster has been recognized as a parliamentary expediency for 150 years. Taking up all the Senate's time with roll calls (raising the point of order that no quorum is present) isn't quite as old, but almost. Loading a bill down with extraneous and highly controversial amendments (the poll tax state senators threatened to tie more than 40 onto this bill) each of which would result in days of debate, also is an ancient trick.

All of these things have been done before — and even in the World War, the Civil War and others. It's just "Democracy at work"—a phrase that is a pretty good springboard to take off from when you are trying to form opinions on the antics of the legislative branch of our government.

Flashes of Life Sketched in Brief

(By The Associated Press)

Teeth For Country

Wilkes-Barre, Pa.—Seven-year-old Arthur Lewis' father gave him a nickel when he lost a tooth in a tussle with his sister Carol, 3.

He promptly started another scuffle, explaining:

"If she kicks out another tooth maybe you'll give me another nickel and I can buy a defense stamp."

He got the nickel—and kept the tooth.

Generals March, Too

Columbia, S. C.—Tramp, tramp, tramp, the generals are marching too.

It's Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress and his staff.

The general, feeling that his headquarters staff has been overlooked in orders decreeing a stiff physical training program for his division, ordered the staff workouts—three times a week.

Determined Sailor

Helena, Mont.—A few weeks ago Thomas H. Anderson, 19, of Poplar Bluff, Mo., decided to enlist in the navy. He was told he needed his father's consent. Father refused.

Anderson traveled 1,000 miles to Savanna, Ill., where his father was employed, to present the navy's case. Father listened—and was convinced.

Back came Anderson 1,000 miles to Montana. He will be sworn in today.

Fewer Diners

Kansas City—Usually the City Union Mission has 1,500 persons for its Thanksgiving dinner for the homeless and jobless.

But Mrs. David Bulkley, superintendent of the church-supported unit, found her job much simpler this year.

Only 500 showed up.

Spring Season

Raytown, Mo.—Clayton W. Erwin was pleased when a long dry spring on his farm started spouting 4,000 gallons of water each hour.

He told W. Logan Jones, manager of a water company, of his good fortune.

Cried Jones:

"That's the leak we've been hunting for eight months."

The water main has been repaired, Erwin's spring is dry again—and water company officials have quit worrying about bankruptcy.

BOY ROMPS WITH LION

The seven-year-old son of Superintendent M. Flood of the Dublin Zoo has made a pal of a year-old lion, which was born during a blitz in the Empire Theatre, in Leeds, England. So attached has the animal become to the boy that he is the only person it will allow near it. Daily the boy romps with it on the lawn of the Dublin Zoological Gardens, the pair rolling about playfully on the grass. The fun over, the lion meekly follows the boy back to its cage.

City Passes Quiet Thanksgiving Day

No Accidents Reported; Churches Hold Services

The Second World War Thanksgiving Day in Kingston was not marred by any accidents or fires according to the records of the police and fire departments, and the day was observed without any unusual incidents.

During the day the sky was overcast but there was little rain except for a brief shower in the morning and another during the early evening.

Union Thanksgiving Day services were held in the city. Uptown, the churches united in a service at the Clinton Avenue Methodist Church, with the sermon delivered by the Rev. Arthur E. Oudemool of the First Reformed Church, while the downtown service was held in the Rondout Presbyterian Church, with the sermon by the Rev. Roscoe Strivings of the Trinity Methodist Church.

Folllowing another old custom, the congregations of the Lutheran Church of the Redeemer and Trinity Lutheran Church held union services in the Wurts street church, while in St. Mary's Church a solemn high Mass was celebrated. This service was sponsored by the Ulster county union of Holy Name Societies.

The colored churches of the city united in a union service in St. Mark's A.M.E. Zion Church on Foxhall avenue.

During the afternoon and evening there were special attractions shown in the local theatres, and at night a basketball game was staged in the municipal auditorium.

ASHOKAN

Ashokan, Nov. 27—A surprise party was given for Miss Joyce Winne of the village with a wedding shower. Miss Winne is to be married next Sunday in the church at a candle light service by the pastor of the church, the Rev. Robert B. Guice.

Mrs. VanKleeck and children have moved in the residence formerly owned by the late Virgil Merrihew, a brother-in-law. Mrs. Van Kleeck has purchased the home.

The local school had a party for the students Wednesday afternoon before the Thanksgiving vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. Mearl Greene were dinner guests the home of the Rev. and Mrs. Robert Guice of the Methodist parsonage Thanksgiving day. Mr. and Mrs. Greene are cousins of Mrs. Guice.

Union Thanksgiving Services at Ellenville

There was a good attendance at the union Thanksgiving services held in the Ellenville Methodist Church Thursday morning, in which congregations of the four Protestant churches joined.

The sermon was by the Rev. A. F. Kellenbach of Christ Lutheran Church. Assisting in the service was the Rev. Donald H. Spencer of the Methodist Church, the Rev. George R. Hiatt of St. John's Episcopal Church, the Rev. Lloyd W. Bell of the Reformed Church and the Rev. William Coombe, retired minister of the Reformed Church.

Good Taste Today

By Emily Post

PROPRIETY WAITS UPON GOOD SENSE

As an example of a wrong rule serving a right purpose, the following letter is worthy of note: "We would very much like your opinion of this situation: Two high school boys walked home from a church party with a high school girl and when they arrived at her home, found it dark. The girl was afraid to go in alone and be by herself until her parents arrived. So the boys stayed until her parents returned, for which the latter seemed grateful. At least they gave no impression that they did not think it the proper thing for the boys to have done. But one of the boy's mothers is terribly upset about the whole thing and says this is just the way bad reputations start."

In my opinion the boys were right. In this instance they would have been cruel (and self-conscious prigs besides) to have left her in the empty house alone. As it happened, the fact that they were two made each a chaperon for the other. The mother who is upset might have something to be upset about if it were this girl's regular habit to invite boys in when her parents are out; but to criticize this one occurence is almost as unreasonable as it would be to criticize a man for putting his arm around a woman whom he is trying to rescue from a burning building.

Big Table Cloths Are "Out"

Dear Mrs. Post: I have heard it said recently that damask table cloths are "out"; that they are using only doilies, runners and lace cloths. Is this true?

Answer: They are not "out" but merely seen less often than formerly, because putting a fresh cloth on for every meal means a very big laundry bill as well as a large supply of table cloths. Those who have many of them and have laundresses to keep them beautifully laundered, still use them. In other words, nothing takes the place of a damask cloth at dinner. Just as nothing takes the place of a man's white tie and tails. But the cloth and the tails are both becoming very scarce—just now.

Sending Formal Answer

Dear Mrs. Post: A and B were discussing replies to formal invitations. A contends that the envelope of reply to a wedding or formal dinner invitation should be addressed to the hostess only; B says the envelope should be addressed to both the host and hostess. Which is correct? Your etiquette book says "reply in the same form" but does not mention the address on the envelope.

Answer: The envelope of a third person answer to a third person invitation should be addressed to the name, or names, appearing at the top of the invitation. Informal notes of acceptance are sent to whoever signed the note of invitation.

Are you trying to make plans to be married to a man in the service? If you are, you'll be glad to know that you can get a reprint of Mrs. Post's recent article "Furlough Wedding Details" if you send your request with a three-cent stamped self-addressed envelope to Mrs. Post, in care of Kingston Daily Freeman, P. O. Box 150, Times Square Station, New York.

Leftovers Make Thrift Dishes

Dinners Serving 3 or 4

Turkey Regal
(Other Fowl Can Be Used)
Buttered Cooked Celery
Reheated Rolls Butter
Fruitberry Salad
Cheesed Rolls Coffee or Tea

Turkey Regal

(Combines Appetizing Leftovers)

1 cup diced cooked turkey
1 cup stuffing (any kind)
1 cup mashed white potatoes
½ cup cooked peas, or carrots or spinach
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 tablespoon minced onions
2 tablespoons chopped green pepper (optional)
½ cup milk
1 cup reheated giblet gravy

Mix together turkey, stuffing, potatoes, peas and seasonings. Add milk and lightly press into buttered mold. Bake 20 minutes in moderate oven in pan hot water. Unmold onto heated platter and cover with gravy.

Fruitberry Salad

1 cup diced grapefruit
1 cup diced or sliced oranges
1 cup cubed cranberry jelly or thick sauce
½ cup broken nuts
½ cup raisins
½ cup salad dressing
1 teaspoon lemon juice
⅛ teaspoon salt

Lightly mix and chill ingredients. Pass in a bowl lined with crisp cabbage, lettuce or other salad greens.

Cheese Rolls

(Cleans Up The Cheese Dish)

½ cup cheese (mixed or one kind)
⅛ teaspoon garlic salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
2 olives, finely chopped
3 tablespoons butter
1 tablespoon salad dressing or mayonnaise
6 rolls, halved

Mix cheese and seasonings and spread on cut sides of rolls. Arrange in shallow pan and bake or broil until brown.

Hot toast spread with honey lightly spiced with cinnamon and cloves gives an up-to-date breakfast or luncheon dish. Return the toast to oven or broiler for a minute after it has been honey spread, for best results.

Nurse Stays With Patient

Saddle Rock, N. Y., Nov. 27 (AP) Volunteer firemen entered a burning house and saw two figures dimmed by thick smoke. A fireman reached for the nearest, Estelle Qualake, a nurse, but she refused help. "I'll not budge until my patient is moved!" she cried and pointed to Mrs. Charles Jackson, 62. Firemen carried the ailing woman down the ladder, and the nurse followed on her own power. Miss Qualake suffered smoke poisoning.

Coffee Rationing Goes Into Effect Midnight Saturday

At midnight on Saturday the coffee rationing to consumers will go into effect after a week's freezing of sales and on Sunday, November 29, the consumer will be permitted to purchase coffee under rationing, as arranged by the O.P.A.

The first ration will be one pound to a person and will have to last from November 29, 1942, through January 3, 1943, and is procurable by presenting the No. 27 stamp from the War Ration Book No. 1, which is known commonly as the "sugar book."

No person under 15 years of age will be permitted to use the coffee stamp for coffee rationing and the removal of that stamp from the sugar book of a person under the prescribed age is a ration violation and is punishable by a severe penalty. Sugar ration books will be examined in the near future to ascertain if the coffee stamp, No. 27, has been removed from the books of those under 15 years of age.

Ellenville, Nov. 27 — Charles Palmer of Lackawack, died on Sunday, November 22 at the Medical Center, New York. Funeral services were held on Wednesday, November 25 at Wood & Lambert's Funeral Parlors. Burial was in Fantinekill cemetery.

Funeral services for Harriet Stockwell Waterman were held yesterday afternoon from the Salvation Army chapel on North Front street, with Adjutant Hoffman in charge. Bearers were: John, Chester, Edgar, Howard, Raymond and William Waterman, all sons of deceased. The remains were accompanied to the Shandaken Rural cemetery, where burial took place, by members of the Home League of the Salvation Army. At the grave, the services were in charge of Adjutant Hoffman and Miss Betty Hoffman sounded taps over the grave.

Calvin E. Lord, a retired machinist, of 84 Franklin street, died on Wednesday in the Kingston Hospital. Funeral services were held this afternoon in the parlors of A. Carr & Son, 1 Pearl street, with the Rev. William R. Peckham, pastor of the Clinton Avenue Methodist Church, officiating. Burial was in Maplewood Cemetery in South Jewett. Surviving are his wife, the former Miss Winifred Matthews; a son, Ralph M. Lord, of Tannersville, and a daughter, Mrs. Blanche E. Snyder of New York city.

Otis Holden died at the Benedictine Hospital Thursday after a short illness. He was born in Shandaken and came here about 24 years ago. He was a chauffeur for many years in this city driving for various firms. Besides his wife, he is survived by two brothers, Wilson of Arkville and Wesley of this city; also two sisters, Mrs. Uriah Gulneck of Newark, N. J., and Mrs. Philip Yerry of Poughkeepsie. Funeral will be held Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the James M. Murphy Funeral Home. Burial will be in Montrepose cemetery.

Ellenville, Nov. 27 — James Madison Wright, 88, died at his home in Cragsmoor on Thursday, November 19 after a brief illness. He was born at Cragsmoor, October 7, 1854, the son of James J., and Elizabeth Baker Wright. He married Jennie Mayer in New York in 1882. She died in 1918. Surviving are one son, James H. Wright of Walden; three daughters, Elizabeth and Georgia Wright and Estelle Boonton, all at home and several nieces and nephews. Funeral services were held at the Pulling Funeral Home on Sunday, November 22, the Rev. Donald H. Spencer officiating. Burial was in Fantinekill cemetery.

New Paltz, Nov. 27 — Dennis Williams, aged 84 years, died Tuesday, November 24, at his home on North Front street, New Paltz. He was born and lived most of his life in New Paltz. He is survived by his wife, Annie Ackert Williams; two sons, Frank D. Williams, at home, and Herbert Williams of Springfield, Mass.; three daughters, Clara Williams and Mrs. Howard Martin of Maplewood, N. J., and Mrs. George Bruyn of Long Eddy, N. Y., a granddaughter, Mrs. Stockholm Baldwin of Highland, a grandson, Raymond Bruyn of Middletown, and several other grandchildren and great grandchildren. Funeral services were held today with burial in the New Paltz Rural cemetery.

Miss Carrie M. Russell, daughter of the late William and Mary Russell of Saugerties, died at the Bonesteel Sanitarium in that village on Tuesday evening after a brief illness. Miss Russell is survived by a sister, Miss Alida Russell of Rutherford, N. J., and two brothers, DeWitt Russell of Bridgeport, Conn., and Elbert Russell of Buffalo. Miss Russell was an active member of the Baptist Church for many years and had taught a Sunday school class in the church for a number of years. Miss Russell possessed generous qualities of heart and disposition and had a large number of friends who esteemed her highly. Funeral services were held this afternoon with burial in Mountain View cemetery.

Dr. Maude Hinman Patterson, wife of Dr. A. A. Patterson, died in her home, 905 Lafayette street, Flint, Mich., on Thursday. She was a daughter of the late Frank and Kate Terpening Hinman, and was born in Port Ewen on January 11, 1876. After completing her school education here she entered Ann Harbor Medical College where she met Dr. Patterson. Later they were married and took up their residence in Flint where the husband began the practice of medicine. Dr. Maude Patterson did not practice her medical profession. They resided in Flint for 35 years and for the past six years they resided in Port Ewen, when Dr. A. A. Patterson retired from active practice. Several month ago, due to the serious illness of his wife, Dr. Patterson and his wife removed to Flint where they had since resided. Funeral services will be held in Flint on Saturday afternoon.

Ellenville, Nov. 27 — Funeral services were held Friday, November 20 at the Pulling Funeral Home, for Dr. Clarence D. Vrooman, who died at the Veterans' Memorial Hospital on Tuesday, November 17. Dr. Vrooman was born at Athens, February 13, 1860, a son of David Demarey Vrooman and Margaret Whitaker Vrooman. One brother, Franklin Egbert Vrooman of Philadelphia, survives him. On February 21, 1897, Dr. Vrooman married Miss Millie Keator of Kingston, who died in 1926. There were two children, one of whom died in infancy. Another son, Clarence Earle Vrooman, survives, and lives in New York. His second wife is the former Margaret Talmadge of Oyster Bay. They were married January 21, 1932. Others surviving Dr. Vrooman include: four nieces and one nephew. The Rev. Lloyd W. Bell, pastor of the Reformed Church, officiated at the services and the medical staff of the hospital and other physicians acted as bearers and honorary bearers. The hospital nursing staff attended in a body.

Mrs. Burt R. Whitaker, the former Carrie Carnright, a much respected resident of Saugerties, died at the Bonesteel Sanitarium in that village Tuesday evening after a long illness. She was a daughter of the late George E., and Charlotte Dibble Carnright. Two daughters, Mrs. Percy M. Abeel and Mrs. Norman Cole of Saugerties; a grandson, Lieutenant David Abeel, U. S. A., Camp Robinson, Arkansas; a granddaughter, Mrs. William Melville, of Kingston; two sisters, Mrs. Hattie Davis of Kingston and Mrs. John L. Myer of Saugerties; also four brothers, all of Saugerties, are the surviving family. Mrs. Whitaker had been a long and patient sufferer for many years. She was a member of the Methodist Church and Ladies' Aid Society for several years. She was also a member of Queen Ulster Rebekah Lodge, No. 34, and Imperial Council, No. 16, D. of A. Mrs. Whitaker had a wide circle of friends who held her in high esteem. The funeral will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Cole, Main street, Saugerties, Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, the Rev. Thomas Falshaw of the Methodist Church officiating. Interment will be made in Trinity cemetery.

DIED

HOLDEN—In this city, Thursday, November 26, 1942, Otis, beloved husband of Edith Sheeley Holden and brother of Wilson and Wesley Holden, Mrs. Uriah Gulneck and Mrs. Philip Yerry.

Poletti Might Be 1946 Candidate

Lehman's Resignation Puts Spotlight on Poletti With 'Comeback' Hope

By WILLIAM W. TYLER

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 27 (AP)—Governor Lehman's resignation four weeks before expiration of his term spotlights Lieut. Governor Charles Poletti, on whom some Democrats already look as their "comeback" hope for 1946.

His potentialities as gubernatorial candidate four years hence received plenty of mention after leaders recovered from their November 3 disappointment—the election of Republican Thomas E. Dewey as governor.

Supporters of Poletti forecast a brightening of his political star, despite his defeat by Thomas W. Wallace.

Poletti was a candidate for re-election on both the Democratic and the American Labor Party tickets. Although defeated he ran far ahead of John J. Bennett, candidate for governor on the Democratic voting line, and well in front of Dean Alfange, American Labor Party gubernatorial nominee, under the A.L.P. label.

In addition he carried New York city over Wallace by more than 600,000 votes, which normally is sufficient to elect a Democratic governor.

With the defection of A.L.P. and some New Deal Democratic ballots an important, if not decisive factor in Bennett's defeat, backers of Poletti claim his hold on both could weld the elements necessary for a return to Democratic state control in 1947.

On top of these political factors, Governor Lehman's early entrance on his new job of directing foreign relief and rehabilitation drapes the gubernatorial mantle on Poletti, even though briefly, and gives him the prestige of actually occupying the governorship.

He becomes the 46th governor and, unexpectedly, the last of a 20-year Democratic regime.

That can't hurt him when it comes time to talk nominations in 1946.

Governor Lehman, slated to quit the gubernatorial chair on or about December 3, is the fifth of New York's chief executives to resign but the first since Charles Evans Hughes bowed out of Albany to become a United States Supreme Court justice in 1910.

Previous resignation freed Grover Cleveland for the presidency in 1885, Martin Van Buren to become United States Secretary of State in 1829, and Daniel D. Tompkins to campaign successfully in 1817 for vice president.

Lehman's decision raised the question of who receives the governor's resignation and started a quick search of the law by his counsel.

The law, it develops, provides this his resignation go to both houses of the legislature but, since legislators do not convene until January, he files it meanwhile with the secretary of state.

Impending departure of the Lehmans has other interesting ramifications.

Ordinarily elevation of Poletti to the governorship would make Joe R. Hanley, Republican majority leader of the Senate, acting lieutenant governor. But since Hanley is vacationing at Hot Springs, Ark., where he plans to remain until late December, the honor passes to Oswald D. Heck, of Schenectady, Republican speaker of the Assembly.

Thus Heck temporarily will fill the office which Wallace, his fellow townsman and friend, takes over permanently January 1.

The situation also gives Democrats a crumb of comfort, of which the waggish are taking full advantage.

"Well, anyway, Tom Dewey won't be the next governor," they are chuckling ruefully.

Another Case Is Brought to Trial This Morning

A negligence action brought by Thomas Taylor and another against Samuel R. Palmer, which was started in Supreme Court Wednesday, to recover for damages caused by a collision near the Pine Bush cemetery at Accord, was settled. Taylor claimed damages to his car when it struck the Palmer car which was turning in at the cemetery gate. Mr. and Mrs. Taylor reside in Kingston and Palmer lives in Ellenville.

This morning another negligence action arising out of an automobile accident was taken up for trial. Angelo Riozzi and his son Anthony Riozzi bring an action against Madeline Comstock and her husband, to recover damages for injuries which Anthony suffered when struck by the Comstock car, driven by Dr. Comstock, near the Saugerties school on October 3, 1940. The boy, about 13 years old, had come from school when he was struck by the car registered in the name of Mrs. Comstock and driven by her husband. James H. Dyer appears as attorney of record for plaintiff and Judge A. J. Cook appears as trial counsel for Herbert F. Hastings, Jr., attorney of record for the defendants.

New York, Nov. 27 (AP)—Wall streeters returned from their holiday festivities with about the same market opinions as they had before and the result was that today's stock buying continued on a selective basis.

Although peace favorites continued to attract mild demand as the battle front news remained encouraging, selling in the war group never was urgent and the opinion was expressed that perhaps there had been a little too much liquidating emphasis placed on the latter recently. Tax offerings still were a restraining influence.

Dealings were slow and price changes negligible from the start but plus marks had a shade the best of it near the fourth hour.

Bonds and commodities were narrow.

Stocks tilting forward included J. I. 'Bully Beef' Pilots Are Among Most Daring Over New Guinea Battle Areas

By MURLIN SPENCER

Somewhere in New Guinea, Nov. 26 (Delayed) (AP) — The Americans call it "bully beef express."

But there's a note of respect when they use that name for one of all the fliers who ride the skies over embattled New Guinea, the pilots of "the bully beef express" are among the most daring, the most skillful and the hardest working.

Unarmed, except for the .45 calibre automatics, which the pilots carry, and virtually cold meat for any enemy plane, these Douglas and Lockheed army transports sweep in and out over enemy territory to land within a few miles of the Japanese lines to deliver their cargoes and pull away again.

I have seen them fly directly over a Japanese anti-aircraft gun position so low that the Japanese could not fire their anti-aircraft batteries but did blaze away with machine-guns.

Unshaven pilots will stand beside the planes when they have landed and bellow for men to hurry and unload them so they can get going before some Zero should happen by.

They carry soldiers, natives, ammunition and what-not. They land in fields even the early-day barnstormers would have shunned.

The pilots are all members of the army transport service. They don't go out in combat against enemy planes but they fight the weather, towering mountains and cloud banks that build up to 20,000 feet to deliver their cargoes.

American troops now fighting the battle of Buna owe a great deal to these pilots, for they've delivered them ammunition for their guns and food for their stomachs.

Who are these pilots of "the bully beef express?"

They're men like Lieut. J. M. Rodgers of Birmingham, Ala., and Lieut. W. D. Wells of Ovid, N. Y., and not long ago a high school coach at Jeffersonville, Ohio.

There are also men like Master Sergeant Michael Kullich of Harrisburg, Pa., who helped keep the planes going despite the rough treatment the transports received.

The first time I really saw the transports in action I was sitting on a sandy beach barely a mile away from the Japanese positions on Cape Endaiadere, an enemy strong point.

Inland a short distance, near a landing strip, was a Japanese anti-aircraft gun.

Over the trees from the west came a big transport. It seemed to fly directly over ack-ack positions, continued on out to sea a short way and came back. It repeated the operation several times but it was too low for the ack-ack guns to go into action.

"The fool! Doesn't he know there is an ack-ack gun there?" One of the spectators asked. The pilot undoubtedly knew but he took a chance while he dropped his supplies to the troops below.

In another case a transport pilot set down on the field, unloaded his plane and took off. Two minutes later Zeros appeared and machine-gunned the area, but the transport got away.

Other transport pilots have landed on wet fields bordered by jungle, found the ground too soft and skidded into trees. But the planes were patched up and flown out.

They lose aircraft once in a while, just as in the other aerial services. Within the last week a transport plane took off from a field on the north side of New Guinea, ran into a flight of Zeros and was shot down.

But "The Bully Beef Express" continues to operate as one of the most daring, skillful and important transport lines in the world.

Eugene Slagle Saved By Faithful Collie

Somerset, Pa., Nov. 27 (AP) — Three-year-old Kenneth Eugene Slagle, Jr., wandered three miles from his home in the freezing cold of the Allegheny mountains yesterday—but his faithful collie dog saw to it that no harm befell him.

After state police and six volunteer fire companies searched for the boy six hours, he was found safe in a farm field.

Fireman Thomas Bowman said the dog had dug a hole in the ground in which its little master could lie, safe from the cold wind. There Bowman found the boy and dog, snuggled happily against each other.

Anderson Stars as Recs Trim Jewels; Middies Win Grid Title

Last Five-Minute Rally Wins Game For Kingston Team

Anderson Registers 12 Points; Paris High in Contest With 13; Shaback Missing

The veteran of many professional basketball games, Hagen Anderson again proved to Kingston court fans that he's the difference of victory or defeat for the Recreation basketball club. Last night at the municipal auditorium it was Anderson again who sparked the team to a close 39 to 32 triumph over the New York Jewels of the American League. It was Kingston's second straight decision and Anderson's second straight role as the Mr. Big.

Playing an important role in his guard position, Anderson not only continued his great aggressive play on the defense but also was the shooting star for the Recs with 12 points, 10 coming from deuces. Ace Goldstein followed Andy with 10. "Red" Paris of the Jewels was high scorer in the contest with 13 markers.

Harlem Next Wednesday

The outstanding Harlem Yankees will be the attraction at the Broadway boards next Wednesday night. Basketball fans might remember the Yankees when they appeared here last year and a near riot nearly ensued before more calm minds moved in to settle the dispute. Fans also are requested to keep in mind Wednesday, December 9, when the West Point Field Artillery basketballers will play the Recs in a special U.S.O. benefit game.

Last night's victory for Kingston came in the last five minutes of the fracas with Hagen Anderson playing the big part in the drive. With the score knotted twice during the third and final stanza, 26-26 and 31-31, Jim Naughton, ace Kingston forward, dropped in a layup. After that the Recs dominated the play and began to move away from the Jewels in rather easy style. Howie Bollerman drilled in two fouls and Anderson soared one from half way out. Ace Goldstein finished the scoring with two more fouls.

Kingston went to town in the first session and finished on the long end of a 17 to 14 score. Anderson and Naughton were the big guns for Kingston with some fine shooting and excellent floor play. Mac Kinsbrunner and Peters highlighted the Jewels' drive.

The Jewels started to creep up on the Recreations in the second period when Paris got going. He tossed in a pair of two-pointers and three foul shots. Kinsbrunner converted a foul reducing Kingston's lead to 23-22. Paris' foul shots made it 24-23 for New York. Anderson and Paris scored again before the final quarter ended with the Jewels out in front by 26 to 25.

Tempers Flare

Kingston forged to a 31 to 27 lead in the early part of the final quarter when things began to get a little hot between Herb Gershon and Paris. However, the Recs continued to peck away and after the Jewels had tied it at 31 all, the local cagers proved to be the top team with a scoring attack of their own. Hagen Anderson stepped in to guard Paris when he and Gershon started to mix it up. Anderson's presence had more value than Gershon and it wasn't long before the redhead bounced back into the backseat.

Kingston gained last night's triumph without the services of Nick Shaback, high scoring forward who was unable to get to Kingston. Gershon, usually a tough scorer to contend with, was "off" last night. Perhaps he missed his other half of the combination.

• BOWLING NEWS •

Emerick's Ladies' Jottings

The best of luck is extended to Jack Martin in his new venture of running the well-known Homer Emerick's Recreation bowling alleys. However, it isn't going to be all luck for Jack, but as he realizes, a great amount of hard work. Jack seems capable of it as was seen by the new attractive alley placards that designated the name of the team that was to bowl on each alley for the Emerick's Ladies' League Tuesday night. . . . The national headquarters of the Women's International Bowling Association has asked each city association to raise the sum of $1.50 per member to buy a bomber for Uncle Sam. In accordance with the National W. I. B. C. the local league has decided to follow the plan of other cities and for Tuesday, December 2, for the seventh frame in each of the three games rolled on that night, the bowler will be penalized five cents for each pin that remains standing after the first roll of that frame has been rolled for each of the bowler's three games. This idea is in the memory of the anniversary of December 7 when Pearl Harbor was raided by the treacherous little men of Togo. The plan is to buy a bomber and help to make those Nips even smaller.

Now for some interesting notes of the matches Tuesday night . . Nan Brodhead of Williams Lake had a nifty 210 single and wound up with a 470 series. Nice bowling, Nan. Evelyn Provenzano had a 494 high series for Williams Lake, who swept three games from Schwenks. The winners posted a 2134 series . . . A. Markle rolled 436 and a 156 solo. The Mayorettes really clicked Tuesday night as they took two games from Becks. Reta Frederick, who has been experiencing a little tough luck all season, finally did herself honor by slamming out a neat 203 single and a 532. Nice bowling, Reta, and that congratulation comes from this sports department . . . After a three-weeks' vacation in California, Evelyn Jones returned to action Tuesday and proceeded to convert the 5-8-10. Captain Chris Wilson of Becks made the 2-5-8-7 and also posted 160 and a 458 series. Adelaide Ashley converted the 6-10 split . . . Elstons took two from the league-leading Alpines as Cora Emerick rolled 195 and 482. Kay Williams made the 4-5-9-7 and Marg Williams the 5-10. Elstons have started to move so other teams in the league had better be on the alert for a sudden break into the top position by this club. For Rudie's Alpines, Dot Flemming had 489 and Mary Myers 183. Etta Ginder seems to have a new kick-back ball. They never count in the scores, do they Etta? . . . The Minasians took two from Reinas as Elsa Relyea had a 425 including the 2-5-9-6 split and a foul. V. Carpenelli made the 2-3-5-10. B. Hyatt had the 2-5-10 and Martha Minasian a 159 high single. Alyce Riseley for Reinas made the 5-8-10 and 5-7.

Ertels took two from Standards as Mary Callahan had high series and Gert Ertel had a 134 high single for the winners. Rose Chamberland's 144 and 420 all for the losers took honors. Phelan & Cahill captured two from the Kingston Coal. Phil Gehringer had a neat 172 single and 439 triple for the winners. C. Brennan had 385 series as J. Ward rolled 166 high single.

Friend Becomes Foe

East Lansing, Mich. (AP)—The tables will be turned when Chet Aubuchon returns to the campus this winter. Chet, who won national recognition in basketball here as a junior, has joined the Navy and is headed for a berth on the Great Lakes Naval Training Station team. The Bluejackets will play two games with Michigan State College this winter, so it will be up to the Spartans to stop their former captain. Last winter, Aubuchon was one of the main reasons for State slipping a 33-31 defeat to the sailors.

Gas Masks Worn

Chanute Field, Ill. (AP)—Basketball players with gas masks! It really happened here recently in a pair of exhibition games at the Post. The masks were worn to add interest to the inter-squadron cage program and to emphasize the over-all scope of the chemical warfare training program at the field. Officials of the game were exempt only because no one could figure out a way for them to blow whistles while encased in the headgears.

Texas Longhorns to Play In Dallas Cotton Bowl

Bruce Smith Scores 23 Points as Great Lakes Rout Northwestern by 48-0 Score

By HAROLD CLAASSEN

New York, Nov. 27 (AP)—Athletic directors and football coaches, whose players have received all the bumps and bruises while building glittering records, will get the pushing and shoving themselves this week as bowl promotors seek January 1 combatants.

Only on the campus of Texas University will everything be serene. The Longhorn players voted to compete in the Cotton Bowl yesterday even before taking their showers after polishing off Texas A. & M., 12 to 6, on a touchdown by Jackie Fields just 46 seconds before the game's end.

But at Tulsa University the athletes hurried right out after their 40 to 7 victory over Arkansas—their tenth of the year without a tie or defeat—to post markers which would direct the mailman, telegraph messenger or personal bowl emissary to the home of Coach Henry Frnka.

Duke Is Ousted

They were hopeful of staging a bowl promoters convention at William & Mary College, too, the Indians downing Richmond yesterday, 10 to 0, to replace Duke as the Southern Conference champion.

Of course, much of the actual bowl business must be delayed until after Saturday's games in which unbeaten Georgia Tech has an important engagement with Georgia and all-winning Boston College mixes with a Holy Cross eleven that doesn't believe the Eagles have been voted the best team in the country.

That doesn't include Saturday's meeting between Army and Navy which annually would fill the largest bowl but this year has been cut down to finger-bowl size by President Roosevelt's orders.

Texas' faculty still must approve the school's participation in the Dallas Bowl but the Southwest Conference champions in the past have had no difficulty getting such permission and none is expected this year.

No announcement was made of a possible Longhorn opponent although Missouri, which yesterday trimmed Kansas, 42 to 13, to retain the Big Six title, Tennessee, Alabama and possibly Georgia have been mentioned.

One of the latter trio also might furnish the opposition for Boston College in the Sugar Bowl. The Eagles haven't been formally announced as New Orleans visitors during the holiday season but have been linked with the game since early this month.

Tulsa is another Sugar Bowl possibility and along with William & Mary and Penn State also has received unofficial consideration for the Miami Orange Bowl affair.

Georgia Tech, if it downs Georgia Saturday, is supposed to have the inside track to the Rose Bowl, where the host team may not be decided until December 12. However, if Washington State downs Washington Saturday it will take a lot of blocking and tackling to remove the Cougars from the front rank.

In other games yesterday Louisiana State spurted in the final period for an 18 to 6 verdict over Tulane; Virginia Polytech won its first game in five years from Virginia Military, 20 to 6; and Penn walloped Cornell, 34 to 7.

Sailors Rout Wildcats

The Great Lakes Sailors, unscored upon since October 24, officially closed Northwestern's season, 48 to 0, with Bruce Smith, once of Minnesota, getting 23 points, and Colgate ruined Brown's appetite for the elventh straight year, 13 to 0.

Out in the Rocky mountain sector Colorado moved alongside Utah on the Big Seven throne by downing Denver, 31 to 6, for its fifth loop win. The Utes stepped outside their own circuit for a 13 to 6 verdict over Idaho.

Blue Lightning

Durham, N. C. (AP)—The Blue Devils of Duke University claimed the fastest back in action this season. He is Moffat Storer, who has dashed 100 yards in 9.6 seconds.

Army '11' Arrives In Annapolis for Classic Saturday

Navy Coach Doesn't See Much Chance for His Club; 15,000 Fans to See Game

By Sid Feder

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 27 (AP)—Army comes to town today for the football game with Navy tomorrow, and the local folks are going to discover that the cadets are human after all.

This no doubt may come as a surprise, inasmuch as some of the boys hereabouts have been building this Army team up into almost a myth, with a running attack like a set of tanks, a line like so many trench mortars and an aerial offense no weaker than a formation of flying fortresses.

And the Navy coaches haven't knocked down the impression to any extent, either, as they readied their middle gridders for the first service scramble in the Naval Academy's backyard since the gay nineties.

This is the tussle President Roosevelt shifted to Tiny Thompson Stadium from Philadelphia's Mammoth 100,000-seat municipal soupbowl because of war-time transportation difficulties. The Navy estimates no more than 15,000 cash customers will be on hand for the vestpocket edition of the usual super-duper.

Navy Head Coach Billick Welchel comes right out in meeting to report that his fellows are "completely outclassed" and don't have much chance against the cadet steamroller.

Others of the coaching staff come close to being wide-eyed when they tell you about Army's grinding ground game.

Yet, the Middies, themselves winding up their drill-work yesterday in a "semi" secret practice that reporters were permitted to watch until they started to practice, were so full of zip and zing they don't look as if they'd even heard of Army.

At least, they realize they're tangling with just 11 other football players, despite the fact Army was pretty close to 1 to 3 favorite in the betting to win its first service shindig since 1938.

Army won't feel too much out of place during the 24 hours or so it must spend in this traditionally sailor section. Navy invited the cadets to share the academy but Coach Earl Blaik figured his boys would feel more at home with soldier surroundings, so they'll park at Fort Meade, about 15 miles down the road.

Middletown Downs Port Jervis High; Maroons Lose, 6-0

Port Is Beaten, 14 to 12 in Season's Final; Santorine Scores T.D. in Newburgh Win

The drooping and very battered curtain of Kingston High School's football schedule was finally brought down Thursday afternoon in Newburgh when the local gridders suffered another loss but in doing so played their best game of the current season. The Goldbacks of N. F. A. scored a touchdown early in the first period and then held on to a slim 6 to 0 lead for the rest of the contest.

Meanwhile, Middletown again captured the DUSO League gridiron title by defeating Port Jervis by 14 to 12. A crowd of 4,000 saw the Middies grab the title again.

Although it was Turkey Day yesterday Newburgh's vaunted Goldbacks thought they would have "chicken" when Kingston trotted on the field but the gallant stands displayed by the Maroons won them a moral victory in the closing contest of the 1942 season which already had been declared one of the poorest in many a moon.

"Sonny" Santorine, the No. 1 backfield ace for Coach Bill Elder's Newburgh Free Academy team, scored the only touchdown in the opening period. After that both teams tried desperately to push over scores but had to be content with the early period touchdown. The final period was a kicking duel between Captain and "Jiggs" McLaughlin of the Maroons and Santorine of Newburgh.

In the first period Johnny Welch intercepted a Kingston pass and landed on the Maroon's 37 where Newburgh immediately set up a scoring attack. Santorine hit the line and picked up about seven yards to the 30. Tony Maserino again tore at the center of the line and gained to the 28. Santorine then took the ball on a half delayed buck through the line, sliced his stride to the side and raced 28 yards for a touchdown. The extra point try was missed.

In the second period Newburgh blasted its way to Kingston's five but a holding penalty bottled up that rally. On the kick-off in the second half, Newburgh recovered a Maroon fumble on the 20 but Coach Ted Conwicke's surprising line failed to yield any ground and another expected rally went to the winds.

Newburgh's victory enabled them to gain second place in the final standing of the DUSO League.

The standings follow:

	W	L	Pct.
Middletown	3	0	1.000
Newburgh	2	1	.667
Port Jervis	1	2	.333
Kingston	0	3	.000

War Renews Rivalry

Great Lakes, Ill. (AP)—The Great Lakes Naval Training Station football team will meet a rival of World War 1 days when the Bluejackets oppose Notre Dame on Chicago's Soldier Field, December 5. The 1918 game ended in a 7-7 tie.

70 WOULD ADOPT PAIR

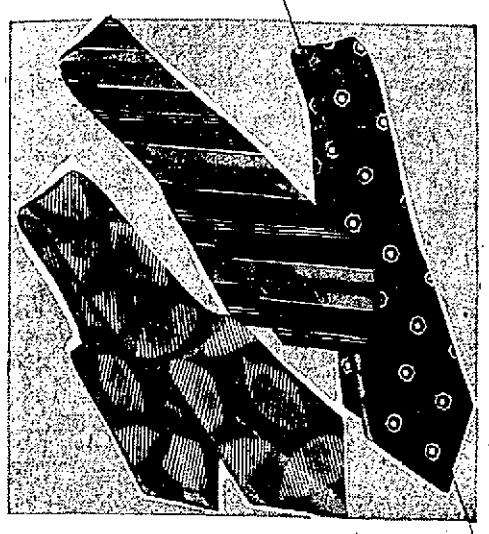

Peter, 10, and Kenneth, 8, have a home near London today after having had opportunity to select from 70 domiciles when the motherless lads lost their father. The rush of volunteers to adopt the lads came with announcement to British post office employes that their father, a post office worker, had been fatally wounded while driving a supply truck in Libya and had left the boys homeless.

Washington's Nats and the Philadelphia Athletics may have finished seventh and eighth in the American League this past season but every other club in the circuit will testify the Nats and A's were tough outfits when it came to winning the close ones.

Between them, these clubs won a total of 53 games by a single run with Washington winning 24 and losing 21 and the Athletics winning 29 and losing 26. Their record in games won by a single marker was surpassed in 1942 only by Cleveland and Boston, each with 30 one-run victories. Cleveland lost 18 and Boston lost 23.

The batting averages of Washington hitters took a sharp upward swing September 19 and 20 as a result of a two-day hitting feast at the expense of Philadelphia pitchers. The Nats, on those two days, took two games from the Athletics—by identical scores of 11-9—and in the contests made a total of 29 hits.

Joe Di Maggio of the New York Yankees didn't make five hits in one game throughout the 1942 American League season, yet he had two of the biggest days any batter had all season in the total bases department. On Aprill 22 Jolting Joe had a homer and two triples in four trips to the plate and on May 5 he hit for 11 total bases on two home runs and a triple in five appearances.

Boston's Ted Williams and New York's Joe Di Maggio, two of the American League's greatest hitters, continue to stage a fine duel in the runs-batted-in department. Williams' 137 this past season gave him a total of 515 for the past four years as against Di Maggio's 501 total for the same period. Joe batted in 114 runs in 1942. Ted's first year in the majors was 1939, when he batted in 145 runs as against Joe's 129. Di Maggio, 1940, outdid Ted 133 to 113, and edged him out in this department in 1941, driving in 125 runs to Ted's 120.

Biggest single scoring inning of the 1942 season was hung up by the New York Yankees on September 7 against Philadelphia. The Yanks made 10 runs in the sixth inning as they downed the Athletics 11 to 2.

Strikeout performances by American League hurlers in 1942 were under those of 1941, when the top fanning job was turned in by little Tommy Bridges of Detroit as he whiffed 14 Philadelphia batters in 7 2/3 innings on June 10. This past season Oscar Judd, Boston, Buck Newsom, then of Washington, Hal Newhouser of Detroit and Hank Borowy of New York each turned in 10 strikeouts in one game.

Buddy Hassett, first baseman acquired by the New York Yankees a year ago from Boston of the National League, enjoyed a boom year—comparatively at least—in home runs this past season, when he made five for the Yankees. In his previous six years in the majors he had made only seven, his best homer year before 1942 being his first year in the majors, when he hit three for Brooklyn.

The St. Louis Browns encountered the "82 jinx" again this past season, when the club scored that number of victories to equal the marks set by the Browns of 1925 and 1928, when the club finished in the same spot as it did this past season, third place. Only two other St. Louis Browns teams ever finished with more wins for a season—the 1908 fourth place team winning 83 and the 1922 second-placers winning 93.

Joe Di Maggio of the New York Yankees couldn't get past number "13" this past American League season in his drive to equal or better his best previous three-base hit total of 15, which he made in his first year in the majors, 1936, and equalled in 1937. The Yankee belter had his 13th triple with almost a month of the 1942 season to go, but couldn't get another. The league record is 26, set by Joe Jackson in 1912 and equalled two years later by Sam Crawford.

Leading the American League in batting for the 1941 and 1942 season, Ted Williams of Boston's Red Sox hit the average figure for American League batting champions "on the head." In 1941 Ted won the title with a .406 average, 25 points above the average for the winners of this crown since the league's first season, 1901. This past season his winning .356 average was 25 points below the average winning performance.

High Hoop Scoring

East Lansing, Mich. (AP)—Speaking of basketball, Michigan State College scoring hit an all-time high last year. The Spartans piled up 833 points, 108 points more than any other season on record. Opponents rolled up 721 points, which was 129 more than the Spartans' defense had ever before yielded.

Savold Underdog Tonight in Bout With Jimmy Bivins

Lee Will Have Weight Advantage of About 16 Pounds; Fight in Garden Ring

New York, Nov. 27 (AP)—Lee Savold, whose left hook broke the noses of Billy Conn, Lou Nova and Tami Mauriello, is the 2 to 1 underdog tonight in the 10-round bout at Madison Square Garden in which Jimmy Bivins of Cleveland makes his eastern debut.

Bivins, who lets his opponents decide whether the bout will be a boxing or a slugging match, has been fighting since he was a flyweight and now scales a pound or two over the light-heavyweight limit.

His best weapon is said to be a left hook, potent enough to have floored Bob Pastor, Gus Lesnevich, Mauriello and Billy Soose. In addition, he is rated above the average in body punching.

Savold will have a weight pull of approximately 16 pounds and will be making his first New York appearance since losing to Mauriello on Oct. 30. Tami was to have met Bivins tonight but his Savold-broken nose still hasn't healed.

Savold, a former Iowan who now calls Paterson, N. J., his home, knocked out Jimmy Kapovich in Baltimore less than two weeks ago, and has been in training at Greenwood Lake, N. J. since then.

Tonight's winner is scheduled to be paired with the victor of the Dec. 11 bout between Nova, whom Savold defeated during the summer, and Mauriello. That fight tentatively is set for Jan. 8.

The Island of Sark

The English channel island of Sark is 22 miles off the French coast and 60 miles from England. It is over three miles long and a mile and a half wide, with 35 miles of coast, rocky and rough, backed by cliffs some of which rise 300 feet out of the sea, with many smugglers' caves. The upland is reached from the one cliff-walled harbor through a tunnel 450 feet long. The tide sometimes drops 42 feet, leaving the harbor dry. The shilling tax on the 25,000 annual visitors normally provided for government and public works, supplemented by a small land and liquor tax. The 40 farms provided for in the Elizabethan charter still pass from father to oldest son; they cannot be divided. The cottages of the farmers are of granite quarried on the island. They grow grain and vegetables and graze the famous Guernsey cattle, tethered to economize pasture. The fishing fleet is motorized.

In times of peace the bank was open one day a week. Parliament met in the school house, where English and modern French were taught.

How to cut the cost of Heating Your Home
BY John Barclay
AMERICA'S HOME HEATING EXPERT

Heating Domestic Hot Water

MANY heating plants have attachments for heating domestic hot water during the heating season. This is done by heat-exchangers. There are two types. Those that are installed inside the fire box or combustion chamber and those that are installed between the heating plant and the hot water storage tank.

For those installed inside the firebox, the correct location for the exchangers or hot water coil, as they are commonly known is above the fuel bed. It is not good practice to have the heat exchanger installed so that it protrudes into the fuel bed. Unfortunately this is a common installation — generally causing trouble in the form of spotty fires, clinkers and dirty firebed conditions. With the exchangers in contact with the red hot coals, over-heated water may result, with the possibility of scalding. Sometimes a water hammer or pounding is caused with such an installation. These are some of the most common annoyances traceable to this method of heating water. Another fault is a coil prevents a good firebed. It is impossible to work the fire around the coil. A heavy drain of water will chill the coal lying adjacent to the coil or exchanger, lowering its temperature below the ignition point, resulting in unignited, dead coal, waste fuel and general dissatisfaction. In time this will mean no hot water and a complaint of no heat in the living quarters. At other times, the coal lying adjacent to the exchanger will burn to an ash. This ash will not shake down as it adheres to the pipe and has to be disposed of by hand. This also will result in insufficient hot water and a chronic complaint of no heat in the living quarters.

In the case of the outside heat-exchanger that is located between the heating plant and the water storage tank, the only complaint one is liable to have is the lack of sufficient hot water. To remedy this complaint, it will only be necessary to take off the cover plate and clean out any sediment that has gathered around the heating coils. These must be kept clean at all times for best results.

For economic and trouble free heating of domestic hot water, install a modern tank heater. These up-to-date water heaters are vastly improved over the old fashioned "pot stoves." It is no longer necessary to build frequent fires and nurse the old "Bucket-a-Day" heater along. Today you can enjoy oceans of automatically heated water at a much lower cost than ever before. These heaters are dust tight, having incorporated the magazine principle of coal feed, automatic control of dampers greatly minimizing overheated and eliminating dirty water as well as consuming the cheaper priced coal, thus resulting in economical hot water. Most fuel merchants can acquaint you with the operation of these modern coal burning water heaters. It will pay you to investigate. (22)

America plunged back into the job of making hash of the Axis today after beating its lustiest drumstick tattoo on Thanksgiving.

Except for a brief interlude of religious observance and a heavier-than-usual dinner fare, yesterday was like many another for most Americans who kept the factories humming.

But the spirit of Thanksgiving wandered farther from its native land than ever before, spreading overseas to America's fighting men in far corners of the earth.

In England where London newspapers explained the significance of the holiday, thousands of British homes were opened to American soldiers. Roast pork instead of the traditional turkey was the main dish at overseas bases.

Special services were held for Americans in Westminster Abbey. Many Catholics observed Thanksgiving at Westminster Cathedral and the Jews at West End Synagogue.

President Roosevelt's proclamation giving thanks for "the greatest harvest in the history of our nation," was read in London by Ambassador Winant who added an expression of gratitude for recent victories.

There, the sick and wounded of both Britain and America received a touch of Thanksgiving—supplies of turkey donated to the hospitals by the United States army.

In Australia, too, the mess tables of our troops held plenty of turkey and the menus bore a message written by a chaplain, Capt. Gerald Scanlon of Boise, Idaho, offering thanks to "the Supreme Being and Father of all."

"We are grateful," it read, "for the rich heritage that is ours and the assurance that the spirit and motives which inspired the Pilgrim fathers are to be found in the fighting men of the United States forces wherever they may be."

On the home front, many war plant bulletin boards bore a greeting from Lieut. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, commander in chief of the expeditionary forces in North Africa.

"On this Thanksgiving Day," Eisenhower messaged, "let us thank God for the American industry—labor and management—which has given us the weapons and the equipment with which to conduct our North African campaign. More power to you."

The President, high officials of the government and of the army and navy, participated in prayer and song service in the White House. After the nationally broadcast services, Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt and a few guests sat down to a dinner of roast turkey.

Then the President and his staff went back to work on a full schedule of wartime activity.

America saw its first Thanksgiving Day of the war bring what probably was a new low in the number of fatal accidents for the holiday as uninterrupted production, gasoline rationing and the absence of many now in the armed services joined to reduce sharply the flow of traffic.

In contrast to past Thanksgiving celebrations, reports of death by violent means trickled in. Early today 80 persons had been reported killed, 30 in traffic, eight by trains and 42 in shootings, coal mine mishaps, fires and by drowning.

Sudden death came to 190 last Thanksgiving Day.

OLIVER KROM

Three sons of Peter Krom of Stony Hollow are in the service. They are Sidney Charles Krom, somewhere in England; Edward Roger Krom at Camp Breckenridge, Ky.; Oliver Albert Krom, somewhere in foreign service.

Lake Charles, La., Nov. 24.—The handclasp above was in order when Sergeant Herbert V. Darrow of Kingston, New York, learned that Private Louis A. Dibuono was a fellow Kiwanian from Hammond, La. Both men are stationed here at the Lake Charles Army Flying School and when Sergeant Darrow met Private Dibuono he proceeded, as a good Kiwanian, to give him some pointers on how to succeed in Army life. Sgt. Darrow is a graduate of Kingston High School and before his entry into the service he was with the Kingston Savings and Loan Association. He is he son of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert V. Darrow of 42 Josephine avenue, Kingston. The sergeant was a member of the finance committee of the Kingston Kiwanis Club.

LIEUT. C. VAN VALKENBURGH

Clifford Van Valkenburgh, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Van Valkenburgh of 126 Downs street, has been promoted to first lieutenant. He had been acting as battery commander before his promotion. Lieutenant Van Valkenburgh was graduated from Officer's Candidate School in August and is now stationed at Fort Bragg, N. C.

Two local boys enlisted November 16, at Fort Dix, N. J. They are, left to right, Pvt. Octave Perry, son of Mrs. Anna Perry of 129 Chambers street; and Pvt. Robert Mayr, son of Mrs. Elizabeth Mayr of 55 Newkirk avenue.

Two Arrests Are Made

Leonard Ferguson, 61, a negro of 15 Broadway, was given a suspended sentence when arraigned today before Judge Matthew V. Cahill in police court on a charge of public intoxication. He was arrested Wednesday afternoon at the Kingston Hospital where he was being treated for a cut over the left eye. According to the police he suffered the cut in a fall on the sidewalk. Harry Hutton, 48, of 4 West Union street, charged with public intoxication, was sentenced to two days in the county jail. As he had already served that time he was permitted to return home.

Resort Publicity For Ulster County Helps Business

quiries as to place to spend a vacation.

In all there were 331 direct inquiries made to the committee for information regarding boarding places; 152 telephone calls were received for information and three people asking about purchasing property in the county were referred to the Real Estate Board as a result of the publicity. Continuing, the report stated that the members of the committee desired to thank all who assisted in the work of making the season so successful. Merchants wrote the committee, reporting an increased business from boarding houses and it was estimated that at least 750 to 1,000 new people were brought to the county.

In conclusion, the committee recommended that for 1943, the appropriation be increased to $2,500 in order that a year around program of publicity might be carried out. The committee's report was received and filed and referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

The Committee on Highway Accounts reported claims of $49.76 and recommended they be paid. The second report of the Committee on Printing reported bills amounting to $13.04 to be in proper form and recommended they be paid.

It was moved that $50,000 be transferred from the balance in the Highway Fund, to the Snow Removal Fund for clearing the highways of snow this winter. This was referred to Committee on Appropriations.

Clerk Simpson asked that all returned school tax amounts be in and that unpaid water district taxes be in by December 1.

The board adopted the grand jury list and the board then recessed until Friday evening at 7:30 o'clock.

midwestern mayors, civic officials, and representatives of oil companies.

"There has been so much complaint, both from the mid-west people and mid-west congressmen against extension of gasoline rationing December 1 that the committee thought it best to hear both sides of the rationing issue," Chairman Truman (D.-Mo.) told reporters.

The President's order, announced last night, emphasized that the need for extending what Mr. Roosevelt preferred to call "mileage rationing" as a rubber conservation measure was becoming more acute daily.

"We must do everything within our power to see that the program starts December 1 because victory must not be delayed through failure to support our fighting forces," the President said in identical letters to Jeffers and Henderson.

The effect of the President's order was to reject pleas, mostly from members of Congress from oil-producing states, that rationing was unnecessary. They members last week formed an unofficial 15-man committee which recommended a 90-day delay.

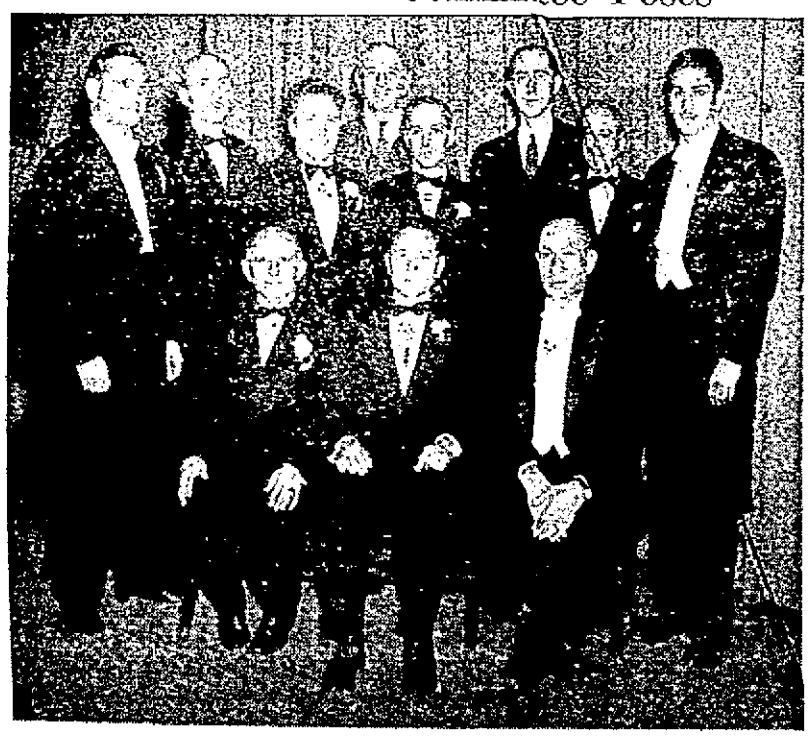

Their clamor led to resumption of hearings by a special sub-committee of the House interstate commerce committee studying the overall gasoline and rubber situation. Both Jeffers and Henderson, testifying at the hearings, declared nationwide rationing was necessary as a rubber conservation measure.

They repeated this contention in radio broadcasts last night in which they were joined by Undersecretary of War Robert Patterson and Rear Admiral Claude A. Jones, assistant chief of procurement and materials.

Evacuation of Japanese From Coast Discussed

Service Clubs Hear the Rev. John Thomas Tell First Hand of Jap Evacuation Here

In an illuminating talk before a joint luncheon-meeting of the Rotary, Kiwanis and Lions service clubs held Wednesday at the Governor Clinton, the Rev. John Thomas of the Department of Cities of the North Baptist Conference discussed the evacuation of the Japanese from the Pacific coast states.

President William O'Reilly of Rotary welcomed the service club members and guests.

The speaker, who was introduced by the Rev. Victor H. Kane of the Albany Avenue Baptist Church, outlined the manifold problems that confronted the authorities in the big task of evacuation. The members comprising the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the military authorities, whose task it was to remove some 120,000 Japanese, were highly praised by the Rev. Mr. Thomas for their thoroughness and humaneness.

Of this large number approximately 71,000 are United States citizens and reliable sources estimate that 75 per cent of these citizens were loyal.

The transferring of these people to desert lands and Indian reservations inland caused many hardships, which were beyond the control of the authorities. Taking with them only what they could carry, resulted in losses as high as 65 per cent of personal property. Exploitation was the cause of this huge percentage.

The usefulness of 8,000 of these loyal aliens was shown in the help given in harvesting crops in states, which at the time of evacuation put up a big howl against their centering there.

The problem of placing the loyal Japanese citizens into the network of our civilization was now being undertaken by the authorities. The determination between loyal and disloyal was made by the F.B.I. and the army and navy authorities. This work is being carried out with good results.

Colleges for the people are responding, he said, to the general satisfaction of all.

Many of the Japanese have embraced christianity.

If steps were not taken now with an eye to their future, these American citizens, who would not be accepted in any other country would be adrift. Shunted back and forth on a ship, it would be comparable to Nazi treatment of Jews.

In concluding his interesting message, he lauded the efforts of the authorities, who in the time of stress, was giving priority to the problems of a minority.

STEPS were made for convenience. They enable you to mount by easy stages. Small, regular deposits in your Savings Account are the easy steps to financial Independence. This bank is organized to help you save systematically.

Industrial Accidents Gain

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 27 (AP)—A 40 per cent jump in New York factory accidents the first half of 1942 over the same period last year is attributed to greatly increased employment in war plants. The State Labor Department, which discloses a 20 per cent gain in all industrial accidents, reports 51,122 compensated accidents this year, 10,000 more than from January to July, 1941.

More than 3,000 persons, mostly Mexicans and including many high-ranking government and political leaders, assembled in Mexico City to pay homage to Spain's last "Republican" President, Manuel Azana, on the second anniversary of his death.

Further Resolved, that such taxes and assessments, when collected, shall be paid to the supervisors of the several towns in the amounts as shown by this resolution, for distribution by them in the manner prescribed by law.

In the above items Item 2 is for bridges, Item 3 for machinery, Item 4 for miscellaneous such as snow removal and town superintendents' salary, all of the above three items being Highway Fund accounts.

Hens' Output Increases

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 27 (AP)—New York hens' war effort: Increasing egg production approximately three and a half per cent the first 10 months of 1942 the same 1941 period and jumped their October output nearly 10 per cent over October last year. During the month 11,753,000 hens laid 113,000,000 eggs compared with 103,000,000 eggs laid by 10,808,000 biddies in October, 1941, the State Agricultural Statistical Service reports.

Because so many men are busy and transportation is reduced during the war, Circuit Courts in Eire have dispensed with juries in civil cases and reduced the number of jurors in criminal cases from 12 to seven.

More Volunteers Sought By 'Spotters' Service

One thousand five hundred men and women volunteer "spotters" scattered throughout Ulster county laid greater emphasis on their duties to the Aircraft Warning Service of the First Fighter Command than on Thanksgiving dinners.

The only disruption in terms of time took place in their immediate homes where dinner appointments and receptions had to be arranged to suit the convenience of members of families who were on "spotter" service, but the logs in the 18 observation posts in Ulster county show a schedule kept intact by the men and women volunteer observers.

Ulster's skylanes have been unusually active in recent weeks. "Spotters" were kept continually busy reporting planes in flight crossing their observation posts which called for a greater degree of alertness since the filter board located at "address unknown" expects the "spotters" report on planes crossing his post.

Based on this report, the filter board will immediately know if an "unscheduled plane" is in the air and its exact location. Within three minutes, powerful interceptor planes will crowd the "marauder" to a landing, as has already been the case recently, in which an unauthorized aerial photographer was involved.

The wee hours of the "spotters" shift are filled with thrills and mingled with uncertainties and suspense. It is then that he can "hear" but not "see". He knows that anything "may happen" and therefore feels his responsibility keener.

Men in search of moments filled with tenseness are invited to join the "spotter" service of the First Fighter Command and choose the "wee-hours" shift. Men and women willing to give two hours a week to serve their county in the "first line" of home defense, are asked to contact their local civilian defense office and ask for a "spotter" job or write to P. O. Box 58 in Kingston.

November Rainfall Heavy

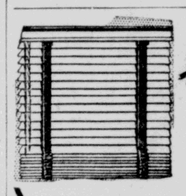

Rain that started falling Monday night and continued almost uninterruptedly through until Wednesday caused a precipitation of 2.31 inches in Kingston, according to the city engineer's records. There was also a trace of rain in the city on Thanksgiving Day when there were two brief showers. The total rainfall so far this month as recorded by the rain gauge on the roof of the city hall was 4.12 inches. Thursday was cloudy all day, with a brief shower of rain in the morning and another during the early evening. Temperatures on the holiday ranged from 46 to 52 degrees.

High Falls Woman Wins Handicraft Award

New York, Nov. 27 (Special)—Mrs. John Ham of High Falls was named here Wednesday as winner of a second prize in the quilting division at the annual Women's International Exposition of Arts and Industries current at Madison Square Garden.

Mrs. Ham's entry, a hand-quilted spread with a design of royal blue wreaths on a white background, was displayed with the entries of other exhibitors who had previously taken state prizes in a nationwide contest sponsored by Woman's Day Magazine.

The contest, which includes such handicrafts as weaving, knitting, embroidery and crocheting, was conducted to encourage the development of fine needlework in this country and of handiwork in the home.

Chance Telephone Call Saves Woman's Life

Bridgeport, Conn., Nov. 27 (AP)—Miss Geraldine Armfield, 30, is alive today because the number she dialed as illuminating gas overcame her was by chance the number of someone who knew what to do with her feeble call for help.

Made ill yesterday by gas leaking from a pilot light on her stove, Miss Armfield had strength enough left to reach the telephone and dial a number—any number. It turned out to be that of Miss Helen C. Gomperts, a switchboard operator at the Southern New England Telephone Company, who heard her call: "Help me, I'm sick."

Miss Gomperts learned her address and dispatched police to the house. They found Miss Armfield unconscious, but revived her.

Soviet Battle Is Clarified

Bitter Russian Fight Is Depicted, Using U. S. As Conflict Scene.

NEW YORK.—If the Battle of Russia, which to many Americans' ears may be registering only as a distant rumble of unpronounceable names of unfamiliar cities and rivers, were occurring on the same scale in America instead of the Soviet Union the vastness of the Russ-Nazi battleground would strike home more thoroughly.

Then Chicago would be in the place of Moscow, St. Louis substituted for Stalingrad, and the Ozarks seen as the Caucasus, according to the Russian War Relief, Inc., this city, the organization designated by the President's War Relief Control board to send medical supplies, drugs, concentrated food, clothing and other aid to our Russian allies.

How Dispatch Would Read.

Such a simplified dispatch would read:

CHICAGO.—The battle for St. Louis went into its sixth week today with renewed German attacks on a huge scale. New divisions of Gormans were reported to be assailing the American lines over thousands of their own dead.

No estimate of United States casualties was released, but defenders of the city were holding out with a heroism and sacrifice beyond description.

On the St. Louis battle hinges control of the Mississippi, America's last North-South transportation route. Some idea of the significance of this route may be obtained from the fact that two-thirds of America's oil has been carried on Mississippi barges since the loss of most of the territory east of the river.

If St. Louis falls, this artery will be severed. German strategy then probably will be to skirt the foothills of the Ozarks and drive ahead to the rich Oklahoma oil fields, major source of America's fuel supply. America would then be dependent on oil shipments from far-off Britain and Russia, with all the attendant shipping difficulties.

Medical Supplies Arriving.

The only bright spot for Americans in today's press were a report of arrival at San Francisco of a consignment of medical supplies and emergency food requirements, sent by American War Relief of Moscow, and news that U. S. troops have pushed back the Germans for several miles around Chicago, which has been besieged for nine months, somewhat relieving the city's position. American forces today stand in this desperate situation:

The United States has lost most of the Eastern states, with their great industrial plants—including three-fifths of the iron ore supply and half the pig iron production capacity, a large portion of the coal mining industry and many of the nation's largest tank, truck, plane and arms factories.

The Germans occupy one-third of the country's agricultural lands, containing 50,000,000 of the richest cultivated acres.

About 40 million people, caught in the swift German advance of last summer, are rebellious slaves of the invaders.

Forty Million Evacuated Westward.

Another 40 million were evacuated westward, along with industrial equipment, machinery, farm tools, and supplies—even including one whole blast furnace.

As a result of the migration, it is believed agricultural production this year will be sufficient to keep Americans fed through the coming winter, though on a lower level than formerly.

Despite such hardships, there is no sign that Americans have lost any of their determination to fight to victory. Two-thirds of the women in unoccupied America are working for the war effort as much as 12 and 13 hours a day—20 million of them in agriculture, 19 million in industry, and 11 million in the auxiliary army services.

Restoring Wounded to Action.

One of the amazing things about this war has been the record set by the American Army Medical services. Seventy per cent of the wounded have been restored to action, and the surgeon general expects this figure to rise above 80 per cent, only 1.5 per cent of the wounded have died.

The surgeon general warns, however, that this record can be kept up only if there is a steady stream of medical and surgical supplies from the outside world, for the vast number of casualties has drained reserves of these vital goods.

SOVIET SNIPER ON THE PROWL

This official Russian photograph is a close-up of Vassily Faronov (nearest soldier), Red Army sniper who is credited by Soviet sources with killing 136 Germans, taking seven prisoners and destroying an enemy tank. He saw action on the Volkhov front.

Cripple Can't Go to War So He Gives Army His Dog

PELHAM, N. Y.—Crippled by an infected hip as the result of a football injury two years ago, 21-year-old Robert Milan can't go to war, much as he wants to.

So he is doing the next best thing—sending a representative.

He has given his dog, Brian Boru, a handsome three-year-old setter named for the warrior king of Ireland, to Dogs for Defense, Inc., to be trained for army duty.

Asks That Women Should Stop Losing Their Gloves

Your gloves, handbag, your umbrella—and other accessories like these are not the most important items of your wardrobe but they deserve extra care these days. Clothing specialists suggest that the habit of losing gloves and umbrella is a good one for American women to break. Buy a glove-holder to attach to your pocketbook if you are inclined to lose your gloves, or sew a name tape on the inside seam.

Take a tip from the sales person and put your gloves on just as she tries them on you: Ease fingers on first; them thumb and palm. Turn rings so the settings are toward palm of your hand. The best way to take most gloves off is to loosen each fingertip, turn the cuff back over the fingers and draw the gloves off. Suede gloves are an exception; try to work them off easily without turning back the cuff or pulling the fingertips.

After you take off a pair of gloves, pull them gently into shape, blow into the fingers, and lay them in tissue paper in a flat box.

Don't let your gloves get too dirty before you clean them.

Watch for rips in your gloves and mend them promptly. Always use cotton thread in sewing leather. Silk thread will cut the leather and pull out.

Aussie's Record Amazes Officer

He weighed around 200 pounds and was "built accordin'," but that was not the reason the recruiting officer's eyes popped when the 27-year-old giant from "outback" offered himself for enlistment in the Australian imperial forces.

Quietly he told them he was a shearer, that he had shorn 20,000 sheep in ten months and that he would be ready to fight after he had completed a contract which would bring his season's tally to 25,000.

The officer was skeptical, but he told them that an official in the manpower office in New South Wales had been skeptical, too, until he had produced the proof.

"I'm not really fast," he said, "My best score for one day is 215 sheep, but my young brother Jack has a record of 250."

A shearing contractor who knew the modest young man said that in 30 years' experience he had not seen a man shear so evenly and steadily over a long period. It was a rare thing for a man to shear 20,000 sheep in one season.

Fewer Students Are Now Working Through College

"Among the changes in student life seen since Pearl Harbor is a decrease in the number of university girls working at outside jobs," says Helen M. Laughlin, dean of women on the Los Angeles campus of the University of California.

"Last semester 22.56 per cent of the women students, about one in five, were earning part of their maintenance. A third of these were working in excess of three hours a day outside, and slightly less than half of these were entirely self-supporting. In 1939 one in every four women students had some kind of outside job.

"The decrease in the number 'working their way' is primarily due to an improvement in family financial conditions. There are fewer applications for loans from the university: 155 last year compared with 245 the year before. However, the enrollment of women students is 900 below that of two years ago, largely due to demands for service in many businesses where jobs were formerly filled by men. In one neighborhood bank where the only women were three stenographers a short time ago, approximately 20 of the 35 employees are now women."

From the office of the dean of undergraduates, Dr. Earl J. Miller, a decrease also in the relative number of men students working outside was reported. Whereas last fall two-thirds of the men declared themselves in the ranks of earners, with one in every four entirely self supporting, the last figures show approximately but 57 per cent employed.

Repair Center Keeps Them Rolling

Eight farmers turned the old community blacksmith shop in Cuba, N. Y., into a farm machinery repair center. The result is that they are keeping their equipment in tip-top shape for food production, making it last longer, and helping the nation conserve metals needed for war industries.

The center, set up as a co-operative enterprise by the farmers with loans of $20 to each from the Farm Security administration, is equipped with a second-hand acetylene welding apparatus, a set of gas tanks, post drills, a grinder motor with extra wheels, a tap and die set, a heavy vise, and an assortment of small tools.

Annual Ball Is Held By Congregation

With a program presented by excellent entertainers, the congregation Ahavath Israel sponsored its sixth annual ball, Thanksgiving Eve at the municipal auditorium. In addition to the entertainment, Enoch Light and his orchestra, who had travelled from North Carolina for this appearance, provided music for dancing.

Mayor William F. Edelmuth, introduced by George Kramer one of the honorary chairmen, greeted the audience and officially opened the ball. The mayor then introduced the master of ceremonies, Henny Youngman.

The first number on the program was a tap speciality by Rosalind Gordon and this was followed by the presentation of Miss Sylvia Cyde who brought the charm of the opera singer to the stage. She chose the popular semi-classics including "L'Amour Toujours L'Amour" and "My Hero" and sang a Russian folk song for an encore. Robert Brinn, tenor soloist, held the audience with his sincere interpretations of the the Clown's Song from "I Pagliacci," the ancient Hebrew Chant of "My People" as well as the lighter music. Together Miss Cyde and Mr. Brinn sang "Will You Remember" from Sigmund Romberg's "Maytime." Both are trained opera singers, Miss Cyde appearing now with the Philadelphia Opera Company and Mr. Brinn sang last year on the "Metropolitan Opera Auditions of the Air" program. Miss Cyde was substituting for Imogene Carpenter.

Carl Rosini demonstrated the arts of magic using several members of the audience for his act. Billed as the whirlwind pianist from station WOR, Pauline Alpert, exhibited her digital mastery in further complicating the rhythm patterns of such pieces as "Begin the Beguine" and a medley of George Gershwin's tunes.

A refreshing tap dance act was performed by the young stars of the St. Moritz, New York city, Jack and June Blair. Both in solo and team, the dancing was expertly executed with humor between the taps. The comedian of the show was Johnny Burke, star of "Count Me In" and "Priorities." Entering in the garb of a World War I soldier, he proceeded to tell the woes of army life from the induction center to the front lines.

The formal program was brought to a close with the dance team of Robberts and White of the Rainbow Room. This team satirized the usual ball room dances. They danced as they see others dance and were well applauded by the audience.

The entertainment and music was furnished by the WOR artists bureau under the direction of Nat. M. Abramson. Jacques Roth conducted the orchestra for the entertainment.

Enoch Light and the orchestra played for dancing throughout the remainder of the evening, using among the many arrangements the song they recently introduced on the air, "Alladin's Lamp" and featuring Miss Leslie James as soloist.

There were approximately 1400 in attendance. Decorations were red, white and blue starred hunting with a large American flag as a back drop on the stage. Herman G. Rafalowsky was general chairman of the ball and he was assisted by the honorary chairmen, George Kramer and Mrs. Daniel Hoffman and the co-chairmen Abe Levy, Daniel Hoffman, Mrs. Nathan Parnett, Mrs. George Kramer and a large committee from the congregation.

Book Club Will Study Current Topics, Contemporary Books

A regular meeting of the Book Club was held at the home of Mrs. Harry Fertel. In view of the interesting material being offered as reading matter in connection with the world situation, it was decided to discontinue reading of the classics and plays and devote more time to contemporary fiction and non-fiction. The Book Club is also to make a study of propaganda.

The program for the year will, however, continue the reviews on music and art. "Victory Through Air Power" by Major DeSeversky will be the first book reviewed this season.

Several of the members have left Kingston because their husbands have joined the armed forces. They are Mrs. William Chazanof, Mrs. Gerald Sumber, Mrs. Sidney Lutzin, Mrs. Harold Nadel. Several new members were accepted and will attend the next meeting.

Mrs. Alex Parnett told of her trip to Hollywood and the home of Mary Pickford. She showed many pictures of "Pickfair" and spoke of other interesting people she met there.

Marriage Is Announced

Club Entertains For D.A.R. Regent

The Christopher Snyder Junior American Citizens' Club of Cottekill, which was organized October 28, held a meeting Tuesday and entertained the regent of Wiltwyck Chapter, Mrs. William Macgregor Mills, sponsor of the club. Mrs. Harvey Davis is the director and under her guidance the program was planned.

The opening ceremonies consisted of the parade, the salute to the flag, the pledge of allegiance, the singing of the national anthem and the club prayer. Miss Roberta Hendrickson acted as flag bearer and had as her honor guards, Arthur Freer and John Meyer. The president, Merle Thorpe, conducted the meeting. Miss Ethel Quick presented a health skit and the chairman of the historical committee, Roy Thorpe, read some information about local history. He told of the old Keator home built in 1770 at Keator's Corners which is now known as Binnewater. Jacob Snyder was the first settler in Cottekill and owned the first home, where a revolutionary soldier lived—is still standing. It is the old stone house known as the Christopher Snyder home.

Plans were made to collect scrap, make scrap books and airplane models, and to knit squares for afghans. Other officers of the club are: Morton Glazlay, vice president; Roy Thorpe, second vice president, and Miss Betty Raisner, secretary. The song leader is Arthur Davis.

City Passes Quiet Thanksgiving Day

No Accidents Reported; Churches Hold Services

The Second World War Thanksgiving Day in Kingston was not marred by any accidents or fires according to the records of the police and fire departments, and the day was observed without any unusual incidents.

During the day the sky was overcast but there was little rain except for a brief shower in the morning and another during the early evening.

Union Thanksgiving Day services were held in the city. Uptown, the churches united in a service at the Clinton Avenue Methodist Church, with the sermon delivered by the Rev. Arthur E. Oudemool of the First Reformed Church, while the downtown service was held in the Rondout Presbyterian Church, with the sermon by the Rev. Roscoe Strivings of the Trinity Methodist Church.

Following another old custom, the congregations of the Lutheran Church of the Redeemer and Trinity Lutheran Church held union services in the Wurts street church, while in St. Mary's Church a solemn high Mass was celebrated. This service was sponsored by the Ulster county union of Holy Name Societies.

The colored churches of the city united in a union service in St. Mark's A.M.E. Zion Church on Foxhall avenue.

During the afternoon and evening there were special attractions shown in the local theatres, and at night a basketball game was staged in the municipal auditorium.

ASHOKAN

Ashokan, Nov. 27—A surprise party was given for Miss Joyce Winne of the village with a wedding shower. Miss Winne is to be married next Sunday in the church at a candle light service by the pastor of the church, the Rev. Robert B. Guice.

Mrs. VanKleeck and children have moved in the residence formerly owned by the late Virgil Merrihew, a brother-in-law, Mrs. Van Kleeck has purchased the home.

The local school had a party for the students Wednesday afternoon before the Thanksgiving vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. Mearl Greene were dinner guests the home of the Rev. and Mrs. Robert Guice of the Methodist parsonage Thanksgiving day. Mr. and Mrs. Greene are cousins of Mrs. Guice.

Union Thanksgiving Services at Ellenville

There was a good attendance at the union Thanksgiving services held in the Ellenville Methodist Church Thursday morning, in which congregations of the four Protestant churches joined.

The sermon was by the Rev. A. F. Kellenbarth of Christ Lutheran Church. Assisting in the service was the Rev. Donald H. Spencer of the Methodist Church, the Rev. George R. Hiatt of St. John's Episcopal Church, the Rev. Lloyd W. Bell of the Reformed Church and the Rev. William Crombie, retired minister of the Reformed Church.

Good Taste Today

By Emily Post

PROPRIETY WAITS UPON GOOD SENSE

As an example of a wrong rule serving a right purpose, the following letter is worthy of note: "We would very much like your opinion of this situation: Two high school boys walked home from a church party with a high school girl and when they arrived at her home, found it dark. The girl was afraid to go in alone and be by herself until her parents arrived. So the boys stayed until her parents returned, for which the latter seemed grateful. At least they gave no impression that they did not think it the proper thing for the boys to have done. But one of the boy's mothers is terribly upset about the whole thing and says this is just the way bad reputations start."

In my opinion the boys were right. In this instance they would have been cruel (and self-conscious prigs besides) to have left her in the empty house alone. As it happened, the fact that they were two made each a chaperon for the other. The mother who is upset might have something to be upset about if it were this girl's regular habit to invite boys in when her parents are out; but to criticize this one occurence is almost as unreasonable as it would be to criticize a man for putting his arm around a woman whom he is trying to rescue from a burning building.

Big Table Cloths Are "Out"

Dear Mrs. Post: I have heard it said recently that damask table cloths are "out"; that they are using only doilies, runners and lace cloths. Is this true?

Answer: They are not "out" but merely seen less often than formerly, because putting a fresh cloth on for every meal means a very big laundry bill as well as a large supply of table cloths. Those who have many of them and have laundresses to keep them beautifully laundered, still use them. In other words, nothing takes the place of a damask cloth at dinner. Just as nothing takes the place of a man's white tie and tails. But the cloth and the tails are both becoming very scarce—just now.

Sending Formal Answer

Dear Mrs. Post: A and B were discussing replies to formal invitations. A contends that the envelope of reply to a wedding or formal dinner invitation should be addressed to the hostess only; B says the envelope should be addressed to both the host and hostess. Which is correct? Your etiquette book says "reply in the same form" but does not mention the address on the envelope.

Answer: The envelope of a third person answer to a third person invitation should be addressed to the name, or names, appearing at the top of the invitation. Informal notes of acceptance are sent to whoever signed the note of invitation.

Are you trying to make plans to be married to a man in the service? If you are, you'll be glad to know that you can get a reprint of Mrs. Post's recent article "Furlough Wedding Details" if you send your request with a three-cent stamped self-addressed envelope to Mrs. Post, in care of Kingston Daily Freeman, P. O. Box 150, Times Square Station, New York.

Cheesed Rolls Coffee or Tea

Turkey Regal

(Combines Appetizing Leftovers)
1 cup diced cooked turkey
1 cup stuffing (any kind)
1 cup mashed white potatoes
½ cup cooked peas, or carrots or spinach
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 tablespoon minced onions
2 tablespoons chopped green pepper (optional)
½ cup milk
1 cup reheated giblet gravy

Mix together turkey, stuffing, potatoes, peas and seasonings. Add milk and lightly press into buttered mold. Bake 20 minutes in moderate oven in pan hot water. Unmold onto heated platter and cover with gravy.

Fruitberry Salad

1 cup diced grapefruit
1 cup diced or sliced oranges
1 cup cubed cranberry jelly or thick sauce
¼ cup broken nuts
½ cup raisins
½ cup salad dressing
1 teaspoon lemon juice
⅛ teaspoon salt

Lightly mix and chill ingredients. Pass in a bowl lined with crisp cabbage, lettuce or other salad greens.

Cheese Rolls

(Cleans Up The Cheese Dish)
½ cup cheese (mixed or one kind)
⅛ teaspoon garlic salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
2 olives, finely chopped
3 tablespoons butter
1 tablespoon salad dressing or mayonnaise
6 rolls, halved

Mix cheese and seasonings and spread on cut sides of rolls. Arrange in shallow pan and bake or broil until brown.

Hot toast spread with honey lightly spiced with cinnamon and cloves gives an up-to-date breakfast or luncheon dish: Return the toast to oven or broiler for a minute after it has been honey spread, for best results.

Nurse Stays With Patient

Saddle Rock, N. Y., Nov. 27 (AP) Volunteer firemen entered a burning house and saw two figures dimmed by thick smoke. A fireman reached for the nearest, Estelle Qualake, a nurse, but she refused help. "I'll not budge until my patient is moved!" she cried and pointed to Mrs. Charles Jackson, 62. Firemen carried the ailing woman down the ladder, and the nurse followed on her own power. Miss Qualake suffered smoke poisoning.

Coffee Rationing Goes Into Effect Midnight Saturday

At midnight on Saturday the coffee rationing to consumers will go into effect after a week's freezing of sales and on Sunday, November 29, the consumer will be permitted to purchase coffee under rationing, as arranged by the O.P.A.

The first ration will be one pound to a person and will have to last from November 29, 1942, through January 3, 1943, and is procurable by presenting the No. 27 stamp from the War Ration Book No. 1, which is known commonly as the "sugar book."

No person under 15 years of age will be permitted to use the coffee stamp for coffee rationing and the removal of that stamp from the sugar book of a person under the prescribed age is a ration violation and is punishable by a severe penalty. Sugar ration books will be examined in the near future to ascertain if the coffee stamp, No. 27, has been removed from the books of those under 15 years of age.

Anderson Stars as Recs Trim Jewels; Middies Win Grid Title

Anderson Registers 12 Points; Paris High in Contest With 13; Shaback Missing

The veteran of many professional basketball games, Hagen Anderson again proved to Kingston court fans that he's the difference of victory or defeat for the Recreation basketball club. Last night at the municipal auditorium it was Anderson again who sparked the team to a close 39 to 32 triumph over the New York Jewels of the American League. It was Kingston's second straight decision and Anderson's second straight role as the Mr. Big.

Playing an important role in his guard position, Anderson not only continued his great aggressive play on the defense but also was the shooting star for the Recs with 12 points, 10 coming from deuces. Ace Goldstein followed Andy with 10. "Red" Paris of the Jewels was high scorer in the contest with 13 markers.

Harlem Next Wednesday

The outstanding Harlem Yankees will be the attraction at the Broadway boards next Wednesday night. Basketball fans might remember the Yankees when they appeared here last year and a near riot nearly ensued before more calm minds moved in to settle the dispute. Fans also are requested to keep in mind Wednesday, December 9, when the West Point Field Artillery basketballers will play the Recs in a special U.S.O. benefit game.

Last night's victory for Kingston came in the last five minutes of the fracas with Hagen Anderson playing the big part in the drive. With the score knotted twice during the third and final stanza, 26-26 and 31-31, Jim Naughton, ace Kingston forward, dropped in a layup. After that the Recs dominated the play and began to move away from the Jewels in rather easy style. Howie Bollerman drilled in two fouls and Anderson soared one from half way out. Ace Goldstein finished the scoring with two more fouls.

Kingston went to town in the first session and finished on the long end of a 17 to 14 score. Anderson and Naughton were the big guns for Kingston with some fine shooting and excellent floor play. Mac Kinsbrunner and Peters highlighted the Jewels' drive.

The Jewels started to creep up on the Recreations in the second period when Paris got going. He tossed in a pair of two-pointers and three foul shots. Kinsbrunner converted a foul reducing Kingston's lead to 23-22. Paris' foul shots made it 24-23 for New York. Anderson and Paris scored again before the final quarter ended with the Jewels out in front by 26 to 25.

Tempers Flare

Kingston forged to a 31 to 27 lead in the early part of the final quarter when things began to get a little hot between Herb Gershon and Paris. However, the Recs continued to peck away and after the Jewels had tied it at 31 all, the local eagers proved to be the top team with a scoring attack of their own. Hagen Anderson stepped in to guard Paris when he and Gershon started to mix it up. Anderson's presence had more value than Gershon and it wasn't long before the redhead bounced back into the backseat.

Kingston gained last night's triumph without the services of Nick Shaback, high scoring forward who was unable to get to Kingston. Gershon, usually a tough scorer to contend with, was "off" last night. Perhaps he missed his other half of the combination.

Emerick's Ladies' Jottings

The best of luck is extended to Jack Martin in his new venture of running the well-known Homer Emerick's Recreation bowling alleys. However, it isn't going to be all luck for Jack, but as he realizes, a great amount of hard work. Jack seems capable of it as was seen by the new attractive alley placards that designated the name of the team that was to bowl on each alley for the Emerick's Ladies' League Tuesday night. . . . The national headquarters of the Women's International Bowling Association has asked each city association to raise the sum of $1.50 per member to buy a bomber for Uncle Sam. In accordance with the National W. I. B. C. the local league has decided to follow the plan of other cities and for Tuesday, December 2, for the seventh frame in each of the three games rolled on that night, the bowler will be penalized five cents for each pin that remains standing after the first roll of that frame has been rolled for each of the bowler's three games. This idea is in the memory of the anniversary of December 7 when Pearl Harbor was raided by the treacherous little men of Togo. The plan is to buy a bomber and help to make those Nips even smaller.

Now for some interesting notes of the matches Tuesday night . . . Nan Brodhead of Williams Lake had a nifty 210 single and wound up with a 470 series. Nice bowling, Nan. Evelyn Provenzano had a 494 high series for Williams Lake, who swept three games from Schwenks. The winners posted a 2134 series . . . A. Markle rolled 436 and a 156 solo. The Mayorettes really clicked Tuesday night as they took two games from Becks. Reta Frederick, who has been experiencing a little tough luck all season, finally did herself honor by slamming out a neat 203 single and a 532. Nice bowling, Reta, and that congratulation comes from this sports department . . . After a three-weeks' vacation in California, Evelyn Jones returned to action Tuesday and proceeded to convert the 5-8-10. Captain Chris Wilson of Becks made the 2-5-8-7 and also posted 160 and a 458 series. Adelaide Ashley converted the 6-10 split . . . Elstons took two from the league-leading Alpines as Cora Emerick rolled 195 and 482. Kay Williams made the 4-5-9-7 and Marg Williams the 5-10. Elstons have started to move so other teams in the league had better be on the alert for a sudden break into the top position by this club. For Rudie's Alpines, Dot Fleming had 489 and Mary Myers 183. Etta Ginder seems to have a new kick-back ball. They never count in the scores, do they Etta? . . . The Minasians took two from Reinas as Elsa Relyea had a 425 including the 2-5-8-6 split and a four. V. Carpenelli made the 2-3-5-10. R. Hyatt had the 2-5-10 and Martha Minasian a 159 high single. Alyce Riseley for Reinas made the 5-8-10 and 5-7.

Ertels took two from Standards as Mary Callahan had high series and Gert Ertel had a 193 high single for the winners. Rose Chamberland's 141 and 420 all for the losers took honors. Phelan & Cahill captained two from the Kingston Coal. Phil Gehringer had a neat 172 single and 459 triple for the winners. C. Brennan had 385 series as J. Ward rolled 206 high single.

Friend Becomes Foe

East Lansing, Mich. (AP)—The tables will be turned when Chet Aubuchon returns to the campus this winter. Chet, who won national recognition in basketball here as a junior, has joined the Navy and is headed for a berth on the Great Lakes Naval Training Station team. The Bluejackets will play two games with Michigan State College this winter, so it will be up to the Spartans to stop their former captain. Last winter, Aubuchon was one of the main reasons for State slipping a 33-31 defeat to the sailors.

Gas Masks Worn

Chanute Field, Ill. (AP)—Basketball players with gas masks! It really happened here recently in a pair of exhibition games at the Post. The masks were worn to add interest to the inter-squadron cage program and to emphasize the over-all scope of the chemical warfare training program at the field. Officials of the game were exempt only because no one could figure out a way for them to blow whistles while encased in the headgears.

Texas Longhorns to Play In Dallas Cotton Bowl

Bruce Smith Scores 23 Points as Great Lakes Rout Northwestern by 48-0 Score

By HAROLD CLAASSEN

New York, Nov. 27 (AP)—Athletic directors and football coaches, whose players have received all the bumps and bruises while building glittering records, will get the pushing and shoving themselves this week as bowl promotors seek January 1 combatants.

Only on the campus of Texas University will everything be serene. The Longhorn players voted to compete in the Cotton Bowl yesterday even before taking their showers after polishing off Texas A. & M., 12 to 6, on a touchdown by Jackie Fields just 46 seconds before the game's end.

But at Tulsa University the athletes hurried right out after their 40 to 7 victory over Arkansas—their tenth of the year without a tie or defeat—to post markers which would direct the mailman, telegraph messenger or personal bowl emissary to the home of Coach Henry Frnka.

Duke Is Ousted

They were hopeful of staging a bowl promoters convention at William & Mary College, too, the Indians downing Richmond yesterday, 10 to 0, to replace Duke as the Southern Conference champion.

Of course, much of the actual bowl business must be delayed until after Saturday's games in which unbeaten Georgia Tech has an important engagement with Georgia and all-winning Boston College mixes with a Holy Cross eleven that doesn't believe the Eagles have been voted the best team in the country.

That doesn't include Saturday's meeting between Army and Navy which annually would fill the largest bowl but this year has been cut down to finger-bowl size by President Roosevelt's orders.

Texas' faculty still must approve the school's participation in the Dallas Bowl but the Southwest Conference champions in the past have had no difficulty getting such permission and none is expected this year.

No announcement was made of a possible Longhorn opponent although Missouri, which yesterday trimmed Kansas, 42 to 13, to retain the Big Six title, Tennessee, Alabama and possibly Georgia have been mentioned.

One of the latter trio also might furnish the opposition for Boston College in the Sugar Bowl. The Eagles haven't been formally announced as New Orleans visitors during the holiday season but have been linked with the game since early this month.

Tulsa is another Sugar Bowl possibility and along with William & Mary and Penn State also has received unofficial consideration for the Miami Orange Bowl affair.

Georgia Tech, if it downs Georgia Saturday, is supposed to have the inside track to the Rose Bowl, where the host team may not be decided until December 12. However, if Washington State downs Washington Saturday it will take a lot of blocking and tackling to remove the Cougars from the front rank.

In other games yesterday Louisiana State spurted in the final period for an 18 to 6 verdict over Tulane; Virginia Polytech won its first game in five years from Virginia Military, 20 to 6; and Penn walloped Cornell, 34 to 7.

Sailors Rout Wildcats

The Great Lakes Sailors, unscored upon since October 24, officially closed Northwestern's season, 48 to 0, with Bruce Smith, once of Minnesota, getting 23 points, and Colgate ruined Brown's appetite for the eleventh straight year, 13 to 0.

Out in the Rocky mountain sector Colorado moved alongside Utah on the Big Seven throne by downing Denver, 31 to 6, for its fifth loop win. The Utes stepped outside their own circuit for a 13 to 6 verdict over Idaho.

Blue Lightning

Durham, N. C. (AP)—The Blue Devils of Duke University claimed the fastest back in action this season. He is Moffat Storer, who has dashed 100 yards in 9.6 seconds.

Army 'll' Arrives In Annapolis for Classic Saturday

Navy Coach Doesn't See Much Chance for His Club; 15,000 Fans to See Game

By Sid Feder

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 27 (AP)—Army comes to town today for the football game with Navy tomorrow, and the local folks are going to discover that the cadets are human after all.

This no doubt may come as a surprise, inasmuch as some of the boys hereabouts have been building this Army team up into almost a myth, with a running attack like a set of tanks, a line like so many trench mortars and an aerial offense no weaker than a formation of flying fortresses.

And the Navy coaches haven't knocked down the impression to any extent, either, as they readied their middle gridders for the first service scramble in the Naval Academy's backyard since the gay nineties.

This is the tussle President Roosevelt shifted to Tiny Thompson Stadium from Philadelphia's Mammoth 100,000-seat municipal soupbowl because of war-time transportation difficulties. The Navy estimates no more than 15,000 cash customers will be on hand for the vestpocket edition of the usual super-duper.

Navy Head Coach Billick Welchel comes right out in meeting to report that his fellows are "completely outclassed" and don't have much chance against the cadet steamroller.

Others of the coaching staff come close to being wide-eyed when they tell you about Army's grinding ground game.

Yet, the Middies, themselves winding up their drill-work yesterday in a "semi" secret practice that reporters were permitted to watch until they started to practice, were so full of zip and zing they don't look as if they'd even heard of Army.

At least, they realize they're tangling with just 11 other football players, despite the fact Army was pretty close to 1 to 3 favorite in the betting to win its first service shindig since 1938.

Army won't feel too much out of place during the 24 hours or so it must spend in this traditionally sailor section. Navy invited the cadets to share the academy but Coach Earl Blaik figured his boys would feel more at home with soldier surroundings, so they'll park at Fort Meade, about 15 miles down the road.

Middletown Downs Port Jervis High; Maroons Lose, 6-0

Port Is Beaten, 14 to 12 in Season's Final; Santorine Scores T.D. in Newburgh Win

The drooping and very battered curtain of Kingston High School's football schedule was finally brought down Thursday afternoon in Newburgh when the local gridders suffered another loss but in doing so played their best game of the current season. The Goldbacks of N. F. A. scored a touchdown early in the first period and then held on to a slim 6 to 0 lead for the rest of the contest.

Meanwhile, Middletown again captured the DUSO League gridiron title by defeating Port Jervis by 14 to 12. A crowd of 4,000 saw the Middies grab the title again.

Although it was Turkey Day yesterday Newburgh's vaunted Goldbacks thought they would have "chicken" when Kingston trotted on the field but the gallant stands displayed by the Maroons won them a moral victory in the closing contest of the 1942 season which already had been declared one of the poorest in many a moon.

"Sonny" Santorine, the No. 1 backfield ace for Coach Bill Elder's Newburgh Free Academy team, scored the only touchdown in the opening period. After that both teams tried desperately to push over scores but had to be content with the early period touchdown. The final period was a kicking duel between Captain and "Jiggs" McLaughlin of the Maroons and Santorine of Newburgh.

In the first period Johnny Welch intercepted a Kingston pass and landed on the Maroon's 37 where Newburgh immediately set up a scoring attack. Santorine hit the line and picked up about seven yards to the 30. Tony Maserino again tore at the center of the line and gained to the 28. Santorine then took the ball on a half delayed buck through the line, sliced his stride to the side and raced 28 yards for a touchdown. The extra point try was missed.

In the second period Newburgh blasted its way to Kingston's five but a holding penalty bottled up that rally. On the kick-off in the second half, Newburgh recovered a Maroon fumble on the 20 but Coach Ted Conwicke's surprising line failed to yield any ground and another expected rally went to the winds.

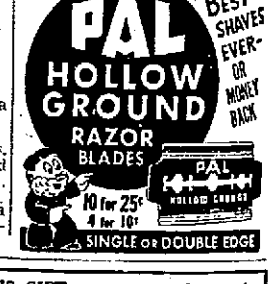

Newburgh's victory enabled them to gain second place in the final standing of the DUSO League.

The standings follow:

Sports Shorts

Washington's Nats and the Philadelphia Athletics may have finished seventh and eighth in the American League this past season but every other club in the circuit will testify the Nats and A's were tough outfits when it came to winning the close ones.

Between them, these clubs won a total of 53 games by a single run with Washington winning 24 and losing 21 and the Athletics winning 29 and losing 26. Their record in games won by a single marker was surpassed in 1942 only by Cleveland and Boston, each with 30 one-run victories. Cleveland lost 18 and Boston lost 23.

The batting averages of Washington hitters took a sharp upward swing September 19 and 20 as a result of a two-day hitting feast at the expense of Philadelphia pitchers. The Nats, on those two days, took two games from the Athletics—by identical scores of 11-9—and in the contests made a total of 29 hits.

Joe Di Maggio of the New York Yankees didn't make five hits in one game throughout the 1942 American League season, yet he had two of the biggest days any batter had all season in the total bases department. On April 22 Jolting Joe had a homer and two triples in four trips to the plate and on May 5 he hit for 11 total bases on two home runs and a triple in five appearances.

Boston's Ted Williams and New York's Joe Di Maggio, two of the American League's greatest hitters, continue to stage a fine duel in the runs-batted-in department. Williams' 137 this past season gave him a total of 515 for the past four years as against Di Maggio's 501 total for the same period. Joe batted in 114 runs in 1942. Ted's first year in the majors was 1939, when he batted in 145 runs as against Joe's 129. Di Maggio, 1940, outdid Ted 133 to 113, and edged him out in this department in 1941, driving in 125 runs to Ted's 120.

Biggest single scoring inning of the 1942 season was hung up by the New York Yankees on September 7 against Philadelphia. The Yanks made 10 runs in the sixth inning as they downed the Athletics 11 to 2.

Strikeout performances by American League hurlers in 1942 were under those of 1941, when the top fanning job was turned in by little Tommy Bridges of Detroit as he whiffed 14 Philadelphia batters in 7 2/3 innings on June 10. This past season Oscar Judd, Boston, Buck Newsom, then of Washington, Hal Newhouser of Detroit and Hank Borowy of New York each turned in 10 strikeouts in one game.

Buddy Hassett, first baseman acquired by the New York Yankees a year ago from Boston of the National League, enjoyed a boom year—comparatively at least—in home runs this past season, when he made five for the Yankees. In his previous six years in the majors he had made only seven, his best homer year before 1942 being his first year in the majors, when he hit three for Brooklyn.

The St. Louis Browns encountered the "82 jinx" again this past season, when the club scored that number of victories to equal the marks set by the Browns of 1925 and 1928, when the club finished in the same spot as it did this past season, third place. Only two other St. Louis Browns teams ever finished with more wins for a season—the 1908 fourth place team winning 83 and the 1922 second-placers winning 93.

Joe Di Maggio of the New York Yankees couldn't get past number "13" this past American League season in his drive to equal or better his best previous three-base hit total of 15, which he made in his first year in the majors, 1936, and equalled in 1937. The Yankee belter had his 13th triple with almost a month of the 1942 season to go, but couldn't get another. The league record is 26, set by Joe Jackson in 1912 and equalled two years later by Sam Crawford.

Leading the American League in batting for the 1941 and 1942 season, Ted Williams of Boston's Red Sox hit the average figure for American League batting champions "on the head." In 1941 Ted won the title with a .406 average, 25 points above the average for the winners of this crown since the league's first season, 1901. This past season his winning .356 average was 25 points below the average winning performance.

High Hoop Scoring

East Lansing, Mich. (AP)—Speaking of basketball, Michigan State College scoring hit an all-time high last year. The Spartans piled up 833 points, 168 points more than any other season on record. Opponents rolled up 721 points, which was 129 more than the Spartans' defense had ever before yielded.

Armless Tom Powell was declared champion gardener of the district at the annual horticultural show in Denham, England.

Lee Will Have Weight Advantage of About 16 Pounds; Fight in Garden Ring

New York, Nov. 27 (AP)—Lee Savold, whose left hook broke the noses of Billy Conn, Lou Nova and Tami Mauriello, is the 2 to 1 underdog tonight in the 10-round bout at Madison Square Garden in which Jimmy Bivins of Cleveland makes his eastern debut.

Bivins, who lets his opponents decide whether the bout will be a boxing or a slugging match, has been fighting since he was a flyweight and now scales a pound or two over the light-heavyweight limit.

His best weapon is said to be a left hook, potent enough to have floored Bob Pastor, Gus Lesnevich, Mauriello and Billy Soose. In addition, he is rated above the average in body punching.

Savold will have a weight pull of approximately 16 pounds and will be making his first New York appearance since losing to Mauriello on Oct. 30. Tami was to have met Bivins tonight but his Savold-broken nose still hasn't healed.

Savold, a former Iowan who now calls Paterson, N. J., his home, knocked out Jimmy Kapovich in Baltimore less than two weeks ago, and has been in training at Greenwood Lake, N. J. since then.

Tonight's winner is scheduled to be paired with the victor of the Dec. 11 bout between Nova, whom Savold defeated during the summer, and Mauriello. That fight tentatively is set for Jan. 8.

The Island of Sark

The English channel island of Sark is 22 miles off the French coast and 60 miles from England. It is over three miles long and a mile and a half wide, with 35 miles of coast, rocky and rough, backed by cliffs some of which rise 300 feet out of the sea, with many smugglers' caves. The upland is reached from the one cliff-walled harbor through a tunnel 450 feet long. The tide sometimes drops 42 feet, leaving the harbor dry. The shilling tax on the 25,000 annual visitors normally provided for government and public works, supplemented by a small land and liquor tax. The 40 farms provided for in the Elizabethan charter still pass from father to oldest son; they cannot be divided. The cottages of the farmers are of granite quarried on the island. They grow grain and vegetables and graze the famous Guernsey cattle, tethered to economize pasture. The fishing fleet is motorized.

In times of peace the bank was open one day a week. Parliament met in the school house, where English and modern French were taught.

How to cut the cost of Heating Your Home

AMERICA'S HOME HEATING EXPERT

Heating Domestic Hot Water

MANY heating plants have attachments for heating domestic hot water during the heating season. This is done by heat-exchangers. There are two types. Those that are installed inside the fire box or combustion chamber and those that are installed between the heating plant and the hot water storage tank.

For those installed inside the firebox, the correct location for the exchangers or hot water coil, as they are commonly known is above the fuel bed. It is not good practice to have the heat exchanger installed so that it protrudes into the fuel bed. Unfortunately this is a common installation — generally causing trouble in the form of spotty fires, clinkers and dirty firebed conditions. With the exchangers in contact with the red hot coals, over-heated water may result, with the possibility of scalding. Sometimes a water hammer or pounding is caused with such an installation. These are some of the most common annoyances traceable to this method of heating water. Another fault is a coil prevents a good firebed. It is impossible to work the fire around the coil. A heavy drain of water will chill the coal lying adjacent to the coil or exchanger, lowering its temperature below the ignition point, resulting in unignited, dead coal, waste fuel and general dissatisfaction. In time this will mean no hot water and a complaint of no heat in the living quarters. At other times, the coal lying adjacent to the exchanger will burn to an ash. This ash will not shake down as it adheres to the pipe and has to be disposed of by hand. This also will result in insufficient hot water and a chronic complaint of no heat in the living quarters.

In the case of the outside heat-exchanger that is located between the heating plant and the water storage tank, the only complaint one is liable to have is the lack of sufficient hot water. To remedy this complaint, it will only be necessary to take off the cover plate and clean out any sediment that has gathered around the heating coils. These must be kept clean at all times for best results.

For economic and trouble free heating of domestic hot water, install a modern tank heater. These up-to-date water heaters are vastly improved over the old fashioned "pot stoves." It is no longer necessary to build frequent fires and nurse the old "Bucket-a-Day" heater along. Today you can enjoy oceans of automatically heated water at a much lower cost than ever before. These heaters are dust tight, having incorporated the magazine principle of coal feed, automatic control of dampers greatly minimizing overheated and eliminating dirty water as well as consuming the cheaper priced coal, thus resulting in economical hot water. Most fuel merchants can acquaint you with the operation of these modern coal burning water heaters. It will pay you to investigate. (22)

Evacuation of Japanese From Coast Discussed

Service Clubs Hear the Rev. John Thomas Tell First Hand of Jap Evacuation Here

In an illuminating talk before a joint luncheon-meeting of the Rotary, Kiwanis and Lions service clubs held Wednesday at the Governor Clinton, the Rev. John Thomas of the Department of Cities of the North Baptist Conference discussed the evacuation of the Japanese from the Pacific coast states.

President William O'Reilly of Rotary welcomed the service club members and guests.

The speaker, who was introduced by the Rev. Victor H. Kane of the Albany Avenue Baptist Church, outlined the manifold problems that confronted the authorities in the big task of evacuation. The members comprising the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the military authorities, whose task it was to remove some 120,000 Japanese, were highly praised by the Rev. Mr. Thomas for their thoroughness and humaneness.

Of this large number approximately 71,000 are United States citizens and reliable sources estimate that 75 per cent of these citizens were loyal.

The transferring of these people to desert lands and Indian reservations inland caused many hardships, which were beyond the control of the authorities. Taking with them only what they could carry, resulted in losses as high as 65 per cent of personal property. Exploitation was the cause of this huge percentage.

The usefulness of 8,000 of these loyal aliens was shown in the help given in harvesting crops in states, which at the time of evacuation put up a big howl against their centering there.

The problem of placing the loyal Japanese citizens into the network of our civilization was now being undertaken by the authorities. The determination between loyal and disloyal was made by the F.B.I. and the army and navy authorities. This work is being carried out with good results.

Colleges for the people are responding, he said, to the general satisfaction of all.

Many of the Japanese have embraced christianity.

If steps were not taken now with an eye to their future, these American citizens, who would not be accepted in any other country would be adrift. Shunted back and forth on a ship, it would be comparable to Nazi treatment of Jews.

In concluding his interesting message, he lauded the efforts of the authorities, who in the time of stress, was giving priority to the problems of a minority.

Industrial Accidents Gain

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 27 (AP)—A 40 per cent jump in New York factory accidents the first half of 1942 over the same period last year is attributed to greatly increased employment in war plants. The State Labor Department, which discloses a 20 per cent gain in all industrial accidents, reports 51,122 compensated accidents this year, 10,000 more than from January to July, 1941.

More than 3,000 persons, mostly Mexicans and including many high-ranking government and political leaders, assembled in Mexico City to pay homage to Spain's last "Republican" President, Manuel Azana, on the second anniversary of his death.

Hens' Output Increases

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 27 (AP)—New York hens' war effort: Increasing egg production approximately three and a half per cent the first 10 months of 1942 the same 1941 period and jumped their October output nearly 10 per cent over October last year. During the month 11,333,000 hens laid 103,000,000 eggs compared with 103,000,000 eggs laid by 10,808,000 biddies in October, 1941, the State Agricultural Statistical Service reports.

Because so many men are busy and transportation is reduced during the war, Circuit Courts in Eire have dispensed with juries in civil cases and reduced the number of jurors in criminal cases from 12 to seven.

More Volunteers Sought By 'Spotters' ' Service

One thousand five hundred men and women volunteer "spotters" scattered throughout Ulster county laid greater emphasis on their duties to the Aircraft Warning Service of the First Fighter Command than on Thanksgiving dinners.

The only disruption in terms of time took place in their immediate homes where dinner appointments and receptions had to be arranged to suit the convenience of members of families who were on "spotter" service, but the logs in the 18 observation posts in Ulster county show a schedule kept intact by the men and women volunteer observers.

Ulster's skylanes have been unusually active in recent weeks. "Spotters" were kept continually busy reporting planes in flight crossing their observation posts which called for a greater degree of alertness since the filter board located at "address unknown" expects the "spotters" report on planes crossing his post.

Based on this report, the filter board will immediately know if an "unscheduled plane" is in the air and its exact location. Within three minutes, powerful interceptor planes will crowd the "marauder" to a landing, as has already been the case recently, in which an unauthorized aerial photographer was involved.

The wee hours of the "spotters" shift are filled with thrills and mingled with uncertainties and suspense. It is then that he can "hear" but not "see". He knows that anything "may happen" and therefore feels his responsibility keener.

Men in search of moments filled with tenseness are invited to join the "spotter" service of the First Fighter Command and choose the "wee-hours" shift. Men and women willing to give two hours a week to serve their county in the "first line" of home defense, are asked to contact their local civilian defense office and ask for a "spotter" job or write to P. O. Box 58 in Kingston.

November Rainfall Heavy

Rain that started falling Monday night and continued almost uninterruptedly through until Wednesday caused a precipitation of 2.31 inches in Kingston, according to the city engineer's records. There was also a trace of rain in the city on Thanksgiving Day when there were two brief showers. The total rainfall so far this month as recorded by the rain gauge on the roof of the city hall was 4.12 inches. Thursday was cloudy all day, with a brief shower of rain in the morning and another during the early evening. Temperatures on the holiday ranged from 46 to 52 degrees.
